SEATTLE REVIVES THE EXTREMELY GENEROUS AND ODD OLD INDIAN "POTLATCH," WHERE THE HOSPITABLE HOST GIVES AWAY EVERYTHING HE OWNS TO WIN HONOR.

THE ORIENTAL LEGENDARY DRESS OF THE CHILKAT DANCERS

SEATTLE is preparing to celebrate the discovery of Puget Sound by the most picturesque carnival ever held.

Seattle will reproduce an old Indian potlatch, that incomparably picturesque ceremony of the Siwash Indians, who once occupied the land where Seattle now stands.

The city will "make potlatch" for the whole world in the week of July 17-22.

A potlatch was an entertainment at which an Indian gave away all his property to his neighbors. Seattle will copy this feature in a modified form, but all the dancing, music and feasting that accompanied the ancient potlatch will be reproduced on a splendid scale. There are still plenty of Indians in Alaska and other parts of the Northwest who know all about potlatches, and their services will be called upon.

By giving a potlatch an Indian acquired a glory like that of a fierce Muhammedan, who dies fighting for his religion.

The Siwash chief of fifty years ago was a man who thought much of the opinion held of him by his fellowman. The idea of the potlatch was the deprivation of the giver of everything which the world holds worth while.

It would puzzle even a financier of to-day to give away all of his wealth more than once or twice, and yet some of these old chiefs used to give away their wealth—all of it—two and three times.

After each potlatch they would start in anew to accumulate enough of the Indian wealth to give another potlatch—just that and nothing more. That was all they lived for—all they cared for—the "becht o' hospitality," as the Scotch phrase has it.

There was once an ancient Indian—the last of the spendthrifts—by the name of Chow-itch-hoots, who "made potlatch" five times. He was killed immediately after the last by one of his brothers-in-law.

The Siwash, who in his early youth found himself filled with the ambition to become one of the great men among the tribes of his people began at once to hoard every possible article of value that he could lay his hands upon. He hunted and fished as diligently as his nature would allow. He marketed his spoil with the traders and at the agency stores and procured in exchange bottles of perfumery, blankets, clay pipes, guns and ammunition, and as the time for the fulfillment of his ambition grew near, he purchased tea, flour, sugar, bacon and other perishable luxuries.

But mostly he sought in his own canoe or worked for his share with others for whale oil, salmon to dry, berries to preserve in the Indian way and the other staples of the food supply of his people, for the Siwash is a great eater, and when he came to a potlatch he came after a period of abstemiousness that he might do justice to the viands of his host.

The visitors stayed until they had eaten all their host's provisions. At night there was "klo qualile," meaning "fine time." There was dancing by the men, singing by the women and the eternal tom-toms and drums of the youth of the tribes.

The bucks danced "the dance of the whale," going through all the motions of killing, carving and eating the delicious whale. Sometimes they had the "killing dance," if they were going on the warpath, but more often they had love songs and dances.

When the visitors departed they left their generous host without even a shirt.

The last great potlatch was given about thirty years ago by old Chief Mason, of the Quinalt tribe, a short distance north of the present Summer resort of Moclips, in the Pacific coast of the State of Washington

Down On the East Side the Purling Brooks That Children Ought to Play in Are Waters Rushing from a Hydrant Turned On by Some Kindly Policeman.

"Maggie's Goin' to Be a Loidy!"

Just Like a Story in a Book Was What Followed the East Side "Little Mother's" Heroic Rescue of Billy the Baby, Pickles the Dog and Tessie the Doll.

NOW and then one reads a touching little story that ends somewhat like this—"and then the rich and lonely lady took little Maggie and said: 'How would you like to be my own little daughter and be a millionairess when you grow up?' 'Fine,' said Maggie, and so she became a little millionairess."

Down on the east side of New York the children are pied knee deep. Up on Fifth Avenue you can scarcely see a child. Down on the East Side the purling brooks that children ought to play in are waters rushing from a hydrant turned on by some kindly policeman. Along the curb the little mothers of the East Side sit, while their charges dabble in the muddy stream. On the East Side the wooded terraces and gardens stretch straight up from baking sidewalk to baked roof. They are the iron fire escapes and on them the children of the East Side play perilously.

Little Maggie O'Hara sat on her own particular garden seven flights above the street on Elizabeth street one day last week. With her was little Billy, her brother, and Pickles, a black dog of unknown origin, also a small ragged doll which was little Billy's dearest possession.

Little Maggie's mother had died last year and her father had brought home a new mother. Little Maggie didn't like her new mother at all. She wanted to get rid of "Pickles" and she was always talking about the nuisance of "kids that ain't yer own."

So little Maggie sat on her fire escape and looked at the other children, who were happy in having real mothers, splashing in the hydrant stream below.

"Gee!" said little Billy. "Want to get down." He started up. Dangling perilously over the side went the doll. After the doll went Pickles. And after Pickles went Billy. Little Maggie, waking up suddenly, made a grab for Billy, just got him, and there the four hung; the dog with the doll in his teeth, Billy hanging on to the dog, and Maggie holding on to all of them.

"Gee!" said Maggie. "How am I going to get them up?" Her arms begun to get very numb. Billy hung on like grim death to the animate link between him and the precious doll.

Mrs. William P. Lansing, who lives on a big ranch some miles out of Tacoma, in the State of Washington, and who is a childless widow with much money, had come to New York. Out in Tacoma they have no East Side, and Mrs. Lansing, wanting to see this cauldron of life, had driven down. She arrived opposite the fire escape just as Maggie, screaming lustily, made her grab for little Billy. Mrs. Lansing screamed, too. In a twinkling her chauffeur had rushed up the fire escape and rescued the whole four.

"Bring them down!" cried Mrs. Lansing. And down they all went.

"That was a very brave, brave thing," said Mrs. Lansing to little Maggie.

"Gee!" said Maggie; "you wouldn't want to let me brother get squashed, would yer?"

"Where is your mother?" asked Mrs. Lansing.

"Ain't got nothing but a stepmother," said little Maggie, "and she's going to fire Pickles, and she don't like us."

Mrs. Lansing thought for a few minutes. "Take me to your stepmother," she said.

The new Mrs. O'Hara, quite flustered, received her. Mrs. Lansing is blunt and Western. "You would be better off without these children, wouldn't you?" she asked.

"Well, it ain't as though they were your own," said Mrs. O'Hara.

"How much do you want to turn them over to me and let me adopt them?" said Mrs. Lansing.

Mr. O'Hara was called in. He was willing.

"How would you like to go out West with me, and be my little girl?" said Mrs. Lansing to little Maggie.

"Can I take Billy?" asked Maggie.

"Of course; he will be my little boy," said Mrs. Lansing.

"And kin I take Pickles?"

"Of course; he will have all the world to run around in."

"And can Billy have his dolly?"

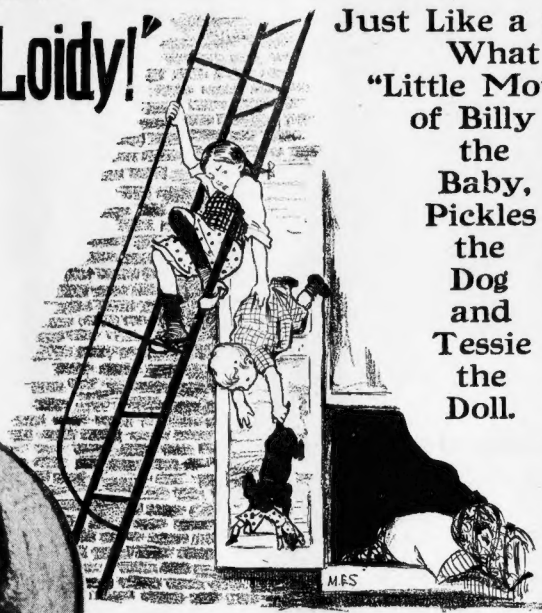
"A carload of them," said Mrs. Lansing.

"Sure," said little Maggie; "we'll all go."

The price was fixed. It was not a large one, and Mrs. Lansing became the legally adopted mother of Maggie, Billy, Pickles and the doll. A few days later they all rode out to the Wild West.

"Where is little Maggie O'Hara?" her friends asked, for about a week on the East Side.

"Oh, Maggie is going to grow up to be a regular foldy," said the East Side children, and went on playing in the hydrant-flooded gutter and on the gardens on their fire escapes just as though a story book had not entered into Elizabeth street.



"Little Maggie, waking up suddenly, made a grab for Billy, just got him, and there the four hung, the dog with the doll in his teeth, Billy hanging on to the dog, and Maggie holding on to all of them."

Miss Juanita Miller, the Daughter of the Western Poet, Who Gives Here Her Philosophy.

"Oh, Have You Massaged Your Soul?"

MISS JUANITA MILLER is the charming daughter of Joaquin Miller, the famous "Poet of the Sierras." When she came to visit busy New York she was distressed by the change from the eternal calm of the Western mountains and so, thrown back upon herself, she evolved an odd mode of living. Now Miss Miller has gone back to her father and her Sierras, but she still practises the philosophy she created for herself in nerve-wearying New York and which she describes below.

By Juanita Miller.

NEW YORK women massage for beauty, they massage for rest and they massage for health. If they would also massage for soul, what superb changes would be made! Inspired beauty from the soul's great storehouse of love and sweetness and grace would soon replace the mark of the dollar in voice and face.

In this Tower of Babel, a stranger asks: "Is not peace and rest to be found here?" Perhaps not, if you follow the multitude. I say yes, if you follow the whisperings of the soul.

If you would be beautiful, if you would be truly happy, do not follow the noise of the crowds. Pick out twenty or thirty minutes in your day, and in solitude worship the pagan gods, and learn the beautiful meaning they may convey to you.

I was tired of society's sham; pink teas bored, and the waste of life appalled.

And so when I came to New York last Fall I was determined to work out my destiny on the God-given, glorious plan.

Sometimes the city fascinated me; sometimes it repelled me. The noise, the lack of concentration and the talk of gold wears down body and soul. My body I knew was all right, but my soul needs were unanswered.

What we require most of all is balance, beauty and poise in this age of extremes, rapidity, machinery and commercialism.

Now I worship Cupid, Venus and Saint Silence.

Beauty exemplified in Venus, a flower or a star, is God's word made manifest. Everything that is natural is beautiful; everything that is beautiful is good, because it is the expression of Divinity.

At noon, after burning incense to Venus or Cupid, I brew nectar in my brazier, and beside this on my tea table I place rice cakes or other sweets, and beside this on my couch I recline, Roman fashion.

I am soon wrapped in imagination. I am in a Triclinium with guests for dinner, never less than the Graces or more than the Muses. They are very beautiful, these creatures in classic robes. We recline with elbows resting upon cushions, trellised grapevines above, walls and pavement of marble and mosaic. There is soft music of the lute and lyre, fountains splash and sparkle and subtle perfumes are exhaled. And so I dream for fifteen whole minutes.

Do you know the delight of sandalled feet? Of a body free from restraint, of a mind purged of all but love and lofty thoughts?

Health and happiness can be had from harmonious meditation, deep breathing, relaxation and worship of the beautiful.

Every day during my hour of worship my little studio is redolent with the delicate perfume of incense, usually sandalwood. I use sandalwood because it is best suited to my nature, my philosophy of life and my temperament.

One should study one's nature and understand the influences of color, scent and sound. Dispositions change, and we should select our own color according to our nature, and not use what fashion dictates.

Sight, scent and sound are all related.

Proper colors, perfumes and sweet sounds are cures, because they put us in harmony with the things which are helpful to us.

Most people, I believe, give little, if any, attention to the colors that should suit their temperaments.

It is noticeable that anemic, melancholy, super-sensitive persons will almost invariably choose greens and grays, when they should wear red and surround themselves in their house furnishings with shades of brilliant hue.

As a rule, florid, or what we call physical, people prefer reds and yellows, when they should choose their complement of soft shaded tints.

For instance, society butterflies, whose lives are colorless at best; whose souls radiate faint, almost meaningless, mental or spiritual color, surround themselves with soft shades and subdued colors.

The opera singer, like the chameleon, should be able to radiate any color at will; colors that represent the nations, colors that represent purity, grace, beauty and poise.

To gain balance, which is perfection, persons should choose not what they like, but their complement in everything, including sight, scent and sound.

"Imagine Mr. Astor's horror! There was his coveted coronet dangling, as it were, at a donkey's tail, while irrepressible Son Wally and Daughter-in-Law rode merrily away with his aristocratic hopes."

Young Mr. Waldorf Astor's Fatal Sense of Humor.

How It Has Shocked His Staid Constituency, Angered Aristocracy, Chilled His Expatriate Father's Hopes of a Peerage, Blighted His Own Political Future---Unless His Beautiful Wife's Tact Can Get Him Out of It.

IT was Oliver Wendell Holmes who said he never dared to be as funny as he could. He was sure such unpleasant consequences would follow. Holmes was a philosopher besides being an American. He knew that the American sense of humor while a delightful is also a dangerous thing.

How young "Wally" Astor's American sense of humor has utterly destroyed William Waldorf Astor's chances of a peerage, his own political prospects, even perhaps the Astor social career in England deserves a place among the exhibit A's of the national failing.

Young Mr. Astor first showed this recrudescence of American humor several months ago when his political campaign was opened with great eclat and barrels of ale at Plymouth, the ancient seaport town for which he was standing. In this country he would have run. In England he stood!

In the height of his campaign, which was proceeding with proper English propriety, Mr. Astor's American birth and blood rose to the front.

"Some one has spoken of dirty American dollars," chirped the future member of Parliament, in a speech at Plymouth.

"Now I want to say right here that we don't want any dirty American dollars over here, and I certainly feel that a stop should be made to this sort of thing. (Cheers, cheers, cheers). Any Americans who think that their dollars can buy our British electors, will find themselves jolly well mistaken. ('Ear! 'Ear!)"

This speech caused much surprise in London and America, for Mr. Astor Senior owns nothing but "dirty American dollars." What an astonishing thing for young Mr. Astor to say!

When the election returns were in, and "Wally" was declared a winner, Father Astor felt better. He took Son aside and said: "Now, my dear Wally, a sense of humor is all very well for a private citizen, but you belong to the public, the British public, and I beg you to submerge this beastly American tendency."

The Earl of Winterton, whose superb estate, Shillinglee Hall, is in Sussex, not far from Plymouth, gave a masquerade ball. Every one had to wear fancy costume.

Mrs. Wally said: "Wally, my dear boy, I am going to be very foolish. I shall go as Folly, a pink-skirted Folly, and," she thoughtfully added, "those pink skirts will not be so very long."

"My dear girl," replied the young member of Parliament, "that will be jolly, I shall go as one of Premier Asquith's 500 new peers." "Oh, bully, bully!" said Mrs. Wally. "Won't that amuse every one?"

Mrs. Wally, having the keenest kind of American humor, naturally saw the joke.

Mr. Asquith, it may be recalled, has threatened to create 500 new Peers to overcome the majority against his veto bill in the present House of Lords. Mr. Astor Senior has long yearned to get a peerage in some way. He even had a ducal robe, and an imitation ducal crown made, and it was whispered that sometimes he wore them in the privacy of his rooms. And another rumor had it that he spent hours every week saying: "His Lordship, my Lordship, your Lordship" under his breath. He did not want to be taken by surprise.

The night of the ball came. Mrs. Wally looked a veritable Folly --a pretty pink-skirted sprite. Her skirts were decidedly pink, decidedly short and decidedly outstanding. Her liege lord, as a fake Peer was a huge success. His purple ducal robe was long and stringy, his ermine had once been coverings for several pussy cats; his noble crown was a mass of fake diamonds and stuffed with straw!

On his shoulder was the fatal number 199!

"Isn't Wally's makeup too jolly for anything!" said Mrs. Wally whenever she met a fellow guest.

"Eh-Eh-y-y-yes," the guest invariably replied, "but what does it mean? Isn't it an insult, y'know?"

"You shan't vote next term for those pink skirts," said nine out of every ten wives in Plymouth.

And so, with the pink skirts estranging the common people, and the fake peer estranging the nobility, the political career of poor, humorous Mr. Astor was sealed. "Or Lord Rosebery himself wrote a most scathing letter of protest to The Times, in which he accused Mr. Astor of "put. ing the house of Lords into ridicule at the time of its greatest crisis. He wound up spiritedly: "Privately has cashiered the nation's life; this is a last outrage to the House of Lords in its extremity." Pity the poor Peers!

"I thought that I went to the ball as a Joke! A very good joke! but I find that Lord Rosebery and his kindred have no sense of humor. The most painful thing to the world is an attempt to explain a joke," says Mr. Astor.

The present state of the Astors in England is thus made quite hopeless. When Wally enters his father's presence, said father groans and moans:

"My son, my son, you have upset my fish cart; you have spoiled my life, you will never be the son of a Peer!"

Mrs. Waldorf Astor, Jr., Formerly the Beautiful Nannie Langhorne Shaw, of Virginia.

Hever Castle, William Waldorf Astor's English Feudal Stronghold That He Bought to Properly House His Title—Which He Hasn't Gained as Yet.

Mr. Astor Senior is counting on Mrs. Wally's tact to smooth things over with the irate peers, and young Mr. Astor is hoping, deep in his heart, that she will finally win over the good old wives of Plymouth.

And the odds are that Mrs. Astor will win all the way out! Her whole career shows that this little Southern lady gets her own way at home and abroad.

Just after her marriage her father-in-law consulted her on the best methods to capture Royalty.

"Leave it to me," said the bride, "you shall have a royal Princess for the next week end at Cliveden."

And the very next week, who applied for bed and board at Cliveden? The Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the lovely Princess Pat! They came for three days and remained seven!

And they came many times afterward.

The Princess Pat stood as godmother to the first Astor baby! And very frequently the Duchess, when visiting Cliveden, steals away to play with his highship! And the Duke of Connaught was King Edward's brother!

Mrs. Astor's wit is generally kindly. She does not mind making fun of herself, and she has even been known to make fun of the sacred name of Astor and right before her serious, phlegmatic, self-important father-in-law!

Mrs. Astor, however, takes a serious view of the Astors' American lineage. One day at a garden party given by the Duchess of Westminster, the Duchess of Marlborough was emphatically sure that the Vanderbilts were higher in the social scale than the Astors.

Mrs. Wally's Irish was roused.

"Nonsense, my dear Consuelo," she sweetly cooed, "the Astors had stopped skinning skunks for generations before the Vanderbilts began collecting ferry tolls!"

King Edward was first attracted to her at a house party at the Willy Jamesons. Everybody was being bored to death by some heavy music, after a long, heavy dinner. The King approached Mrs. Astor and asked her how she was enjoying herself. "I'm suffocated with pleasure, Your Majesty, almost dead with happiness," and she daringly looked around at the yawning, stupid party!

And the King laughed so heartily that the chandeliers shook!—and added Mrs. Astor at once to his galaxy of American wits.

With this sparkling wit, with her beauty and charm and her Southern ability to get what she wants when she wants it—will Mrs. Astor succeed in winning over the good old wives of Plymouth?

The odds are that she will.

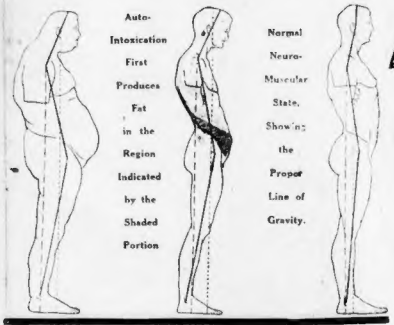
ARE YOU GETTING TOO FAT?



Auto-Intoxication First Produces Fat in the Region Indicated by the Shaded Portion Normal Neuro-Muscular State, Showing the Proper Line of Gravity.

The Perfect Back as Exemplified in the Case of Marguerite Edwards, of Los Angeles, Who by Proper Training Has Become the Most Beautifully Formed Child in the World.

The Fat Man's Final Increase of Fat Shown in the Above Cut Is Due to Auto Intoxication.

Here Are Some of the Newest Discoveries About Why You Get Fat, What Fat Is and How to Get Rid of It

Ten Newest Things About Fat.

1. Fat is not a disease, but a symptom of disease.
2. Fat is caused by some functional disorder.
3. Every fat person is abnormally nervous.
4. Fatness is sometimes a symptom of tuberculosis, being caused by overfeeding.
5. The fat person is invariably weak, the fat increasing the size but diminishing the strength of the muscles.
6. The fat baby is an unhealthy baby. Sometimes the condition is due to faulty digestion; sometimes to alcoholism in the nurse.
7. Obesity in children over eight should be treated as in the case of adults.
8. Exercises for children should be chiefly Swedish movements or with the lightest possible apparatus. Otherwise growth is checked.
9. Breathing exercises are of primary importance for stout children.
10. Children's exercises should last no longer than twenty minutes.

BY PROF. FRANCIS HENKEL, OF THE PARIS ACADEMY OF MEDICINE.

A FAT man or woman made thin by a stringent course of diet and exercise is not cured of the tendency to obesity.

It is easy enough to make a person thinner, but to prevent that same person from taking on fat again after returning to a normal mode of life is a more difficult matter. The key to the radical cure of obesity does not lie here.

The truth of the matter is that dieting alone or coupled with exercises combats effects and not causes. As a result as soon as the treatment ceases the patient begins to get fat again and has had all his or her trouble for nothing.

The scientist must look deeper and seek the causes of the abnormal taking on of adipose tissue. Long study of many patients has convinced me that each one acquires his extra fat in his or her own way. Many owe their fat to sedentary lives and overfeeding, but there are heavy eaters who do not get fat.

Infectious diseases, such as typhoid, grip, pneumonia and poisoning by phosphorus, arsenic and lead may lead to morbid increase of flesh, obesity. It follows, therefore, that this obesity may be the result of internal or external intoxication, which upsets the functions of assimilation and de-assimilation as regulated by the nervous system.

On the other hand, nervous troubles are often responsible for cases of obesity. Fat people are generally neurasthenic, irritable and impatient. They eat rapidly and do not masticate, and that is one of the frequent causes of obesity.

Treatment of the obese should, therefore, deal with causes rather than with the adiposity itself. A superabundance of fat due to overfeeding and a sedentary life does not require the same regime as that due to nervous trouble or diseases of the stomach, intestines or liver.

In each case the cause must be ascertained and corrected by proper treatment. The battle must be with the cause first, and then to prevent the muscular atrophy which comes from the infiltration of fat. All fat persons, without exception, are weak, notwithstanding the apparent volume of their limbs.

After many experiments I have demonstrated that the ordinary exercises usually prescribed are valueless, but that there should be a progressive physical training, which will develop all the muscular parts of the body, and give it its normal form. This will make the fatty mass on the abdomen disappear, as well as the fat on the hips and neck and make the skin firm, increase the organic combustion, remedy auto-intoxication and re-establish permanently the muscular masses indispensable for establishing a real and radical cure.

Methodical and graduated exercises, utilizing light weights and exercisers for a half an hour daily will, when coupled with medical prescriptions, correct all circulatory troubles, increase the heart power, aid kidneys and liver, help digestive functions and bring about a real cure.

I have called this method Myotherapy (muscle cure), as most fully expressing its purpose. It is useful even in cases of diabetes, gout, asthma, eczema, neurasthenia and arterio-sclerosis, all of which are frequently associated with adiposity.

It is notable that there is generally an admixture of functional nervous trouble with adiposity. The causes of both these conditions must be cured if we are to reach the effects permanently.

Every case of obesity can be cured if properly treated in time. Some general principles may be laid down as applicable to all cases.

The fat person must realize, however, that the process is slow, just because it is sure. Rapid cures are both dangerous and valueless. Some months are required for real results.

Young persons may reduce more rapidly than older ones. If the treatment is strictly adhered to a cure may be guaranteed within from three months to a year. A person should not lose more than 6 to 8 pounds per month, and as the average reduction desired is from 40 to 60 pounds, it is easy to calculate the duration of the cure.

The physician will know when his patient is really cured if all untoward symptoms have disappeared.

It is ill-advised to empty the tissue beneath the skin of its fatty element too suddenly, or the skin will become flaccid. Our treatment should produce a gradual and regular loss of weight. It should be relatively easy, and not ask too great a sacrifice of time of the patient. It should not ask too much energy of the patient, for the obese are least apt to be energetic. It must be a radical cure to compensate the patient for his trouble.

In the very beginning the physician must calculate exactly what should be the normal weight of the patient, as the end towards which to work, but this need not be too precise, on account of constitutional variations. The man 5 feet 7 may weigh in the neighborhood of 140 pounds. A woman of that height weighs slightly less.

The diet should be carefully regulated. Here is an average diet, subject to the modification which a wise physician may suggest.

Breakfast—A cup of tea or coffee with milk, two pieces of sugar. A little butter and a roll.

Noon Meal—Roast meat, or a chicken wing, or beefsteak, green vegetables, spinach, green peas cooked salad, dessert of cooked fruit. A cup of weak tea or coffee if desired.

At 4 o'clock—A cup of weak tea or other aromatic drink, two pieces of sugar, two biscuits.

Dinner in the Evening—No soup, two eggs as desired, two or three spoonfuls of puree (potatoes or lentils), dessert as at noon. After the meal a warm drink of either weak tea or chamomile.

Bread should be eaten very sparingly, never more than one ounce at a meal. It is even better not to eat any at dinner. An extra portion of puree being taken instead.

Drinking should be done between meals rather than during eating, for digestion is easier when there is not too much liquid in the stomach. Spring water is preferable and wine or beer should not be used save occasionally.

Most fat persons are muscularly weak because they do not use their muscles, which have become atrophied, and at the same time the neuro-muscular tonicity has been lessened on account of their condition of auto-intoxication.

How are we to get those persons who generally have not used their muscles since they were children to take up regular exercises? The education must be slow and progressive. At the same time the auto-intoxication must not be increased by the discharge of too much poison into the blood by exercise.

All the muscles should be used for a short time daily. The muscles may be contracted successively or in groups, repeating the movements. The muscles must not work rapidly or lift heavy weights. Let them use light weights on pulleys or light rubber extensors.

Every day the fat person should exercise for not more than fifteen minutes with weights on the pulleys of not more than 4 pounds. A series of movements should be learned and the length of time should be gradually increased to forty-five minutes.

The Swedish movements should be used at first without any weights at all. After a few days, however, the pulleys should be brought into use.

These exercises burn up the fat in the muscles and help the cure radically. The patient should then progress to exercises of the trunk, bending from side to side and backwards and forwards.

The return to normal activity is necessary for a real cure, helping to regulate all the nervous and other disorders, and regulate the bodily functions. The mind holds the key to the real cure. The mental state of the stout person after the treatment should be exactly the opposite of its former condition. He must be eager for muscular and mental activity. He must be freed from neurasthenia and be ever ready to act.

The fact of having a good muscular development is a great aid to activity, and this is the great value of the myotherapic system, as contrasted with the common dietetic treatment. The physician can do much in the way of suggestion which will act upon the mind of the stout patient and change his point of view. He passes from sloth to activity and is really cured both from within and without.

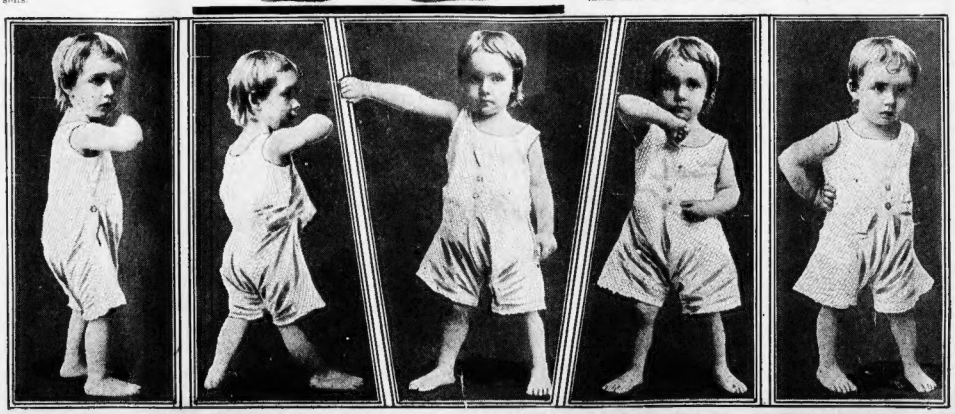
For the Stout Woman, This Exercise Is of Great Value as It Reduces the Abdomen.

One of the Simple Exercises by Which Miss Edwards Developed the Muscles of Her Lower Limbs.



These Simple Exercises Are Specially Adapted to Young Children Who Show a Tendency to Become Fat. Free Movements Without Apparatus of Any Kind for About Twenty Minutes a Day Are All That Is Necessary to Overcome the Tendency.

Are Men Growing Hysterical?

DO YOU find that the presence of your wife, your children, or your fiancee drives you into a frenzy of unreasoning irritation?

If so, you are in all probability suffering from hysteria, which, the doctors say, is very prevalent among men just now.

"It is not generally known that men suffer from hysteria because, as a general rule, they do not fall victims to it," said a specialist, with the understanding that his name should not be printed.

"It takes many forms with them, one of the most frequent being sudden aversion to the people they really love best.

"One patient of mine cannot bear his wife to leave him for an instant, but all the time she is with him he is finding fault with her. If she laughs, and tries to cheer him up, she is unsympathetic. If she is grave, he insists that she is grieving because she no longer loves him, and wants a divorce.

"Another patient of mine, who is, I happen to know, highly valued by his employers, has become obsessed with the conviction that they spend most of their time debating whether or not they should dismiss him instantly.

"His manner got so strange at the office that the chief has sent him away for a month's rest, for, thinking that they have such unfriendly ideas concerning him, he has hardly been able to be civil to his superiors. Here again hysteria was the cause.

"Among other men I am attending it is taking the form of a belief that they cannot eat anything without its disagreeing with them. The mischief of it is that, though there is nothing wrong with their digestions, they cannot assimilate food."

"TO AVENGE MY SISTER'S HONOR"

"Until Her Murderer Is Punished This War Will Never End!" Cries the Mexican "Joan of Arc" Who Equipped and Led a Thousand Fierce Indians Against Diaz

The First Authentic Photograph of Senorita Margareta Neri, Who Led a Band of One Thousand Indians in the Mexican Revolution.

WHEN the full history of the recent Mexican War and the overthrow of the Diaz Government comes to be written the part that women rebels played in it will stand out conspicuously. No other war of modern times presents such a record. France had her Joan of Arc, but Mexico has her thousands of them.

In many cases a sense of patriotism imbued the women fighters. In others revolutionary zeal was responsible. In still others the spirit of revenge for private wrongs inflicted turned these peaceful Mexican women into warring Amazons. In the latter class, perhaps, the most dramatic incidents occurred.

The stirring exploits of the Widow Talamantes and her regiment of sympathizers have been already recounted. This woman's husband and their two sons, rich planters in the State of Sonora, were suspected of revolutionary sentiments and were captured in a Federal raid by Colonel Chipias.

Despite the wife's earnest entreaties, Chipias, brutalized by drink, shot the three captives within sight of their hacienda.

The widow immediately offered $20,000 in gold for the capture of the man responsible for the death of the three persons she loved best in the world. The reward failing to bring the desired result, the widow organized a regiment and took to the field. Her force grew to be one of the largest revolutionary bands in Sonora.

By a clever ambush which she personally laid, the Widow Talamantes eventually captured her prey. As he lay on the ground suffering from the wounds he received at the conflict she knelt over him, whispered a few words in his ear, and shot him dead. Her revenge was satisfied.

A still more dramatic story is that of Margareta Neri, another woman rebel leader, who took up arms against the ruling government to avenge her sister's shame and death at the hands of one of Diaz's officers.

"Always with My Sister's Fate in Mind, I Led My Indians in Desperate Sorties Against the Federal Troops."

A Photograph of Senorita Neri Fighting with Her Soldiers at Chilpancingo.

"Why My Family's Wrongs Turned Me Into a Soldier"

By Senorita Margareta Neri

DIAZ is overthrown and they say the war is over. The war will never be over until I have avenged the death of my dear little Maria.

Maria was my sister, a year younger than I. She would have been twenty-three years old to-day had she lived. Poor Maria!

My father was a General in the Mexican Army, General Canuto Neri. Twelve years ago he revolted against the government. Little did he think at that time that his own little daughter would be the victim of one of its officers.

The blue blood of Spain flowed in my father's veins. He was the descendant of one of the earliest Spanish settlers in Mexico. My mother was a Guerrero Indian. My father was very rich and was able to educate my sister and myself to the best advantage.

When he resolved to take up arms against Diaz he placed my sister and myself in a convent at Chilpancingo. Before we had been there six months we learned of our father's death. He died fighting, as became him.

At that time I was only twelve years old and didn't fully realize what I owed to my dead father. Even if I had, I suppose I was then too young to have avenged his death.

As the years went by and the convent teachings broadened my understanding, however, I resolved that as soon as I was old enough I would take up the fight against Diaz where my father had left off, and fight for the principles for which he died.

About a year ago Maria left the convent and went to live with an uncle at Puerto de Acapulco. She was a pretty girl, far prettier than I, and she soon became the belle of the port.

My father had left a fortune of a million pesos, equivalent to $500,000, between us, and Maria was courted by many. Among her many suitors was a dashing officer of Diaz's army. Needless to say, she rejected his addresses, not only because of the hatred which she felt against every one connected with Diaz but because of the character of the man himself.

The more Maria repulsed him the more persistent he became. My uncle forbade him the hacienda. Upon one pretext or another he repeated his obnoxious visits, however, until one day, in a fit of rage, my uncle called his servants and had the Colonel thrown out of the house bodily.

That was the beginning of the end. A week later my uncle was accused of revolutionary leanings and in the middle of the night his hacienda was raided. Without even the formality of a trial my uncle was shot as a rebel. Poor Maria became the Colonel's prisoner. Good Heavens! Would that he had killed her on the spot! But alas, she was preserved for a worse fate!

Bound hand and foot the officer had the poor girl transported to his yacht, which was lying in the waters of the port.

"Now, little girl," he said, "perhaps you will appreciate the honor I paid you when I asked you to become my wife. I don't have to ask you any longer. Now I tell you you are my wife!"

Maria spat in his face, and, coward that he is, he struck her with his closed fist.

What happened on that boat in the two days that followed I can only conjecture; but several days afterward I received the following tear-stained note from my little sister:

"Sister Margareta — After two days' captivity on San Carlos's boat I thank God I have at last escaped to kill myself. Pity, pity me and avenge my shame. Your little sister,

"MARIA."

At the same time I received a note from a friend that poor Maria had been found dead on the shore with a self-inflicted bullet wound in her breast and the note addressed to me pinned to her dress.

That very night I left the convent and returned to my native village. There were hundreds of Indians and Mexicans there who had worshipped my father and who would have been willing to sacrifice their lives to serve him.

When I told them of my sister's fate they were willing to do anything for me. In twenty-four hours I had over seven hundred men sworn to follow me till death.

Amply supplied with funds, it was not a difficult matter for me to procure sufficient arms. I equipped my men with American rifles and interchangeable cartridges, and each man with a short sabre as well.

The men unanimously elected me their leader. I have ridden horseback since I was a child and the use of firearms was second nature to me. Inspired by the wrongs of my family, I believe I could have led my men to victory against any odds. As it was, however, the cruel Federal troops were but cowards at best and they put up but a weak defense against the attacks of my band.

My main object, of course, was to capture my sister's murderer. To that end I allied myself with General Ambrosio Figueroa, who was conducting a campaign against Diaz in the States of Guerrero and Morelos. The General was aware of my plan and did all he could to help me carry it out.

Despite our utmost efforts, however, the officer still lives. Diaz is overthrown; the Federal troops have been repeatedly worsted by the rebels, but the man still lives. Until I have avenged my sister's death the war will never end. My band of Indians has sworn to stick by me until I have attained my object, and if I have to embroil my country in war again I shall keep on fighting until I have captured the man who wronged my sister and have made him pay the penalty for his crime.

Kindly Bacteria Which Will Help You Grow Your Own Calabash Pipes

IT is only a few months ago since the Plant Bureau of the United States Government issued a pamphlet showing how any one might grow the calabash and make the popular calabash pipes.

These pipes which are made from the crooked necks of a large species of gourd are the lightest of all pipes for their size, are graceful in shape and color like meerschaums. The good ones cost anywhere from eight to twelve dollars apiece, but the Government botanists demonstrated that it is a simple matter for the smoker to produce his own at merely nominal cost.

Now comes Professor W. H. Bottomley, professor of botany in King's College, London, a distinguished scientist, with further suggestions along the same lines. The professor has been experimenting with various species of benvolent bacteria in the hope of finding some that would expedite the growth of the calabash, and his efforts have been successful.

Professor Bottomley has discovered that the germs known technically as azotobacter and pseudomonas are of the greatest value in this respect. Brought together they form a bacterial benevolent society for the good of many plants, particularly the calabash.

Without asking the plants for anything in the way of nourishment—as some bacteria do—these philanthropic germs set to work to take the nitrogen out of the air, turn it into nutritive food, and make the plant roots a free present of it.

Plants treated with the mixture of the two germs by Professor Bottomley showed improvement. Their growth was accelerated at least fifty per cent.

The germs were applied by spreading them over the mixture of three parts of fibrous loam and one part of white sand in which the calabashes were growing, which was then watered sufficiently to wash the microbes down into the roots.

Some of the germs were then placed in a jar full of water to multiply and the liquid was used to water the plants with daily, the deposit in the bottom of the jar remaining undisturbed.

"Azotobacter and pseudomonas," declared Professor Bottomley, "have been recently tried on various plants with considerable success, although in some cases the results were negative.

"In the case of the calabash the germs seem to be most effective, my experiments showing a fifty per cent acceleration of growth."

To make a pipe, the neck end of the gourd should be cut off and all pith carefully removed from the inside. The thin outside skin should be scraped off with a sharp knife as soon as possible, before it dries. Then the hard surface may be polished with whiting or pumice. Sandpaper will scratch it, and must not be used. The necessary accessories are a hard rubber mouthpiece, a cheap meerschaum bowl, and some thin cork strips such as are used for wrapping the ends of cigarettes. These things ought not to cost much more than fifty cents.

The Little Fly That Kills 75,000 American Babies a Year!

A fly is a very little thing.

But one fly has in a season 5,184,663,552,000,000,000 descendants.

It is bred in filth. It carries filth and germs into homes and deposits filth and disease germs upon the lips and bodies of babies and adults.

75,000 babies die every year in the United States from the same cause!

These three pictures show the progress of the fly from the head of a dead fish thrown into the street to the nipple of a baby's bottle and to the baby's mouth.

In every generation 170,000,000 years of life—the equivalent of 4,000,000 lives of average length—are lost through the fly nuisance!

KILL THAT FLY!

Picture the horror of being the last woman on earth. Deprived of the destroying microbe, the world would be covered deep with the dead, resisting dissolution, and, save for the action of the elements, natural as in life. She would walk over this cemetery of the ages with only clouds of loathsome black vultures circling about her.

How Little Microbes Keep the Earth from Being Only a Huge Graveyard in Space

PROFESSOR SIR E. RAY LANKESTER, the most distinguished scientific naturalist in England, has just called public attention to an extraordinarily useful performance of the little microbe.

If it were not for the little microbe, the earth would long ago have been entirely carpeted and rendered uninhabitable through the accumulation of undecayed dead bodies.

The microbes or bacteria of putrefaction decompose dead flesh as well as other organic matter, and then either dispose of it themselves or prepare it for consumption by carrion-feeding animals.

But for the action of these little organisms, dead bodies would undergo the process that takes place in meat dried in the sun. This meat is hung up in the sun and wind so that it is preserved from the action of the microbes, which only work effectively in damp, dark places. The water gradually dries out. The meat bardena and is preserved against putrefaction indefinitely. It is called pemmican by the Indians.

If there were no microbes we should all become like pemmican after death, and so would all the countless millions of animals that die everyday. We should be even tougher than pemmican. We should endure forever.

Think what that means! Eighty thousand persons die every year in Greater New York, ninety-one thousand every year in London. All of them would be preserved forever. It would be hopeless to dispose of the accumulation of bodies. But that is a mere trifle compared to the accumulations that would be left from past ages. There are 1,550,150,000 people in the world. It is calculated that this number will die in the course of about thirty years. Their imperishable dead bodies would carpet the earth if there were no microbes to remove them!

It is estimated that man has existed for over 200,000 years and the population of the earth within recorded times has always been great. The bodies of those who have died since the beginning, it has been estimated, would form a carpet twenty miles thick covering the entire inhabitable globe.

This means that without microbes all the organic nutritive material of the earth would have been extracted from it and deposited upon the surface in the form of a layer of useless, immobilized, imperishable dead bodies. Life, of course, would have been made impossible long ago.

A human body occupies, on the average, six cubic feet. The number of people mentioned as now living on the earth would make a line 1,727,445 miles long, or about five times as much as the mean distance from here to the moon, which is 235,850 miles. Imagine all those people dead and indestructible and then all the countless generations that have lived for thousands of years, all in the same condition. And then imagine all the animals that ever lived in the same condition and you will have some idea of what we should be without microbes.

Monstrous horrors would mark the development of an earth without microbes. We must assume that the crows, vultures, hyenas and other creatures that now feed upon carrion would abandon this habit because at present it is the odor of decomposition caused by the microbes that attracts them. If, however, any of these animals acquired the habit of devouring undecomposed flesh they would be overfed, would develop monstrously, would become a terror to the living and still be inadequate for their horrible duties.

The fertile parts of the world, such as France and England, would become piled mountain high with dead bodies, and the inhabitants would be compelled to flee to less fertile parts where they would live with difficulty until the same curse overtook them. Even cremation could not save the human race, for destruction of organic matter by fire would release too great a proportion of gases, leaving a residue of ashes behind as an obstruction to fertilization.

The rivers and seas would be covered with dead bodies, swollen and terrible, but indestructible.

We can imagine the last inhabitant of the earth wandering horror-stricken over a world covered with imperishable dead bodies, vainly seeking an animal to kill or a fruit to pluck, because the microbes have ceased to work.

Africa would have been covered with a layer of dead elephants twenty miles thick, mixed up with negroes and other smaller animals. As it is, although there are vast herds of elephants in Africa, the traveller never sees the dead body of one, so thoroughly do the microbes perform their work.

Wherever and whenever there is decomposition of organic matter, whether it be the case of a man, a whale or a worm, an herb or an oak, the work is done by infinitely small organisms. They are the most important, almost the only, agents of universal hygiene.

They protect the living against the dead. Without them the remains of dead animal and plant bodies encumbering the earth would retain all the elements necessary for the building up of new plant life and animal bodies, and would soon cut off the food supply of existing plants and animals.

Life would be impossible, because the work of death would be incomplete, or, as the great Pasteur puts it, because the return to the atmosphere and to the mineral kingdom of all that which has ceased to live would be incomplete.

The microbes or bacteria that break up the tissues of dead animals and vegetables are called saprophytes. They are not able to invade the tissues of living animals and plants, and thus we see that they not only do essential service to us but are normally harmless. To this class belong the putrefactive bacteria and many of the pigment-forming bacteria; the yeasts or fermentation fungi, the lactic acid or sour milk bacillus and many others.

How the Little Spider's Web Is Used to Weigh the Sun.

THE spider is one of the smallest and most despised of insects. But ask an astronomer "Of what use can such horrid creatures be?" and he will reply: "Despise nothing in your ignorance. To the spider the astronomer owes an everlasting debt of gratitude. Without its aid much of our work would be guesswork; much of it impossible."

For the spider's gossamer, silken thread is what the astronomers use to calculate the staggering distances between the fixed stars; to measure them and even to weigh our sun! The blazing sun is actually weighed in a spider's web!

The web thread is the most important adjunct in the making of the "filar micrometer," which is one of the most important instruments used in the science of astronomy. In this little instrument, whether of the simple or complex form, the chief requisites are the screw and the cross wires or lines. They are still spoken of as wires because in the beginning man had to content himself with the fine spun wire of his own handiwork, not knowing how nature had provided for his need in the spider.

Upon the perfection of these lines in the micrometer and the delicacy of the screws used depends the value of the instrument, for with this the measurements of all his observations are made. This device enables the astronomer to determine the errors of division, the eccentricity of his circles, and to measure the angles to within the fraction of a second.

When used at the eye end of a telescope it determines the position and the motion of the stars. He can measure not only the distance of the stars from the earth and from one another, but he can measure the diameter of a planet millions of miles away. He measures and so weighs the sun.

The finest thread which man can make himself, when put under great magnifying power shows up very coarse and rough, and is quite unsuitable for very delicate work. Platinum wire was found to offer the best medium for wires of all the materials at man's command, and while these are still used in some instruments of a low magnifying power, they show up full of roughness when under a very strong magnifying power, as ragged as a file.

In seeking for something that should have the required perfection of smoothness, the threads of the silkworm were early experimented with, but while these have great value as a commercial product, they are so coarse when magnified that they are quite unfit for such instruments.

Then the thread of the common spider was experimented with, and lo, from this despised creature comes forth perfection!

The spider lines mostly used are from one-fifth to one-seventh of a thousandth of an inch in diameter! Consider for a moment the strength, elasticity and durability of a substance which permits of such tenuousness!

But the wonders are not exhausted yet—this invisible thread with which man measures the infinite is capable of withstanding extraordinary changes of temperature. Often, when measuring the sun spots, for instance, although the heat is so intense as to crack the lenses of the micrometer eye-piece, yet the spider's lines are not in the least injured!

The spider's thread, although but a fraction of a thousandth of an inch in diameter itself, is made up of several thousands of microscopic streams of fluid, which unite and form a single thread, and it is because of this that they remain true and round under the highest magnifying power.

Just Little Things—

"You Dance Like a Love-Sick Elephant!"—The Little Snub to Frank Gould's Wife That May Cost a Big Theatre

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES, of London, thought himself the very greatest person in the musical comedy world until recently. And so he was, but human greatness, even in the musical comical world, is a very transitory thing.

Everybody has heard of the Gaiety Theatre, London. It is certainly the most famous musical comedy theatre in the English speaking world. British peers habitually marry the ladies of its chorus, and American millionaires who go to England like to show that they are at least on visiting terms with the same set.

Well, Mr. George Edwardes has ruled as an absolute autocrat over that famous and splendid establishment on the Strand for twenty-five years. The nobility cannot carry on their courtships until they have first obtained the permission of Mr. Edwardes, which is only given after they have kowtowed the prescribed number of times and laid tribute at his majesty's feet. Mr. Edwardes is very large and red-faced and thinks a great deal more of his abilities than Napoleon Bonaparte did of his own.

Three years ago there was a pretty but not very striking looking girl singing a minor part in "The Girls of Gothenburg" at the Gaiety Theatre. One evening she received a rather distinct encore after singing her little song, and was about to trip back on the stage to gratify the public demand. But Mr. Edwardes stood in the way, the gossips say, and said:

"Run away, you little dumpling. You dance like a love-sick elephant. Don't interfere with the show."

Now that apparently humble little show girl was Miss Edith Kelly. Within a week she married Frank Jay Gould, youngest son of the late Jay Gould, who had recently been freed by divorce from another Miss Kelly.

Miss Kelly, the show girl, became the wife of an adoring millionaire, whose only desire was to use his millions to give her pleasure. The strongest feeling in Miss Kelly's—Mrs. Frank J. Gould's—bosom was resentment against Mr. George Edwardes for the "dumpling" remark. After her marriage she displayed a beautiful spirit of hospitality and sisterliness toward her late companions of the chorus, while she earnestly studied the means of getting even with Mr. Edwardes.

She saw her opportunity. She found that it would be possible to buy up enough shares in the open market to control the Gaiety Theatre and depose Edwardes as manager. Her husband gladly consented to carry out her plans. The amount involved—about $300,000—was a trifle for a man of his wealth. Moreover, the investment was likely to be a profitable one.

There are 60,000 shares of Gaiety stock. Of these Edwardes and the directors who support him hold 8,630 shares. The rest have been scattered in general public hands. Frank Gould bought up 8,399 shares before Edwardes realized that something unusual was happening. The shares rose from $5 to over $10 apiece during the movement, but that did not worry Mr. Gould. He will have to buy about 29,000 more shares to secure absolute control of the property.

Edwardes has publicly admitted that Gould has requested him to get out of the Gaiety.

"It struck me as a good farcical situation that I should clear out of a theatre I have managed twenty-five years at the request of an individual," said Edwardes.

"I only hope Mr. Gould will attend the next general meeting to set forth to the shareholders what he intends to do for them and to forecast the dividends he proposes to earn."

This sounds bold and confident, like Edwardes, but many detect in it a note of panic, a foreboding of disaster. Besides, if Mr. Gould buys up control of the stock he does not have to convince any stockholders but himself that his plans are good. American financiers are not in the habit of paying any attention to minority stockholders or even to ineffectual majorities.

One view current in London is that as soon as Gould acquires control, his wife will appear as a star in the most elaborate production ever put on at the Gaiety Theatre. It is said to be part of her ambition to appear as a star at least once, if only for a short time.

Those who are familiar with the situation say that if George Edwardes is put out of the Gaiety Theatre it will break his heart, perhaps will kill him. All of which shows what terrible results may come from calling a humble little show girl "a love-sick elephant."

Then, on the other hand, friends of Frank Gould say that George Edwardes is quite mistaken in discouraging the young millionaire's ability as a theatrical manager.

Frank Gould could find a great many situations in his own experience that would make splendid material for a large number of musical comedies. In the first place, he knows all about the mother-in-law situation.

During his first marriage to the charming Miss Helen Kelly, he complained constantly that he was blessed with too much mother-in-law. Whenever he had a little matter to discuss with his wife, his mother-in-law was there to settle it. The first Mrs. Gould was the daughter of Edward Kelly, son of Eugene Kelly, the well known New York banker.

It is even said that at about the time Mrs. Edward Kelly and all the Kellys were endeavoring to settle Frank Gould's domestic arrangements for him, he inspired the very popular song "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?"

The young millionaire also has a great deal of practical experience with young persons of the stage. He knows just what to say to them and possibly what not to say to them. A few letters like those he wrote to Miss Bessie De Voe, the dancer, would make an irresistibly funny scene in a farce or musical comedy.

Imagine a scene in court reproduced on the stage, with the lawyer reading the millionaire's love letters to the dancer, and all the Kellys he has ever been concerned with standing about and expressing their emotions in song, dance and other appropriate ways.

Then Mr. Gould is familiar with divorce, secret marriages and Scotch marriages, and these, as the most simple-minded person knows, are excellent material for the stage and especially for the musical comedy stage. Many of the remarks he has made during his matrimonial troubles would doubtless make a hit if spoken on the Gaiety stage.

"This is too sacred to talk about," was a remark he made when asked if he had really married Miss Edith Kelly, the actress.

It was in 1909 that he set society and all the Kellys except one wondering whether he had really married Edith Kelly. He had only just been released from Miss Helen Kelly, and people thought he was in a hurry to take another Kelly.

At first it was reported that he had been married in France by a very special kind of secret ceremony. The first news of it became public through a hotel register.

Apparently this did not altogether suit Miss Kelly, for a few months later they went to Edinburgh and there indulged in the quietest marriage ceremony known to man. They went before a sniffy Scotch under-sheriff and acknowledged that they were man and wife. That ended the ceremony.

When from time to time a reporter asked Mr. Gould if he were married, he usually said he would sue for damages. This in itself is a view of marriage that ought to make a hit on the stage.

This is Mrs. Frank Gould, Formerly of Edith Kelly, of the London Gaiety. The Photograph is a Rare One, Showing Mrs. Gould in a Pose When She Was a Show Girl There. Her Blight by George Edwardes, the Owner of the Gaiety, Will Probably Cost Him His Theatre, Because of Mr. Gould's Wealth.

And Here Is Still Another Kelly—Frank Gould's Charming Ex-Mother-In-Law, His First Wife's Mother.

"I Want My Dower!"—The Little Prejudice That Drives a Prince and Princess to Work and Foils a Generous Millionaire Ex-Husband.

THE beautiful Princess Troubetskoy, the one-time Amelie Rives Chalmer, cannot spend the Summer at her husband's Russian estate. Pity the poor authoress! She is about to depart to her Southern plantation to feed her prize pigs and to grind out her short stories and best sellers!

The Prince Troubetskoy will have to spend weary weeks in Newport working for his living! He will have to spend long hours playing the gallant to Mrs. John Drexel, Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mrs. Len Thomas and other Newport beauties! Pity the poor princely painter!

And down on his Virginia estate, John A. Chaloner, who used to be called Chanler before he disowned his family, is chafing because he can't do as he wants and generously add to his ex-wife's income so she won't have to write stories and the Prince wouldn't have to work.

All this because the Princess Rives-Chaloner-Troubetskoy has a little prejudice about her dower rights in the Chaloner estate. "Give up the dower rights and take the money," says Mr. Chaloner. "Oh, do!" urges the Prince. "But if I did I'd feel as though I'd never been married to Mr. Chaloner," thinks perhaps the Princess.

This unique situation began sixteen years ago. Amelie Rives, already famous as the writer of several tropic books, sued Mr. Chaloner for divorce. She got it. He generously gave her a goodly allowance. This was before Mr. Chaloner became famous for his "Who's looney now," cable to his brother after he had married Lina Cavalieri.

In a year or two Amelie Rives-Chaloner had married Prince Pierre Troubetskoy. She relinquished her allowance. The Prince is a painter and poet. Their souls hummed in harmony. They lived happily for a time on his Russian estates. The Princess cultivated real wolves for pets. But estates, wolfhounds, wolves, poetry and art cost money. The Prince wanted more money. So did the Princess.

They came to New York, painted pictures and wrote stories. The Prince opened a studio near Fifth avenue. Beautiful society damsels, haughty society dames, society men pattered in to be painted.

Mr. Chaloner, the first husband, lives in Virginia, too, but nearer tide-water. He is a busy farmer, and so long as his former wife was happy, he kept in the background.

Last Summer the Prince went to Newport. He had commissions to paint Mrs. Drexel, Mrs. Joe Widener, Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. How the ladies adore the princely painter!

And—what makes the ladies love him so? the world so often cries. Because he makes them look so young, the critic harsh replies!

A careful statistician computed that the Prince carried $50,000 out of Newport! But the Prince denies this. He had a wonderful Summer, however; dinner invitations every night and things to eat between meals.

This does not sound tragic! Pity stop!

A few weeks ago the Princess decided that she needed more money. But in a fashionable hen and lioness costs money! She added up their total income, and decided that they must have at least four thousand dollars more.

She wrote to her first husband! Indeed, this is but the truth! She explained her difficulties. "We have to live in a horrid old fashioned apartment on the top floor! I am so unhappy I need four thousand dollars a year more!"

The knightly Chaloner, magnanimous and generous, responded at once: "Thirty-six hundred dollars, yearly, will I give you, if you relinquish your rights of dower in my estate!"

Oh, the horrid tragedy! The Princess stood up in wrath. "Relinquish my dower! Never! Never! Never!"

And so the yearly allowance, granted by the generous Mr. Chaloner, is thrust back on his hands! He is made sad and unhappy, the Princess is made to live still longer in that "horrid" apartment, the Prince is sadly packing his trunks for his Newport visit, and the Princess' pet wolfhound yowls and yowls in bitterness of soul, for he too, had yearned to spend the Summer in Russia!

WAY UP-IN-THE-AIR HATS.

The $1,000 Hat---Highest Priced and Cruelest in the World---The New Owl Hat, the Buttercup Bonnet---Feathers All the Rage

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her own original models.

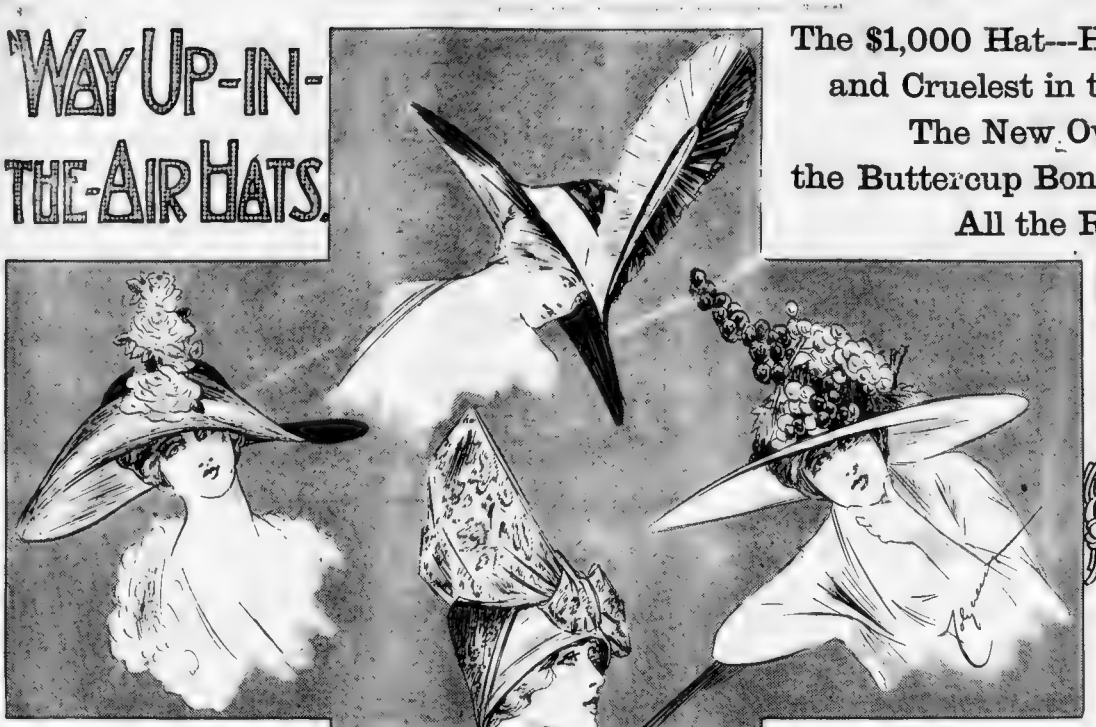
Her American establishment is at 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York City.



Attractively Shaped Hat of Black Lined with Blue and Trimmed with White Roses and Blue Leaves.

Picturesque Hat of White Straw Covered with Black Chiffon, Above Which Black and White Grapes with Gray Leaves Are Massed.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

WHAT do you think of a price of one thousand dollars for a hat? It seems almost incredible, and moreover, such an expenditure and extravagance must be positively and tantalizingly painful to the woman to whom this same sum would represent a two years' dress allowance and pay for every possible—and pretty—item of attire during all that time!

However, the fact remains that the price has actually been paid to Monsieur Lewis, the famous man milliner of Paris and London, and that there has been received in return by the Princess Miahesco de Bucharest a hat which bears the burden of the greatest number of the finest quality "cross" aigrettes that ever in the ordinary way provided adornment for, say twenty different and more reasonably priced models. This hat was worn at the Royal Ascot races.

All over the crown the myriads of feathery strands outspread in different directions, making a snowy white foam, which finds effective contrast to the black Tagal straws, which only comes into actual view in the wide brim, whose bold and beautiful curves are accentuated—and, at the same time, softened—by a narrow edging of velvet. And, then, just toward the right side in front, there is laid on the edge of the brim a great rose, whose closely folded petals and outspread leaves are of oxidized silver tissue, brodered in the threads of brighter metal, and altogether beautiful enough, some might think, to be brought into full view. But Lewis, being an artist, realizes the full value of subtle suggestions, and so the rose is so placed that its shimmer is shadowed by the waving softness of some of those feathery strands. Only when these are parted by some passing breeze does it reveal the silver secrets of its innermost petals.

But though this particular price must needs be prohibitive to the majority, it would be considered inexcusable even to many of those who could afford it.

It is, of course, these aigrette adornments which bring prices up to such high figures, even the loveliest and longest of Lancer plumes only involving an outlay of, say, one hundred dollars, though several may be grouped on one hat. And, as a general rule feathers are hardly as much in evidence on the latest models as on the earlier creations of the season, those which are used being frequently still of the uncurled variety, whose undoubted smartness has kept them in fashion's favor for such a long time—long, that is, by comparison with the frequently brief life of such favorites of this fickle dame.

One of the newest arrangements that may now be noted in the way of feathers simulates an owl's head in emerald green plumage, the beak, outstanding in the centre of the round eyes, shining out at either side, though here art's following of nature's guidance ends abruptly, and I doubt any wise owl's recognition or acceptance of this fashionable freak as even a distant connection! For the green plumage is curved flatly round the crown, and upriaing from it in the centre are two quill-like ostrich plumes whose gradually darkening ends are only slightly curled so that they make flatly one over the other, the stem of one feather, with a few curling strands appearing as the base of the plumage mount and having for background there the black silk covering the San Toy shaped brim of the black Tagal hat.

This is, I consider, one of the smartest hats of the season—of the simpler kind, that is—and I advise those who invest in it to order at the same time a sunshade of emerald green silk, whose tall black stick shall be topped with green enamel, the silken cord and tassel, too, being in the same glorious color, as by these dual means a very effective contrast can be given to every black and white or gray or dark blue costume.

For the rest it would seem that flowers are to be, in increasing and decorative evidence, a Summer headgear, whether this be of gigantic or diminutive size the two extremes being still equally fashionable.

First, then, of a most piquant demureness of aspect is a little bonnet-shaped model of broderie Anglaise whose curves are bordered with a quilling of black velvet ribbon, and then softened about the face with a double frilling of Valenciennes lace. Just above one ear there is fastened a posey of yellow buttercups, pink roses and purple violets—a posey quite in keeping with the simulated simplicity of the model—and finally there are added long strings of narrow black velvet ribbon whose arrangement may be left to the discretion of the wearer, one distinctly pretty scheme, however, being to tie them high up under the left ear.

I like the effect, too, of a mulberry straw hat whose overshadowing ostrich plumes are all in the same soft shade, for this achieves distinction by reason of the unexpected and effective appearance in the very centre of the feathery foam of one gigantic rose, whose outer pink petals give place eventually to others of black

How to Keep Baby Well During the Hot Weather

By Bertha Bellows Streeter.

(From an article in the Household Art Department of the July number of Good Housekeeping, published and copyrighted by American Home Magazine Company.)

THE most bitter experience I ever had in bringing up my baby came at the beginning of the hot weather when he was about six months old. I was one of the unfortunate mothers who are reduced to putting their babies upon bottles, and at that time we were beginning to feel convinced that at last we had found the food that would make the little fellow strong and healthy.

Then we had some visitors—relatives of my husband—who passed many a comment upon baby's appearance.

"I fed my children whenever they cried," one of the older women said, "and gave them just all they could eat. And none of them died, either!"

The longer I thought about the incident, the more I felt that possibly I was not doing just the best thing. So I determined to do as they had done.

When my husband came home for dinner the next noon he found no meal ready. The entire morning had been taken up with the baby. My, but he was sick!

I am glad I learned the lesson so early. I listened to all advice, hoping to gain suggestions that could be adapted to my child to promote his health and comfort, but never after that bitter experience did I think myself called upon to try everything suggested — especially when suggestions went against my own judgment.

Baby seemed to be like myself, very "warm-blooded." When the hot weather came on he seemed very uncomfortable, perspiring profusely when he had more than the lightest clothing on. How to keep him comfortable was my first problem in those days. The first thing, I reasoned, was to remove more fat from his food, as fat produces heat. So in preparing his milk, I turned out the entire bottle of milk instead of only the top as I had done in cooler weather.

This mixture contained only about 4 per cent. of fat instead of 7, as prepared before. Then, too, I gave him one feeding of barley water a day, preferably near night, as it is easily digested, and left little to tax his stomach while he was sleeping. I frequently gave him an ounce of cold water and believe that had a great deal to do with his good nature through the trying heat of the Summer.

As the weather grew warmer I peeled off almost all the clothes the youngster had on. He spent the days lying in his spacious carriage in the coolest spot I could find, with nothing on but a diaper, a little knit band and a thin slip of nightdress. Even then he would perspire.

I watched every change in the weather, and if it grew the least bit too cool, threw a light wrap over the baby or put on more clothes. I had read that the abdomen and feet of a child should always be kept warm, and it was partly due to my care in this respect, I think, that my baby had almost no colic at all. At sundown a bath in warm water to which a little alcohol had been added seemed to ease the little fellow. Then he was put into fresh clothes and laid away for the night.

A child's heart beats more quickly than an adult's, as I reasoned, the child must be warmer than his mother. In covering him for the night I consulted my own comfort, trying to put over him a little less than I would need for myself. When I retired I threw over myself only the number of coverings the baby had over him. Then I knew that if the night grew cooler I would be awakened by the fall in temperature and the consequent feeling of cold, and could add more coverings to the baby's bed. In this way I always knew whether baby was too warm or too cold, and knew it in time to correct conditions before they had any evil effect upon him.

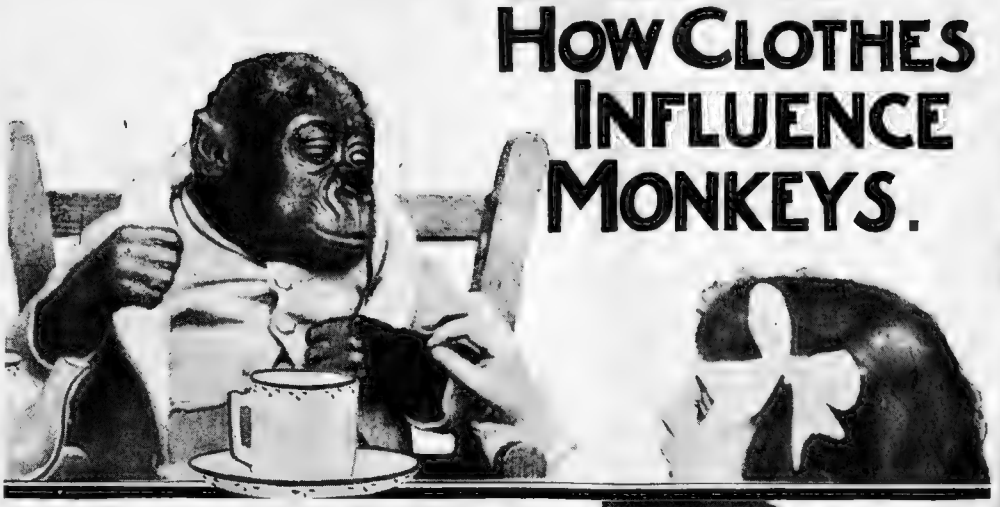
How Clothes Influence Monkeys.



Pompey, the Chimpanzee, Became a Model of Table Manners When Properly Dressed.

Curious and Entertaining Experiments Showing That Neat Garments Elevate Our Simian Relatives and Advance Evolution a Million Years at a Jump.

Berlin, June 21.

PROFESSOR ALEXANDER SOKOLOWSKI, of the University of Berlin, is now engaged upon a series of experiments designed to show the influence of clothes upon monkey nature. It has been recognized by philosophers—Thomas Carlyle among them—that clothes have a most important influence upon man.

If man is so profoundly influenced by his clothes, shall we not find a similar condition in the case of his closely allied fellow creature, the monkey? This is one of the many interesting points which Professor Sokolowski proposed to investigate. The results he has obtained are amazing.

When a chimanzee was clad in the garments of refined society he advanced in culture a million years at a jump. From being lower than a savage in manners he rose to a pitch of elegance and refinement that would not have discredited the most fashionable circles of Paris.

Most interesting is the behavior of a young chimpanzee named Pompey. It has been found by experiment that a white flannel dress suit faced with cream-colored satin brings out all that is best in his nature. When he is wearing this elegant suit he behaves like a model for a clothing advertisement. He will not allow a speck of dirt to touch his immaculate clothes. The whiteness and daintiness of the suit evidently give him intense pleasure and a little dirt would mar that pleasure.

It is significant that before he had his fine suit Pompey was not at all particular in his manners, although always very entertaining. When eating his morning bread and milk he would waste a good deal of it on the outside of his stomach and the coal bin was his favorite resort for an afternoon nap.

From the moment he wore his new suit he gave up all those nasty habits. This case seems to prove that clean clothes are of the greatest value in promoting civilization in monkey and man.

Pompey, clothed, behaved with great dignity in the presence of lower animals of the simian family instead of flying into a brutal rage as he used to do. When a little long-tailed Brazilian monkey was introduced to him he played with his degraded relative in a gentle and forbearing manner. This, the Professor believes, shows that clothes have a softening and humanizing influence upon manners.

Equally interesting were the experiments upon a lively young female baboon, a member of a family inferior in development to the great anthropoid apes, but yet possessed of quite remarkable intelligence. This young baboon was dressed up in a very passable copy of the costume worn by Salome in the opera of that name and made familiar to many of us by Miss Mary Garden and other distinguished artists. The costume consists mainly of jewels with a little gauze to hold them together.

Incredible as it may appear, no sooner had Salome, the monkey, put on her wicked Oriental costume than she became riotously wicked herself. She danced about the room before the admiring professor, who felt that he had stepped into the shoes of King Herod, for when he attempted to pat Salome as a reward for her performance, she scratched him severely.

The lesson of this case appears to be that a female adorned with barbarous jewels will behave barbarously.

The chimpanzees and orang outangs showed themselves remarkably apt in learning to eat their food like human beings. When they were carefully dressed in good clothes their aptitude increased very rapidly.

They learned quickly the use of a napkin in protecting their clothes from food. Although they usually tucked their napkins under their chins they nevertheless showed a thoroughly intelligent appreciation of what they were doing.

Jumbo, a bright young orang outang, has progressed so that

The professor has a female chimpanzee who will not take her afternoon tea until she has put on a becoming tea-gown.

As a rule the behavior of the female monkeys improved not only in modesty and reflection, but when they were suitably dressed. This seems to show that real virtue lies in clothes.

In order to spread abroad the knowledge of his interesting experiments, Professor Sokolowski has a great reception, to which he [illegible] and [illegible] years different suits of clothes [illegible] occasions. He will not [illegible] a cigarette until he has put on [illegible] smoking suit.

Refreshments of various kinds were served. Cups of tea and cigarettes were handed around and nearly all the visitors showed a keen appreciation of both these delicacies. The gentlemen waited upon the ladies, and some very interesting exhibition of Simian good manners were given.

It was quite noticeable that the monkeys who were fully dressed behaved much better than those who came more or less in a state of nature. Indeed, some of the scantily dressed callers behaved so badly that it was necessary to lead them away by a chain.

A well dressed baby chimpanzee showed unmistakable signs of aversion when a scantily attired savage young outang offered her a cup of tea. She turned away her head and the savage, enraged by this mark of displeasure, drew her attention by pouring the cup of tea over her. This was rather too much for the lady's recently acquired refinement. She turned her expressive features upon her barbarous relative and promptly sank her teeth into his left ear. They were separated, and the lady reclaimed her well bred composure after the rude fellow had been carried away howling.

The humans who attended this reception generally agreed that Professor Sokolowski had fully proved his point as to the civilizing effect of clothes. They were moreover disposed to believe that results of great interest and value to science might be secured by constructing monkeys in the habits of fashionable society.

How a Poor Widow Acquired an Income of $100,000 a Year on Onions

Mrs. Edward C. Dodd, Whose Onion Farm Has Brought Her a Fortune.

WHEN Mrs. Edward C. Dodd became a widow she looked across the waste of chaparral that was her sole possession and uttered one word, "Onions."

This was no slang of the hour, lightly nor derisively uttered, but a prophecy that was fulfilled a few years later in an income of $100,000. It is this income derived from what was once a wilderness of wild, cactus-producing land that won her the title of "The Onion Queen of Texas."

Mr. Dodd, like many another young lawyer, had amassed a fortune consisting exclusively of experience, excepting only the 225 acres of chaparral-covered land he had accepted in lieu of a money fee, near Laredo, Texas. This was his legacy to his widow, a legacy so inconsiderable that her neighbors were justified in their freely expressed opinion that Mrs. Dodd hadn't a cent."

Mrs. Dodd might have returned to the schoolroom which she left to become a bride. But she dreaded the close air and the routine duties of the schoolroom.

"At least there's the land," she said to herself, "and borrowed a ride" in a neighbor's wagon to visit her possession. It looked discouraging, almost hopeless, the 200-acre tract that those who crossed or passed it, dismissed with the phrase "Waste land."

But Mrs Dodd was a woman with initiative and determination. As her eyes swept the brown stretch of flat acres she had the prophetic vision of the acres cleared. Instead of dry chaparral she saw regular rows of green, thriving, although odorous vegetables.

"Onions!" she said to herself. All the way back to Laredo, on that borrowed ride she was silent, for she was shaping her destinies, by a resolution.

Within a week she had let a contract to clear seventy acres of the 225 in onions. She had no money, but in Texas as in other of the less crowded States of the Southwest, they deal in futures. The man who undertook to clear the seventy acres and plant them to onions agreed to wait until the crop was grown for his reward—that is, he agreed to accept a share of the onions grown for his work. They planted the big Bermuda onion whose pungent fragrance is reduced to a minimum. Of that first year's crop Mrs Dodd cleared $32,000.

The second year she employed men to do more clearing and planting. But heavy rains visited that part of the State at harvest time, causing a general loss of crops. Mrs. Dodd's share of that general loss was $10,000.

Unlike many other humans Mrs. Dodd learned well her lesson from the school mistress, experience. That unexpected heavy rains might work no more havoc on her ranch, and in her fortunes she used much of the depleted $42,000 in building huge warehouses and packing sheds where the vegetables could be stored. Thus the loss of softening by rain could be prevented. That season the loss came not through heavy rains, but from lack of any.

Again Mrs. Dodd proved that despite what pessimists and old bachelors say women have the reasoning faculty. The once waste land lay near the Rio Grande River. She believed that by installing a steam pumping plant she could irrigate her 225 acres, and, as with the warehouses and packing sheds, defy the weather. She installed a pump, but it was only an indifferent success. She discarded the steam pump and installed electricity, which was better and cheaper. This done, she could indeed hurl defiance at the weather. With the aid of the mighty river that separates Texas from Mexico, the Dodd ranch prospered, whatever the caprices of Texas rains and skies.

She increased the working force on the great farm until it numbered 200. While her neighbors complained of their inability to get on with "the Greasers," Mrs. Dodd was extracting good and loyal labor from them by treating them with humane consideration. On her ranch she has built comfortable homes, instead of tumble-down huts, for their shelter. When they or their children are ill she provides a physician's care for them. She maintains a school for their little ones. In return for this kindness she has at her back a more loyal army of Mexicans than that which supports the new President of the Republic on the south.

Meanwhile the profits from the onion farm they were stubbornly increasing. Two years ago the profit was $40,000. Last year it exactly doubled that amount.

Mrs. Dodd classifies herself as "a practical, not a scientific, farmer." She has none of the theoretical knowledge poured into the minds of the pupils at the agricultural colleges. But she knows the soil and climate of Texas as she knows her own features in the mirror, and her neighbors say she is a "sure guesser," which is Texas for being of conservative habit.

MY SECRETS OF BEAUTY-

No. 131-MORE SUMMER HINTS.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

"The cause of Summer colds is the habit of underdressed women leaving heated ball rooms for the cool piazzas."

"Apply a mixture of scraped horseradish and milk to the face to remove freckles."

"Chocolate would better be forgotten from May to October."

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

OF timely as well as permanent value, as usual, is Mme. Cavalieri's beauty article to-day. She writes Mid-Summer warnings and advice which are of special vaule as the National Independence Day approaches.

Mme. Cavalieri's warnings are directed chiefly against heat making foods, against the dangers that lurk in dust, against Summer sore throat and against injudicious clothing at the Mid-Summer season.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri

WHILE it is always advisable to have great care about your diet, that your food be nourishing but not clogging, the Summer is the season when that care should be greatest. If you must eat candy, do your candy eating in the Spring, Fall or Winter, but not in the Summer.

Candy adds to the surplus of heat already stored in the body, and flushes the face and gives the skin the greasy appearance of one whose face has just been oiled. Chocolate would better be forgotten from May to October. In fact, all persons who are overweight, or who have an oily skin would better forget that there is an edible or a drink called chocolate.

The pasty and starchy foods should be shunned in Summer. Eat less bread than before; no white bread unless it be toasted. Graham and whole wheat bread and their many varieties are better for the digestion in the heated seasons. It is best also to eat little meat, not more than once a day, as I have before said, and better less. The white meats are better for the Summer months than the dark. Better a plate of cold chicken with a green salad than a rare roast with hot vegetables. And stewed fruits are preferable to raw. Cold drinks should never be taken while you are overheated.

Hoarseness is one of the Summer afflictions that is liable to follow carelessness in diet. Summer colds are often the result of eating. Tonsilitis has often followed the greedy devouring of a box of candy.

Dust disease is another foe of beauty that makes its attack more openly and fiercely in the Summer than in the Winter. The dust of the city streets or of the country roads settle into the exposed membrane of nose and lungs and causes an irritation with all the symptoms of colds. Safeguard yourself from this exposure by washing the face, or, what is more effective, carry one of the wire screens now recommended for protection from dust. They are especially useful when traveling. The wire or cloth which covers them is sterilized so that none but clean air can pass through them.

Another symptom of the Summer colds or dust diseases is an irritated or raw throat. You will experience relief from this troublesome condition by gargling the throat frequently with salt water. If you are at the seashore or are on one of the transatlantic steamers when the raw throat manifests itself nature's salt water is at your service. Freely use it.

Water, 1 pint.

If in spite of these precautions the throat remains sore and hoarseness continues I advise you to see a physician. The condition may develop into something serious. At no time, and particularly while the throat is "raw" and the voice is husky, do not try with your speech to rival any great noise. Don't try to make your companion hear you at the opera, though probably your good taste will make this advice unnecessary, and never talk while on a trolley or the surface or underground roads.

If you discover a fresh crop of freckles and are beyond the aid of a fashionable chemist, there are two good, old-fashioned remedies always within reach. These are horseradish and buttermilk.

Sour milk, 1 teacupful.
Horseradish, 1 teaspoonful.

Scrape the horseradish and place it in the buttermilk. Stir it and leave in a cool place for six hours or more. Apply to the face, leaving it on until it begins to smart. Then remove with cold cream.

Be careful about your clothing in the Summer. Dress neither "too cool" nor "too warm," but adapt your clothing not to the season but the day. Don't pack up an entirely Winter wardrobe if you are going to the mountains, nor an exclusively Summer wardrobe for a valley farm. Have an extra cloth gown in one case for a sudden "cool turn," or a tub dress for the unexpected but possible "warm turn," of which the country people warn us. Mistakes that have been paid for in lifelong illness, or even in death have been made in the matter of neglecting to provide these extra garments.

Last Summer a young friend of mine returned from a tour of the Riviera much frightened because of unsightly blotches that quickly developed into pimples. These covered half her body and were appalling sights recalling our childish recollections of scarlet fever. When I saw this display, I said,

"My dear, they are nervous pimples."

"Nervous pimples!" she exclaimed.

I told her there is a sort of pimples that affect young girls, or their elders, who are of a nervous disposition. Nervousness disturbs the circulation, and the circulation, striving to rid itself of the humors in the blood, flings them off in the form of a mass of pimples, collecting on the fleshy parts of the body, usually the abdomen.

For this affection I have known this salve to be helpfully used:

Spermaceti ointment, ½ ounce.
Glycerine, ½ dram.
Bicarbonate of soda, 20 grains.

Sometimes pus collects in these eruptions, dries and forms a scale on the top of the ugly red swelling. In such event this application is useful:

Distilled water, ½ pint.
Iodide of potassium, 1 dram.

Apply each freely on the affected parts when needed. The first may be rubbed on and left for a quarter of an hour. The latter should be applied with sterilized gauze or with soft linen.

LABLACHE
FACE POWDER
As the Touch of Summer
developes the fragrance of the rose, so does Lablache increase the complexion that blooms through so much of the beauty of refinement. Delicately perfumed, it adds a new charm to the skin from summer sun and keeping it clear, smooth and velvety.

Why Doesn't He Propose?

ALMOST every one smiles at a father of bygone days who asked the intentions of any man who ventured to dance more than once in an evening with his daughter, or showed the least interest in her society, or paid her what to-day we should regard as the most ordinary of attentions.

In the god—or bad!—old days, that misleading and miserable subterfuge for an engagement, described as an "understanding," could never occur. No man would be given the chance to beguile a girl into one, and, assuredly, had he managed to circumvent guardians and chaperons and make alittle unauthorized love, most certainly would his inamorata immediately have modestly bade him "ask papa."

There were no shilly shallying lovers in those days. A man who could not put some definite period to the length of his betrothal did not venture to woo, and in these respects surely the old way was better than the new.

The man who steals the best years of a girl's life, and then deserts her for some younger, fresher rival, is too often seen. Sometimes he does so consciously, in utter selfishness—then, indeed, are the services of a father or brother with a strong right arm badly required—but far more often he drifts as carelessly out of, as into, the affair, and remains quite comfortably unaware of wrecking a woman's life.

He gives her "good times," because, to do him justice, man is usually generous when even a woman "pal" is concerned, and, in return, he exacts more and more from her as the years drift by.

He absolutely monopolizes her society to the exclusion of that of all other men. He is quite ready to be peevishly jealous should she show the smallest favor to one of them; yet that he is destroying all other chance of marriage for her, and leading both her and her little world to believe that he means to marry her himself, is an idea he indignantly scouts—should it be presented to him.

And then one day Love comes into his life, and, quite happily, he marries some girl who has power to touch his heart, as all the other's silent love and devotion has never had.

He "never mentioned marriage," never even made love to her. Loyally the deserted "pal" tells herself that he is blameless, and that only she herself is guilty of deceit—in that her hopes led her into believing that he cared even as she did.

Sometimes the man who never speaks of marriage does get as far as an engagement! Maybe papa was old-fashioned, and asked his intentions. Anyway, it happened when all the world was young, and she was in the first freshness of her youth.

Friends and relations showed good wishes and congratulations. Little gifts come along for the "bottom drawer." Every one talks of the prospective wedding—save the prospective bridegroom—and months and years drift by.

Younger sisters are married and settled down. Girl friends who were not even engaged are sober matrons—and still he never speaks of marriage, or makes feeble excuses for putting it off, should he be cornered by a father or brother absolutely out of patience.

Youthful freshness is all gone and with it all the joy and excitement of her love-dream. Well for the victim of the man who never speaks of marriage, if, in the end she does not find herself deserted, under some other feeble, plausible excuse, when at last it is borne up on her fiance that he really does not desire to marry her at all!

EXPRESS LINES CUT RATES AS PROBE BEGINS

Reduction Comes on Top of Announcement of Sweeping Investigation of Practices and Charges of the Companies

Every Phase of Business to Be Subjected to the Searchlight, Despite Rush to Put Tariffs on a More Reasonable Basis

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided to subject the express companies to an investigation of the most searching character and the express companies, evidently to meet the investigation, have reduced their rates to take effect August 10

There will be an inquiry into rates, classifications, regulations and practices of all the express companies, notwithstanding.

The commission will go thoroughly into the question of alleged division of territory among the several companies, pooling arrangements or gentleman's agreements, if any such exist. The character of freights carried by the express companies, the amount of matter that would be mailable if presented to the postal service and the prices charged for such matter with revenues derived therefrom will form also, an important and interesting feature of the inquiry.

Rush to Cover Up.

On the eve of this promulgation of this order, the express companies rushed to the commission a revision of their tariff rates While but a cursory examination of the new rates have been made by the tariff experts of the commission it is evident the express companies have made sweeping reductions in their rates to become effective August 1, the law requiring thirty days' notice of change in rates.

In the case of long hauls of express packages to non-competitive points the reductions amount in some instances to 100 per cent. There are substantial reductions on ninety per cent. of the traffic handled by the express companies. There has been abandonment of the double graduate system of charging for express packages under 300 pounds weight.

Every express company formerly charged its own rate for the distance haule, while under the new schedule the charge will be based on a through haul. The only express company that failed to get in with new tariffs was the Long Island Company

The filing of the new tariffs, however, will not change the plans of the commission. No regulations of any railroad or set of railroads, no rates or classifications by such railroads have been subjected to a more exhaustive investigation than is to be made by the commission into the rates of the express companies.

The work will include public hearings in Washington and elsewhere by the commission to shippers, with right of the express companies to make defense. Examiners and investigators of the commission will be sent throughout the country and the books of the various companies will be searched.

The investigation of the express companies is undertaken by the commission on its own initiative under a recent amendment of the railroad rate law giving the commission that right, but the commission has before it specific charges against all the express companies filed by Benjamin E. Sundbert, who contends that the rates, classification and regulations of the express companies filed with the commission are unjust, unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory, unduly preferential and prejudicial and otherwise in violation of the acts to regulate commerce.

SEVERAL INJURED IN HEAD-ON CAR CRASH

Women With Babes In Arms Jump From Crowded Electrics Near Portsmouth.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 1.—Two electric cars heavily loaded with passengers on the Atlantic shore line railway met in a head-on collision this afternoon, several passengers being injured.

The more seriously hurt were:

Mrs. Frank S. Getchell, ankle broken

John Hazeltine of Contoocook, N. H face badly cut

Mrs. Harry Foote of Portsmouth, bruised about legs and body

Oscar Clark of Kittery Point, head bruised.

Mrs. George Dizon of Kittery, badly shaken up and bruised

Three or more children cut on head and face by coming in contact with seats.

A number of other passengers were injured by jumping. The cars were crowded with Summer people going to and coming from York Beach. The accident occurred at the foot of a hill and at a point where a side track joins the main line.

SAN FRANCISCO SHAKES.

Man Dies of Fright When Quake Shock is Felt.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—One man dead of fright and several people cut and bruised, in addition to minor damage to buildings, the breaking of glass and crockery are the results of two distinct shocks of the earthquake that shook San Francisco and the State of California from San Jose at the south, to Fresno in the north and reaching into Nevada this afternoon.

The dead man is Herbert Hatley. He roomed at a lodging house and fell dead when the shocks were first felt. The duration of the tremors was about thirty seconds. In San Francisco the first tremor was accompanied by a deep, rumbling reverberation which usually presages a disturbance of serious extent.

Former Governor Will Insist That Russian Outrages on Jews Must Stop.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Followed by the congratulations and good wishes of scores of personal and political friends, Ambassador Guild and Mrs. Guild of Boston sailed on the liner Caronia today for Mr. Guild's diplomatic post at St. Petersburg

Ambassador Guild declined to indicate what measures he will take to obtain just treatment for Americans now victims of the Czar's policies.

But it is understood he carries urgent representation from President Taft as to Russian outrages on American citizens of Hebrew birth.

The recent agitation of the passport question will have to be taken up at once by Ambassador Guild, it is believed in Washington. Mr. Guild is keenly alive to the importance of the mission he is beginning The Jews are not the only religionists who have been oppressed in Russia, and all are looking forward with great hopes to the result of Ambassador Guild's mission. They believe that a man of his type can accomplish a great deal in Russia's treatment of her former citizens.

The former governor of Massachusetts and his wife were obliged to hold an informal reception on the dock of the Caronia for more than an hour before she sailed. Several intimate friends came over from Boston especially to bid them farewell and many of Mr. Guild's political and military friends in the city were on hand to congratulate the Bay State man on his appointment to the important post of ambassador to Russia. Representatives of the State department at Washington were also in the party.

The Guild suite on the Caronia was filled with flowers, the parting gifts of their friends both in this city and Boston

Included in that portion of the ambassador's baggage which was guarded with special care is a handsome American flag the gift of George J. Whitten camp, Spanish War Veterans, of Boston, of which Mr. Guild is a member The flag will ornament his private office in the embassy at St. Petersburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Guild plan a leisurely progress to St. Petersburg They will make a short stay in England, then in France and expect to visit Vienna and to spend some time in Berlin before going to the Czar's capital.

Ambassador Guild had nothing to say to the newspaper men on the pier regarding his diplomatic work. He said he was now in the service of the United States and that he could not talk on matters relating to any diplomatic question existing or likely to come up between the United States and Russia. He laughingly parried the question as to whether he had in the few weeks since his appointment acquired a working knowledge of the Russian language by the retort that he had always supposed French was the language of diplomacy

Mrs. Guild expressed herself as pleased with the assurances she had received that everything would be done to make their stay in St. Petersburg a pleasant one. She is assured of a cordial welcome in the most exclusive circles of the Russian capital. Her charming personality and her grace and tact as a hostess are expected to make the American embassy in St Petersburg one of the most popular social centres in that city.

MRS. SHONTS SUES HUSBAND, IS REPORT

Paris Hears Wife of New York Traction Magnate Seeks Absolute Separation.

PAPERS ALREADY SERVED

She Is With Daughter, Duchess de Chaulnes, and Is Said to Be Ill.

PARIS, July 1.—The statement was made here this afternoon that Mrs Theodore F. Shonts, wife of the president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of New York, and a recognized society leader in America, has caused papers to be served on her husband in a suit for separation.

S. G. Archibald, an attorney, who says he is counsel for Mrs. Shonts, is authority for the announcement. Archibald has been in the United States recently. Mrs. Shonts is now at the home of her daughter, the Duchesse De Chaulnes.

Divorce Not Wanted.

Mr Archibald, although unwilling to discuss details of the Shonts matrimonial differences, made it plain that the proceeding was not a petition for an absolute divorce, but was merely for separate, absolute maintenance and freedom from marital obligations.

"Mrs. Shonts is reluctant to have the public know her differences with her husband," said Mr. Archibald, "but conditions are such that she has felt compelled to appeal to the courts for release. As both she and her husband are residents of New York the suit will be brought there

"The petition to the Supreme Court is now in the hands of Lavenstritt, Cook & Nathan, attorneys of New York, and a copy of it was served on Mr. Shonts about a fortnight ago.

"I cannot say whether the summons and complaint have been filed with the New York courts, but if not they will be filed within the next few days."

Since her arrival in Paris Mrs. Shonts has remained in strict seclusion at the apartments of her daughter. She has many friends here, but none has seen her. All callers have been informed that she is "ill and can see no one."

NEW YORK, July 1.—Theodore P. Shonts was not at the offices of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company to-day. His assistant, Mr. Pepperman, said that he was on a motoring trip and would not be back until Wednesday. Mr. Pepperman said that he had been busy for a week denying rumors on behalf of Mr. Shonts and that he knew anything of Mrs. Shonts determination to sue for a separation.

Mrs. Shonts was Harriet Amelia Dunk. She was married to Mr. Shonts in 1882 in Centreville, Iowa. They have two daughters, one of them Theodora, who was married to the Duke De Chaulnes in 1908 and became a widow a few weeks later.

Mrs Shonts is very fond of society and has made many careers for her daughters Theodora and Margaret since they entered Washington society at the time Mr. Shonts became chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission.

Trouble Over Clothing.

Mrs. Shonts had a squabble with the customs officials of this port in December last because of the enormous quantity of fine clothes which she brought with her from Europe and which were said not to be properly declared. The five pieces of jewelry, which had not been declared at all, were seized at the Shonts' apartments at the Plaza, where Mr. Shonts and his wife made their home until her recent departure for Europe. In September, 1909, Mr. Shonts was sued for $200,000 damages by the husband of a women whose affections he was accused of having alienated The suit was brought by Frederick Hipsh, the New York manager of a Kentucky whisky distillery.

Through his attorney, De Lancey Nicholl, Mr. Shonts declared it was not he but his "double" who was meant. As to the identity of the "double" there was no hint. Shonts, it was said, met Mrs Hipsh in the Summer of 1907 at Narragansett Pier.

Mr. Shonts declared he did not know the woman and that if Hipsh had found a telegram asking Mrs. Hipsh to meet the sender at Asbury Park, signed with Mr Shonts's name, it was a case of somebody else using his name. The AMERICAN investigated the case thoroughly at the time and it did not find any foundation for the charges.

No Hint of Scandal.

Mr. Shonts's private life, prior to and since that suit, has been wholly free from scandal. He is one of the most eminent engineers in the world and was selected by former President Roosevelt to draw the Panama canal work. He resigned that post to accept a salary reported to be $100,000 a year offered by Mr. Ryan. He is rich apart from his salary and belongs to many clubs and societies and personally is very popular.

CARNEGIE SAYS LAW MUST FIX PRICES

LONDON, July 1 In reply to a request for his opinion, Andrew Carnegie today addressed the following telegram from Skibo Castle to a London newspaper:

"My view is that the individual of the directors of the steel corporation should be made in strict obedience with the law but the result of the trial will determine whether it will be correct To put a premium on release of the directors, in my opinion, is of trifling moment

"What we must recognize is that combinations do take place and that these cannot be allowed to determine prices

"The court of commerce which is already regulating railway charges will be found amply sufficient to regulate coal and oil prices. There can be only one remedy for all this agitation and that is that the court of commerce will have access to all papers of industrial companies and fix prices liberal and fair to the actual capital invested and fair to the consumer

"To this completion must it come at length

Italian Auto Driver Makes New World's Record.

LONDON, July 1 —A world's record for automobiles was created at Salisbury-on-the-Sea today by P. Bordino, the Italian driver, who covered 116.13 miles in one hour at the Yorkshire Automobile Club

"I will telegraph to Charles Hamilton in San Francisco to-night," he declared, "and see if he will go into the trans-continental race for $50,000 with me. If he will help, I will undertake it

"I have been studying [illegible] up in New Hampshire, and shall go West to study [illegible] and their effects on aeroplaning above the Rockies. I feel confident I [illegible] make the trip from New York to Chicago. My biplane is the fastest and strongest machine ever built and I am not afraid of any flight with it

BOSTON SHARES IN CHAMPIONSHIP HONORS.

To Boston not only comes the honor of [illegible] the world's record in Atwood's [illegible] trip, but the machine in which [illegible] was made was manufactured by the Burgess Curtis company, Marblehead The [illegible] that stood the great test and in [illegible] Atwood sailed the air [illegible] from New London to Brooklyn was a Burgess Wright biplane

Atwood's own story dictated for publication in the Sunday AMERICAN follows

By HARRY N. ATWOOD.

It was a fine trip. I found out what I wanted to and so I am satisfied It was all real hard work. I am all tired out. I have been flying almost continuously for two days

I left Armstrong Park at New London at 7:07 this morning. I had not intended getting away before 7:30, but as everything was ready and atmospheric conditions seemed perfect I decided that I might as well be on my way.

I got away all right and pointed the [illegible] of the biplane toward the Sound. I rose to an altitude of about 2,000 feet. When I made up my mind to change the flight to New York I headed about for see if I could find a boat to convey me on the Sound, but the first one did not start until after dark. So I gave up that idea

The weather to New Haven was [illegible] Most of the way I averaged about 1,500 feet, although at times I dropped nearer to the earth in order to pick out landmarks.

After leaving New Haven, I hovered over trains which were leaving that city. One was a local, the other an express. They were running side by side. I wanted to show what speed I had so I made three circles to allow the trains to get up speed. When they did I went right after them and left the local way behind, and ran with the express from New Haven to Bridgeport and to Norwalk. Near Bridgeport, the trains got a slight lead. That was when I descended to within fifty feet of the ground

About the time I was travelling seventy miles an hour, I kept to the right of the trains. Again the train gained on me. But at Bridge-

MOTHER RISKS LIFE FOR DROWNING SON

In an attempt to save the life of her 7-year-old Edward M. Merritt, his mother and fourteen-year-old brother plunged into the harbor from the four masted schooner Stream B. Caplan yesterday afternoon. The ward was drowned and the mother and other children were rescued the same fate.

Both the Merritt, the son of Captain Merritt of Scituate, Mass., were playing on the deck of the schooner when he fell overboard. His mother, who was heard by his mother, jumped after him. In a flash both disappeared in the water, swimming along side the steamer and searching for the drowning child. A generally the body never rises to the surface.

The mother was then claimed to have the last time in her struggle to keep the boy's head above water, and from their water he was taken. The other children were also dragged from the water by Watchman, and Captain Harrison of the [illegible] Captain Merritt, the father, was [illegible] and searching for the [illegible] and [illegible] Thompson.

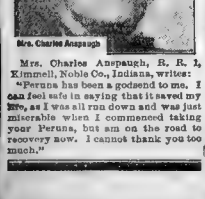
"I BELIEVE PE-RU-NA SAVED MY LIFE."



Mrs. Charles Anspaugh

Mrs. Charles Anspaugh, R. R. 2, Kimmell, Noble Co., Indiana, writes: "Peruna has been a godsend to me. I can feel safe in saying that it saved my life, as I was all run down and was just miserable when I commenced taking your Peruna, but am on the road to recovery now. I cannot thank you too much."

MRS. FRANK McCANN, WHOSE HONEYMOON WAITS TWO YEARS

MRS. FRANK McCANN

Mrs. McCann, who was married in August, 1909, is just going on her wedding trip, her marriage having been kept secret

HONEYMOONS on hold two years instead of two weeks, for here are Mr and Mrs Frank H McCann, who were married August 29, 1909, just starting off for a wedding trip through Maine. Incidentally their friends who have been looking for a wedding morning during the last few years, don't know anything of this one until yesterday, that it was announced in letters the young couple went to their parents, just before sailing, of what was supposed to be a vacation trip.

Mrs. McCann, who was Miss Ethel M. Doig, of No. 81 Charles street, Waltham, has worked for the Waltham Watch Company for some time, and Mr. McCann of No. 1 River street, was with the Keystone Manufacturing Company, near by. They were introduced to each other at a ball about five years ago, when Miss Doig was twenty and the young man eighteen. Ever since they have been most devoted, but there was no suspicion that a wedding had already occurred.

ANOTHER DELICIOUS TREAT! FREE

Yours truly

TRADE MARK

Soups--FREE

Here is Yours truly treat No. 2. This time it is soups. Soups that are better than the home-made kind—that are better than any soups you can buy.

Like the entire Yours truly line, Yours truly Condensed Soups are vastly superior in flavor.

Take the Tomato Soup for example. Here is a soup that is full tomato flavor. It is made of red, ripe tomatoes, grown in the greatest tomato country in the world. The kitchens are located in the heart of this district. The tomatoes are brought to us the same day they are picked, and then only the choice are selected for Yours truly Tomato Soup.

Only the rich juices of the real fruit is used, and this is doubly condensed; pure spices and condiments are added, and the result is that genuine, delicious tomato flavor.

There are 12 different varieties of Yours truly Soups prepared in that same careful manner as is the tomato soup, both in regard to the selection of materials and the making each with that genuine flavor that make them strictly Yours truly quality.

You will undoubtedly find your favorite in the list above, but if you have no particular preference would suggest that you try the Tomato Soup. For no similar soup can approach Yours truly Tomato Soup in flavor—in real tomato "zip."

So cut out the coupon NOW, present it to your grocer to-morrow—It is good for this one day only.
He will present you with a full-size ten-cent can of delicious Yours truly Soup, absolutely free.
Try it for dinner to-morrow and learn how really superior it is to any other soup you ever tasted.
Remember, too, that there are many other Yours truly good things to eat—all are as superior in quality as Yours truly Pork and Beans or Yours truly Soups.
Make Yours truly your standard and look for the name on the label next time you order provisions.

OME OF THE INTERESTING VIEWS THE SUNDAY AMERICAN CAMERA CAUGHT WHEN THE TAFTS CAME BACK TO BEVERLY FOR THE VACATION SEASON

The large picture at the left on top shows the President and Miss Helen Taft posing for Sears. The famous "Taft smile" has just been coaxed to appear on the Presidential countenance. At the right, on top, Mr. Taft is seen assisting Miss Torrey to leave the train at the station. Below, at the left is Charlie Taft "snapped" while reading about Atwood's flight in the AMERICAN. Then comes a smaller figure of the President as he stood on the steps of the cottage. The next picture is of Mrs. Taft, also "snapped" as she was getting off the train. The head is of Charlie Taft, showing a characteristic expression. Then comes a smaller view of Mr. Taft and his daughter, taken just before the Chief Executive smiled. At the extreme right is Charlie Taft again, this time showing him in his lately-acquired, long-trousered suit. Just beneath is the President in a typical pose.

Holiday for the Chief Executive Will Be Short, for He Leaves This Afternoon for the West—Jumps at Once Into Vacation Spirit, Plays Golf With Major Butt and Then Takes Motor Ride With His Wife

BEVERLY, July 1.—President Taft, who arrived this morning for his first visit to the new "Summer White House," beamed his famous smile to-night as he sat at the head of the table for the first dinner party in Beverly this season. To add to the joy that filled the household "Aunt Delia" Torrey of Millbury was present, and she, too, wore a beaming smile.

The dinner was a family reunion. Mrs. Taft, who is looking very well, came with the President on his special train from Boston, along with Charlie Taft. Miss Helen Taft arrived this afternoon from Hamilton, and the other son, Robert, came to-night. It was the first time the family has been together since the silver wedding anniversary in Washington.

To-night the circle was a good deal merrier than at that time, for Mrs. Taft has rapidly recovered from the illness which prevented her participating in the formal reception at the White House two weeks ago.

The President spent practically the entire day to-day out of doors. Until early in the afternoon he was indulging in his favorite sport on the links at the Myopia Golf Club. Later he motored along the shore with Mrs. Taft and Miss Torrey. The mere sight of Beverly seems to have refreshed him, and he looked pleased at the idea of putting in a whole day at home with the family.

All Beverly has shared in the happy spirit. It was made manifest this morning when the presidential party was warmly welcomed at the Montserrat station. Since that hour the town has seen its joy stock boomed right along. Everybody seems the happier for having the President and having the honor of being the Summer capital, even if it is but for a short time. Mr. Taft leaves here tomorrow afternoon for his trip to the West. It is likely to be two or three weeks before he will be able to return to Beverly.

Young Charlie Taft was a unit as glad as any of the rest of the Tafts to get back here. As he stepped from the train, his friends and the townspeople saw him in a new guise, for he was sporting his man's length trousers for the first time on Beverly ground.

President and Mrs. Taft left Washington last night and arrived in the South Station, Boston, an hour late this morning. Their private car Ideal was attached to the Federal express. The Pullman with the presidential party aboard was detached from the express and drawn by a special locomotive to Cottage Farm and thence to East Somerville, where it was delivered by the Boston & Albany to the Boston & Maine train crew.

Crowd Greets the Party.

The special, having annexed a baggage car along the way, drew into the Montserrat station at 9.21 o'clock. There was a crowd of several hundred on hand to greet the President. They cheered as he emerged from the coach with Mrs. Taft, "Aunt Delia," Charlie, Major Butt, the President's aide, and two Secret Service men.

Well, Beverly looks better than ever to me," exclaimed the President, as his smile made a big intake of the fresh air. He then helped his wife and aunt into one of the big White House autos, hopped in himself and was followed by Major Butt.

It was Miss Torrey's first visit to the new Taft summer home, and she seemed greatly pleased as her nephew assisted her to alight after a half mile drive from the station. Charlie Taft and the secret service men followed them in a second auto.

The President made but a hasty inspection of "Pierremarie," the Peabody cottage which occupies the Evans cottage a mile away at Burgess Point, in his affections. He also Mrs. Taft and "Aunt Delia" comfortably seated on the piazza, and turning to Major Butt, showed his inclination by saying:

"Well, Major, let's go over to Myopia and see if we can't beat old Colonel Boles' way."

It was about 3.30 when the pair motored off toward the Myopia Golf Club, and they played until nearly two o'clock, when they came back to Montserrat. After luncheon the President, chug-chugged over the shore drive, with Mrs. Taft and Miss Torrey. Later in the afternoon upon his return the President greeted Richard W. Sears of the Boston AMERICAN staff of photographers, and consented to pose in front of the camera.

Charlie Taft Snapped, Too.

Sears also got pictures of Charlie Taft, and caught him reading the AMERICAN to learn about Atwood's wonderful flight from New London to New York. Charlie is greatly interested in aviation and last summer had a knack of spending much of the time that he wasn't fishing at the W Sterling, Burgess plant at Marblehead

Miss Helen Taft who has been a guest of the Misses Alys and Julia Meyer, daughters of Secretary of the Navy Meyer, arrived here from Hamilton, arriving at 3 o'clock.

The only callers on the Tafts to-day was Miss Mabel Boardman, chairman of the Red Cross Society, who was recently given an honorary degree of Master of Arts by Yale.

The President's private car leaves tomorrow morning at 10.45 o'clock for Boston. The President with Major Butt will motor to Boston to-morrow afternoon, leaving here about 2 o'clock. They will leave South Station for the West, by way of Albany.

He will be in Indianapolis for the Fourth as the guest of former Vice-President Fairbanks. He will review a parade in that city and see a prearranged head-on railroad collision at the Indiana State Fair grounds. He speaks before the Marion Club in Indianapolis Tuesday night. He will return to Washington July 5.

Mrs. Taft and the children will remain here all Summer but the President will probably be detained in Washington until Congress adjourns. He expects to make frequent trips to Beverly for the week ends which the President alighted. He helped Miss Torrey to the automobile into which Mrs. Taft had stepped. Mrs. Taft reached out and took Miss Torrey's hand and she and the President found the aged woman into the car and they whirled away.

While this was going on I got three snaps which was a big scare because it all happened within the fraction of a minute. The crowd cheered the President as he started and he lifted his hat.

Then eleven of us—all camera men—piled into a motor car and chased the President. We landed at the entrance to the Summer White House at Beverly. That was only a three minute run from the train.

Mr. Sloan and Mr. Jarvis of the President's force of attendants came on laughing.

"Well, you boys wait until later," they asked, knowing that we wanted some pictures.

"No, no, we have got to get the picture now for the afternoon papers," one of the party replied.

I had some pictures for the afternoon edition of the AMERICAN and I thought it pretty good dope to wait a while. So I started to move away one

"Not Service men said.

"You fix, we follow like a bird and you'll get your pictures all right."

Just as we were making the Press box and Charlie Taft came out on their way to the golf grounds Major Butt was with them. We got a snap of the President and Miss Torrey coming out of the President and Mrs. Taft followed promptly. Then we all went into town and returned later in the day after the President had come back from the golf links.

When I reached the grounds I heard laughter and pretty soon I caught sight of Charlie Taft batting a golf ball about.

"Hello, Charlie," I called out.

"Oh, hello," he called back.

"Did you get the pictures I sent you of you fishing?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "They were fine. Thank you."

"I want a new picture of you."

"No I don't care for it."

"I know you don't but I do."

"Well, if that's the way you feel about it, all right."

Charlie Reads of Flight.

Charlie sauntered down to the gate and I snapped his picture. We chatted about things, and I asked Charlie what he thought of Atwood's aeroplane flight to New York. He hadn't heard of it.

"Here's an AMERICAN with it in," I said, "would you like to read it?" I asked Charlie.

He took the paper and eagerly read the story of the Roxbury boy's great air flight. While he was looking over the paper I took a snap of him. Then he hurried up to the house.

The Glorious Fourth

Hurrah for the New Fourth!—the Fourth That Is Both Safe and Sane.

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK

HURRAH for the Glorious Fourth in this year of 1911!

Hurrah, for this is to be the most glorious Fourth in scores of years—a Fourth over which the spirit of the forefathers who made it possible broods with beneficent influences.

The people of the United States have rediscovered the Declaration of Independence. As it will be read in historic Faneuil Hall in Boston next Tuesday, so it will be read in hall and schoolhouse and church and grove throughout the land.

"We hold," wrote Thomas Jefferson, "these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

So the people of the American Colonies felt 135 years ago and so they are beginning to feel in earnest again. The brutal features of the day have passed for the most part and it is to be hoped that not a single life or limb will be sacrificed in a mistaken endeavor to manifest a patriotic spirit.

During the last eight Fourths in the United States 1,662 people were killed and 35,620 were maimed. What do you suppose Thomas Jefferson or Benjamin Franklin would say to that if he were to come back to earth to-day?

But the insane idea that NOISE means LOVE OF COUNTRY has been dissipated. This year's Fourth will be celebrated in a SANE manner, with instructive addresses, music, pageants, games—a day of PATRIOTIC PLEASURE, instead of a day of pain and suffering in many homes.

The people of the country are getting nearer to the truth that "all men are created equal" under the laws of the land. Within the last year many of the rich and powerful have been made to feel the heavy hand of the Law and the country has been made to realize that all men ARE EQUAL under law.

The steps that have been taken to save the boys and girls on the Fourth from death or injury shows that the love for humanity that inspired the brave men of 1776 is again flaming in the hearts of their descendants.

Then, hurrah for the NEW Fourth—the Fourth that is both safe and sane!

"I was born an American, I will live an American, I will die an American."—Daniel Webster.

"Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those united colonies, are, and of rights ought to be, free and independent States."—(John Adams in a letter to Mrs. Adams.)

"The Fourth day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as a great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the date of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other from this time forward for evermore."—(John Adams in a letter to Mrs. Adams.)

"Thank God! I also am an American!"—Daniel Webster.

ROXBURY DAY A PART OF BOSTON'S PROGRAM

Boston's official celebration of the Fourth will be memorable as marking the first public exercises commemorating Roxbury Day. Every other district of the city has its special holiday, but Roxbury had been neglected up to this year.

The official celebration will begin on the night before at Intercolonial Hall with feast and song. William T. A. Fitzgerald, register of deeds, is to be toastmaster. Mr. Fitzgerald will introduce Governor Foss for "The Commonwealth," Congressman Curley for "The United States," Acting Mayor Walter L. Collins for "The City of Boston." Councilor Walter Ballantyne for "The History of Roxbury," Hon. Thomas H. Dowd for "Independence Day," Mgr. D. J. O'Farrell, Rev. Charles L. Page and Rabbi M. Eichler to respond for "Civil and Religious Liberty," and Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and Congressman Peters who will respond to the toast "Patriotism."

Roxbury stores, clubs and residences are fast being decorated. The affair will commemorate the founding of Roxbury, which was settled by a small band of Puritans the first week in July in the year 1630.

The chief feature of the day's celebration will be the parade, which is to be held in the forenoon. Blue jackets, marines, soldiers from the harbor forts and the Ninth regiment will participate in the military portion of the display. The first section will also include Troop D, Roxbury Horse Guards; the Minute Men of Lexington, letters carriers from the four Roxbury stations, accompanied by their own band, and the high school and Dudley school cadets.

Prizes For Paraders.

The second section will include automobiles owned and decorated by residents of the district. A prize will be awarded the owner of the best decorated machine, as well as the best costumed club and individual in the horribles. Patrick J. Kearns has charge of the horribles portion of the parade, and an exhibition that will furnish enjoyment to thousands is promised. Laughable caricatures of the fads and follies of the day and animated characters seen daily in the comic columns, will be among the features shown.

The following organizations will participate in the features parade: The Roxbury Bachelor Club, Mt. Pleasant Council, K. C.; Tammany Club, Clan Ramsey, Highland Dress Association, Intercolonial Club, Echo Outing Club, Roxbury Boys' Club, the Page Class and the St. Alphonsus Association.

The games will be held on the three playgrounds in the afternoon—Marcella street, 4.30 p. m.; Columbus avenue, 3.30 p. m. and Norfolk avenue at 2.30 p. m. There will be senior and junior events, including 100 yard dash, one mile run, 75 and 200-yard dash, 600-yard run and relay races.

The route of the parade will be from Francis and Tremont streets and Huntington avenue down Tremont street to Roxbury Crossing, Roxbury street, Eliot square, Washington, Warren and Dudley streets to Blue Hill avenue, Quincy to Warren street, past the Joseph Warren statue where it will be reviewed, and then to Dudley and Warren streets.

Following is the list of officers of the Roxbury Day Celebration Association:

President, William N. Hackett; vice-presidents, John D. Regan and Michael Shay, secretary, Adolph Ackerman; treasurer, Charles M. Faunce.

Parade committee, Captain Albert B. Chick; athletic committee, John D. Regan; press committee, Arthur J. Good; public decorations, George A. Merrill; banquet, Councilman Walter Ballantyne; transportation, Joseph Webber; reception, Frederick J. Crosby.

Following are members of the general committee, of which Councilman Ballantyne is the chairman. Judge Abraham Cohen, Frederick J. Crosby, Timothy Smith, Robert Molineaux, Albert J. Foster, Augustus Bacon, Arthur J. Good, C. M. Faunce, Joseph Webber, Nathan G. Smith, Michael Shay, Harry P. Nawn, Frank W. McLaughlin, R. F. Andrews, Anselm Bacon, Arthur Foster, G. A. Brackett, Jr., Congressman James M. Curley, Edward A. Fallon, William Blodgett, E. W. King, Frank J. Connelly, John D. Regan, Senator James F. Timilty, Francis X. Flask, M. W. Somers, Charles McGarvey, Herbert Brooks, George Sinnott, Jr., Frank S. Waterman, Representative James W. Kenney, Senator M. F. F. Curley, John F. Dever, John F. Kelley, A. B. Chick, G. H. Markthew, Arthur J. Shinners, Henry L. Kelly, W. L. Russell.

City Appropriates $10,000.

This year the city of Boston has allowed $10,000 for the July 4 celebration. Of this amount $3,500 has been allowed to Roxbury for its district celebration, and the remainder will be given to the various districts for neighborhood entertainment.

The big event on the morning program of the city's celebration will be the games on the Common at 9 a. m. These will be held under the direction of Joseph D. McNamara, and all the crack amateur athletes have already filled out entrance blanks. Solid gold watches will be given for first prizes in each event, gold filled watches for second prizes and medals for third prizes. There will be seven events, including the 100, 220 and 440 yard dashes and long distance runs.

In the afternoon there will be a Gaelic football match on the Common and the annual distribution of flowers to the children by the Floral Emblem Society. Band concerts will also be on the Common program in the morning and afternoon.

The fireworks in the evening will be set off on the Charles River Basin, Jamaica Pond, Franklin Field, Wood Island Park, Marine Park and on the Washington street playground, Forest Hills. Elaborate displays will be furnished at each exhibition.

Band concerts will be given in the evening at Jamaica Pond, Orient Heights, Marine Park, Washington street playground, Forest Hills, and on the Columbus avenue playground.

For the district celebrations the program for entertainment has been left with the improvement associations connected with the United Improvement Association. Every district except Charlestown and Dorchester, which had their local days, will be given a portion of the celebration money to furnish refreshments and entertainment for the children.

Sporting Programs Attractive.

The New England rowing championships on the Charles River Basin will furnish enjoyment for lovers of aquatic sports, and the motor boat races off Marine Park, under the auspices of New England Engine and Boat Association, are attracting wide attention. In addition the local yacht clubs hold races in the morning and afternoon, with programs that will attract thousands of lovers of yachting.

The Dorchester Gentlemen's Driving Club will hold a program of special match races on Franklin Field speedway, and every one of the thirty or more diamonds on Franklin Field has already been engaged, insuring a continuous program of fun for baseball fans.

The historical celebration of the day will centre in Faneuil Hall, where President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard will be the Fourth of July orator. Master Francis Daly, son of Representative George T. Daly of Ward 12 will read the Declaration of Independence from the balcony of the old State House.

The fire department officials have issued permits for about thirty big bonfires on the night before. Ward Newsmen will turn out in force for the big blaze on Southampton street, just west of the New Haven tracks. Over two carloads of material have been secured for the foundation of this blaze, and its reflection will be seen for miles around. Another big fire will be touched off on the summit of Orient Heights, and Charlestown will be entertained by a similar exhibition on the Sullivan square playground.

In addition to the attractions officially slated, there will be sports for the smaller children, with suitable prizes on most of the neighborhood playgrounds.

Councilor Walter Ballantyne is chairman of the City Council Committee on the Fourth of July Celebration, and is assisted by a committee comprising every member of the City Council.

FIREMEN'S PLAYOUT PLANNED IN REVERE AND CHELSEA, TOO

Two celebrations will be held in Revere, one in the central section of the town and the other in the Beachmont district, both to be started with boatrace. The first event in the central part of the town will be a parade, to be followed by a firemen's playout on Curtis Park. Baseball and athletic sports will be held on Paul Revere Park. In the evening a display of fireworks will be given on Belle Isle inlet.

Chelsea will celebrate the day with sports and baseball games for the championship of the city. Athletic games for seniors, with track and field events, will be held in the morning on the Carter street playground. A fireman's payout will be held in the afternoon.

Water sports, road races, band concerts and fireworks in Winthrop have been arranged by the Winthrop Improvement Association.

FREE VAUDEVILLE, LAKE ILLUMINATION, ON NEWTON'S LIST

At Newton Centre there will be sports for boys on the playground in the morning of the Fourth, and a baseball game between the single and married men in the afternoon. Mayor Haddock will be umpire. During the afternoon there will be free vaudeville entertainment in Bray Hall. In the evening there will be a band concert and fireworks at Crystal Lake. A feature will be the illuminating of the lake by red fire torches on boats.

At Wellesley the monument to the Minute Men of West Needham (Wellesley's former name) will be dedicated in the morning. In the afternoon there will be sports on the Hunnewell playground.

At Watertown the principal feature will be a parade of a hundred boys and girls in the morning.

BALL GAMES AND BAND CONCERTS ON CAMBRIDGE PROGRAM.

The celebration in Cambridge will be safe and sane. There will be baseball games on Cambridge Field, the Ward 4 playground, the Magazine Beach parkground and the Rindge Field playground. On Cambridge Field, the contesting teams will be the Auburns, the St. Mary's, the Rindge Tradesmen and the Cambridge City nine. On the Ward 4 playground the contesting teams will be the Mystics and Cantabs, the Midgets club and the Pioneers. At the Magazine Beach playground the teams will be the Prospect Union, the Manhattan Market, the Cambridge Wesleyans and the Cantabs. At the Rindge Field playground the Rindge Tradesmen and the Cambridge City nine will play. The contesting teams will be the Winthrop Improvement Association and the Cambridge Wesleyans. A band concert will be given on the playground.

On Cambridge Field there will be parades for children. In the evening there will be band concerts and fireworks at Rindge Field, Magazine Beach and Cambridge Field.

PARADE AT NEWBURYPORT.

NEWBURYPORT, July 1.—The Fourth feature here will be a parade in which the school children, Protestant and Catholic orphanages, manufacturing concerns, bicyclists and a baby carriage division will be represented. Fireworks will be an attraction at Plum Island, Salisbury Beach and Hampton Beach.

1776—The Declaration of Independence—1911

IN CONGRESS JULY 4, 1776.

The unanimous declaration of the thirteen United States of America. When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powes of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitles them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the meantime exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws of Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in time of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States;

For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world;

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent;

For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury;

For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences;

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighboring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies;

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments;

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-Citizens taken captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms. Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which, would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name and by the authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be free and independent States; that they are absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as free and independent States, they have full power to levy war, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, We mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

PRETENDERS BELIEVE FRANCE NEEDS A CHANGE

ARE NOT TAKEN SERIOUSLY

Generation Which Has Grown Up Under the Republic Satisfied With Government

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, July 1.—Just now we are bombarded with proclamations, manifestos, declarations of principles and confidential letters to their partisans by the two pretenders to the throne of France, Prince Victor and the Duke of Orleans believe we need a change of government.

Forty one years is a long period for any form of government to last in France. The grand nephew of the Emperor informs us that the name of Napoleon is in itself a program. His opponents reply that it is a program of tyranny and dismemberment.

The name of the son of the Count de Paris recalls to our minds the debauches of the regency, of the Palais Royal and that his ancestor, Philip Egalite, voted for the death of America's friend, his own cousin, Louis the Sixteenth.

The Gazette de France and the Action Francais, three royalist newspapers, are printing the proclamations of the Duke of Orleans. The Bonapartist organ, l'Autorite, which is owned by Paul and Guy de Cassagnac, is printing the platitudes of Prince Victor Napoleon, sent to it from his safe retreat at Brussels.

Prince Victor and the Duke of Orleans have as much chance of mounting the throne of France as has Saunderof, the man who claims descent from Louis the Sixteenth and Marie Antoinette. In other words, the generation which has grown up under the Republic does not take the pretenders seriously.

American Author's Success.

For the second time within a few months a Cincinnati lady has scored a literary success in Paris. The successful and fair American is Anna, Countess de Bremond, formerly Miss Dunphy. Not long ago she published a book of verse entitled "From a Paris Balcony," which has won the encomiums of our men of letters. Her present success is an eloquent little book called "Oscar Wilde and His Mother."

It tells about Oscar's convulsion before his lonely death in a little hotel of the Rue Des Beaux Arts. The book is dedicated to the soul of Lady Wilde, one of the most brilliant Irish ladies of her day. Shortly before his death the Countess de Bremond met Wilde in a penny boat on the Seine. His vices were of the poet, but he was dying.

"Don't be sorry for me, it will not be for long, but watch and pray," he said.

Ill Luck of Princess.

The Princess Helena of Servia has recently been in Paris purchasing frocks and other feminine adornments by way of preparation to be presented at some European courts. Ill luck seems to follow this dark-eyed daughter of the House of Karageorgevitch. She is twenty-six and unmarried, because until now the courts of Europe had been shut against her.

If our Minister of War, Berteaux, had not been killed she would have been received recently at the Elysee. If Francis Joseph of Austria had not fallen ill she would also have been received the other day at the venerable sovereign's court. There she might meet some suitable party. Now she has to put away her frocks until the Autumn.

The present would be a propitious time for the King and his daughter to be in Paris, for the Duchesse of Tortosia, formerly Miss Moore of New York, is the Princesse's best friend and is now in Paris. And Mrs. Potter Palmer, with whom persistent rumor has said that King Peter would like to share his throne, has bought a house there.

Edstrom Sells Statue.

Princess Eugene of Sweden, the royal artist of the House of Bernadotte, has purchased from David Edstrom of Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota and Paris, his terrible statue of "Despair." Purchaser and sculptor are both well known to a Parisian audience. For Prince Eugene, grandson of Jean Baptiste Bernadotte of Pau, lives several years in the Latin Quarter, studying with American students, and at one time contemplated marrying an American lady.

Edstrom was first known as the wild Westerner who had beaten his way from Iowa to Paris with only $4 between him and starvation. But Paris, Berlin and, at this moment, Stockholm recognize him as the most fearlessly original sculptor of today.

"We of the West fear not man, dog nor devil," was his reply when Prince Eugene asked why he continued such terrible subjects.

Edstrom is now holding an exhibition of his works in Stockholm, and the famous Hall Gallery of that city has bought his "Sobbing." The National Museum of the same city has shown its appreciation by purchasing Edstrom's "Hercules" from a Western American point of view. At present Edstrom is engaged upon a statue of Mr. G. Bagnall, the well known Swedish publisher of Stockholm and New York.

Edstrom, who came from a relative of the Austrian Embassy that the aged ruler of the dual monarchy of Austria and Hungary has made a present of the jewels of the late Empress Elizabeth to the morganatic wife of the heir to the throne. This is proof positive that the democratic spirit has found an entry to the most conservative royal house in the world. It seems that Francis Ferdinand has now won the fight in his long effort to make Mlle. Sophie Chotzeck de Chotkowa Empress of Austria and Queen of Hungary.

VENUS OF OSTIA IS MASTERPIECE COPY

Prof. Vaglieri Believes Original Was a Statue By Praxiteles Which Has Been Lost.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

ROME, July 1.—According to Professor Dante Vaglieri, director of the excavations at Ostia, the statue of Venus, recently discovered there while workmen were clearing away the accumulated sand and rubbish covering the Hipposcenium or lower stage of an ancient Roman theatre, is a type of Aphrodite or Venus created about the fourth century B. C. by Praxiteles or one of his immediate followers.

This is proved by its resemblance to the famous Venus of Arles attributed to the great Athenian sculptor. The simple yet effective technique, the dignified pose, the natural treatment of drapery, the perfect development of the breasts and the general presentation of the figure, indicated therefor Vaglieri to conclude the statue is a faithful reproduction of a Praxitelean masterpiece, the original of which has disappeared.

It is probably that the original work was copied by a sculptor of Trojan time, who added the reversed emphasis on which the goddess's right hand rests, transforming it into a decorative motive for a fountain.

This valuable discovery, together with recent ones made in the ruins of Ostia, strengthens Professor Vaglieri's belief that there is much treasure trove hidden under the crumbling walls of the old Roman village, and encouraged by recent success and the keen interest which King Victor Emmanuel evinces in the excavations, Prof. Vaglieri is continuing operations despite the hot weather and is optimistic of achieving further important results soon.

NEW HEALTH CRUSADE.

Simple Rules of Diet Find Great Favor in Austria.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

VIENNA, July 1.—A health campaign, in which the people of the large cities and the country districts are to take part, is prospected in Austria. A mass of literature on the subject is being widely circulated.

A large number of people are following the rules of health laid down by Dr. Karl Prendl, who advocates three meals a day, the last to be taken three hours before retiring to rest, and the whole to occupy not less than an hour and a half. Drinking at meals is condemned, but a glass of drink is allowed an hour afterwards.

Smoking is regarded as unhealthy, but it is less injurious when indulged in after meals. Ten to twenty minutes' sleep after the principal meal is recommended. Taking a bath on a chair is condemned, as this form of siesta has a tendency to cause pain in the stomach.

Prendl's exercise, or Prendl suggests that the whole person sleep every morning, the bed clothes should be kicked on one side and exercises indulged in for fifteen minutes. These should take the form of rolling about, jerking out legs and arms and afterwards the cold sponge, which should last from ten to fifteen minutes. Tennis and football are preferred to cycling, and garden work is recommended for everybody.

An air bath of ten minutes at the open window before going to bed is imposed, and, during sleep, windows must be opened in Winter as well as in Summer, even though it be necessary to look on more bed clothes. Refreshing sleep means increased nerve force, and in order to secure it it is suggested that in Summer time people should go to bed at 11 o'clock and rise at 5, while in Winter the hours of sleep should be from 10 to 6.

MRS. GOURAUD STAR OF WONDERFUL BALL

American Woman Creates Sensation By Jewels and Costume at Fete.

By PAUL PIERRE RIGNAUX.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, July 1.—In what was by far the most daring, sumptuous and extravagant entertainment ever attempted in Paris, Mrs. Amy Crocker Gould Gouraud succeeded in artistic expression of costumes and wonderful jewels all the others there that the extraordinary display of barbaric splendor prepared by the host and hostess sank into insignificance compared with the sensation this American woman caused among the French guests.

Monsieur and Madame Paul Poiret, with a disregard of things considered conventional, and audacious even for a French man, gave an Oriental evening in their elegant home, in which they sought to reproduce the glories of the setting of the Arabian Nights in Paris. They surely have succeeded for the entertainment they gave proved to be an exaggeration

Monsieur Poiret received in the garden under a canopy of embroidered silk, where he reclined on his back among cushions as a Maharajah, surrounded by scantily dressed marvellous looking women who wore but little jewelry for a ball, but she wore, besides a wonderful creation—an Oriental costume, over which was draped most scantily protected from the chilly evening air. Monsieur Poiret surrounded himself with a retinue of Negro slaves that would have done credit to any old Eastern potentate. Music was being played everywhere by native orchestras, which Poiret imported for the occasion from Egypt, India and Turkey, and with them were native dancers performing strange movements called graceful in their own country.

With all artistic Paris there to assist at this fete Mrs. Gouraud entered into the scene accompanied by the Max Fishers, despite the great tragedian with the sonorous voice there was a hush as she entered, for the magnificence of her costume and jewels outshone all the splendor about her.

By one visible of her forehead she wore her famous luminous emerald, held in place by a magnificent rope of pearls. Her arms bore the united pearl eyes stolen from an Indian idol. Her Appearance in Abbey But Beginning of Campaign Against Her Husband.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, July 1.—The American Duchess of Marlborough was by far the most interesting figure of the coronation, with the exception of the royalties. Her tragic entrance into Westminster Abbey, to which she had not been bidden, is still being discussed as to the possible bearing her imperious action may have on her future social career in England under the reign of King George and Queen Mary.

The Queen is said to have been greatly displeased by the action of the Duchess, who stood on her rights as a peeress of the realm, but there are many personages high at court who admire the pluck of the fair consuelo, and predict that despite the strong objections of the Queen to women separated from their husbands, the Duchess of Marlborough will yet win the recognition to which she is entitled at the English court.

Every one knows that the Duchess of Marlborough was blameless in her domestic difficulties, and declare that her action in appearing at the Abbey is but a beginning of her campaign against her husband, whose relatives have attempted to discredit her in the eyes of the Puritanical Queen Mary.

The Duke of Marlborough has entered upon an active social career to show that he is happy, despite his separation of his wife. The exiled King Manuel of Portugal, who is rapidly becoming Anglicised, has become a great chum of the Duke, and at the recent fete at Blenheim was one of the most active of the Duke's aides in entertaining the gay aristocratic company.

King Manuel himself is an interesting figure. He is able to live fairly well on the pension allowed him by Portugal and is much in society, but time he has failed to find a favorite among the many pretty and vivacious women he has met.

Manuel, according to those who know him well, is still desperately in love with the sprightly Gaby Deslys, the pretty dancer who helped to hoot him from his throne, and who was called the uncrowned Queen of Portugal.

Gaby, however, does not appear to take the same lively interest in the exiled King as she did when he was on a throne and in command of unlimited means. She is in Paris and has returned to the stage in the most lively and daring sketch of the season. Gaby plays part of the sketch in a bed that is a reproduction of one that belongs to Marie Antoinette, and then changes to a costume that displays her charms of figure to the best advantage. It is said that Manuel is restrained by political reasons alone from visiting the fair Gaby in Paris.

MISS ELKINS AT LAST TO WED BILLY HITT

Close Friends Declare She Has Decided to Put An End to d'Abruzzi Romance.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, July 1.—It was said to-day that Miss Katherine Elkins has decided to end the faithful love of Billy Hitt of Washington. A friend in the confidence of Miss Elkins informed the ANTI-BILKO correspondent that the end of the much discussed d'Abruzzi romance was in sight. It was recently arrived at by Miss Elkins herself.

It has been a hard struggle between the two loves, each different in its way, yet both having strong arguments in their favor, but since Miss Elkins has come to the point where she despairs of ever being able to obtain recognition from the Queen Mother, who is holding the Duke d'Abruzzi to a promise made at his mother's death that he would never marry without the consent of Mother's consent, things have been veering in "Billy's" favor.

While it might be said that a promise exacted in such a way is valid and the Duke would be justified in breaking it, that he should do himself in love or social affairs to the unrelenting severity of the queen Mother. The affection between the Duke and Miss Elkins is just as strong as ever, and, while the consolation of the Duke appeared to have a different way, she was always had a good, common sense, rational affection for "Billy" Hitt.

More than once before has Miss Elkins wavered, her friends say, in weighing the relative qualities and possibilities of the two matches, and each which would make her an unrecognized Duchess, and the other an American Queen. "Billy" counts on this to ultimate righting of affairs, which gave him courage for the decision announced to-day. It is suggested that Miss Elkins will announce publicly her decision, which she has talked over with her friends quietly.

ON WIDOW TRAIL AGAIN.

Gen. Spiridovitch Back in Paris —Seeks Mrs. Ella Deane.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, July 1.—From his Northern home near wintry Moscow, General Count Arthur Tchrepe Spiridovitch has made his annual swoop down upon those American widows who have arrived in the French metropolis for their Spring shopping.

The General has come heavily equipped for when he went through Mrs. Ilsley Chapman from aristocratic Lord Rancourt, to the lonely Siberian steppes by the banker, Philip Van Ankenberg, for his American father in law died, leaving him many money and thousands of frozen acres covered with snow, and his faithful Finnish bodyguard has given him jewelry and sleeves buttons and a necktie of marvellous blue now wax mauvish.

Then before and the General has left also to a wealthy Chicago widow, Mrs. Bob Deane, widow of a well known Chicago grain merchant who died last year. Mrs. Deane was formerly Miss Ella Wood. Her husband, who was thirty years her senior, left a big fortune to his daughters by a former wife, but to his widow very little. Mrs. Deane is buxom and winsome as well as wealthy.

WEALTHY WOMAN WOULD MARRY THAW EARL

OFFERS HIM $5,000 A YEAR

Impecunious Viscount's Debts Less This Time, But Alcohol His Only Rival in Marriage.

By CHESTER OVERTON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, July 1.—Although this is not popularly supposed to be leap year a proposal of marriage has just been made to the Earl of Yarmouth by Lady Abdy, who has an ambition to obtain the title of Marchioness of Hertford, which some day Alice Thaw's stuff have enjoyed but also not the good that [illegible] Earl.

Lady Abdy realizing [illegible] financial straits, presented a formal offer of marriage to [illegible] expressing at the same time the willingness to settle five thousand dollars a year upon him and give him complete liberty. The only stipulation was that Yarmouth should get sober enough to allow her one [illegible] opportunity of her until she becomes a Marchioness of Hertford and [illegible] will be soon, as Yarmouth's aged father is in his last [illegible] may die [illegible] disease at any moment.

Earl Declines Offer.

Yarmouth, however, declined [illegible] although it is [illegible] that his only hope lies in a marriage of some sort. Lady Abdy, who previous to her marriage with old Sir William, who had to be wheeled to the altar, was the wife of a General Robinson and was well known at the Empire Theatre and certain West End restaurants where she was popular for her somewhat broad wit and lively manners, who has been engaged three times since her husband's death a year ago.

Should Lady Abdy add the family title to her and art works, realizing over half a million dollars. She is fond of dogs, and herself the richest woman in England. Her last suitor was Lord de Waters, a young American said to be from Boston, but he withdrew his proposal when he learned she would have no right to her title after marriage.

Glad Coronation's Over.

London is being dismantled after the coronation and everybody is glad it is over. Everybody blames each other for the exorbitant prices and the failure of the expected hordes of Americans to arrive. The grand stand builders nearly all lost money. Several failures are announced.

Many amusing incidents are being discussed. The most noticeable one was the appearance of Viscount Middleton, better known as Mr. [illegible] Brudenell. The famous war minister, who arrived at the Abbey in the wrong robes. Instead of wearing the full Peers robes and peeress robes he carried a military affair known as the House of Lords' robe looking [illegible] and quickly realizing his mistake he rushed out to Lord Lytton and begged the loan of a robe.

Mr. replied Lytton who was busily engaged in the hair of his son Viscount Knebworth, one of the Pages, "just indigo [illegible] a spare set. Why not go around to Queen's House Terrace and get them?"

Lord Middleton found, however, that he would not have time before the entrance to the Abbey was closed. He was [illegible] able to attempt to hide himself among the Lords, when his entrance attracted the eagle eye of the Earl Marshall, and Middleton discreetly vanished, a sadder, but a wiser man.

Wore Coronet Over Ear.

Lord Redesdale, who is known for wearing his hat at a rakish angle, wore his coronet at an sheer [illegible] of habit, over his right ear, thereby making a pretty [illegible] for the Peeresses in the gallery.

The Duke of Norfolk's stockings came down and his shoes [illegible] before he entered [illegible] but he tied them up in time, and with [illegible] indifference, while the crowd [illegible] laughed at him.

Gordon Selfridge of Chicago, who owns the biggest department store in London, is showing the effete Britishers a few American wrinkles in advertising. Selfridge's store on Oxford street is along the route of this week's royal procession from Buckingham. He placed all his windows at the disposal of Prince Alexander of York, knowing the Prince would, of course, invite the younger members of the royal family as well as other aristocratic friends to view the royal progress. Selfridge saw to it that there would be a rush for seats, close proximity to royalty. The windows were filled and Selfridge basked over the entire grounds of the sale of [illegible] and the Prince's friends of Royal Memorial Fund.

Department Store Popular.

Selfridge's store has arrived, as the French say. It is not only mating money, but it has overcome the prejudice that first existed against an American store, and is forcing neighboring stores to adopt new methods or quit.

Selfridge's methods of advertising are widely copied. Even his rivals admit that some of his newspaper advertisements are literary gems. His show style or window dressing is flagrantly imitated by his rivals.

QUEENSTOWN, JUNE 24.

The "Carmania" had 320 saloon passengers, and we were among them —that was all. To be sure, a New York ship-news reporter heard there was a distinguished Boston party on board and made an appointment to take a group picture half an hour before sailing time, but his city editor must have told him that there was no room for Boston pictures, for he never came back.

"If we sailed from Boston, it would not have been like this," sighed Secretary James A. McKibbon of the Boston Chamber.

However, there were compensations. The "Carmania" is a much bigger boat than any which sails from Boston. Her decks are vast, her public rooms comfortable, and her staterooms—well, her staterooms are more like hotel chambers than sleeping quarters on a ship. Why, they even have wall paper and English dormer windows and muslin curtains to heighten the shore effect.

BOSTON BUTTON MAKES EVERYBODY FRIENDS.

I said that we got away without noise, and our fellow passengers did not know who we were. They did not long remain uninformed. The little white button with red and blue border on so many coat lapels soon attracted attention. And then piled upon a table in the library was a stack of literature, a large package addressed to each man. The World's Peace Foundation was the largest contributor, but all the accident insurance companies were right on the job.

Meanwhile the member of the party were wandering about the decks, and as more than forty of them were delegates from other cities than Boston, they were shy of talking without introductions. Some of the members were so well known as to be easily recognized.

There was Lincoln Steffens, author of the "Shame of the Cities," and the man whom Roosevelt had in mind when he coined the expression "muckraker." Steffens had dispensed with his customary uniform of a wide collar and black string tie, and had even trimmed his whiskers in honor of the occasion, but his identity was quickly established.

Mayor of Denver on Board.

Mayor Speer was unmistakable. He is a mountain of a man, with a keen head, devoid of hair, and features as rugged as his native Rockies. It was easy to see why he had made such a big lawyer.

John H. Fahey, with his handyke beard and guttural eyes was distinct, and so were several other members, but the rest were just ordinary people, and something had to be done for them. It was done.

The committee, it developed, had no intention to permit the voyage to be a time of idleness and repose. Hardly had we dropped the pilot when a program of daily lectures was drawn up.

The distinguished members were informed that they were going to prepare lectures for the benefit of the others, and the first meeting was called for Sunday afternoon. In the main dining saloon

John H. Fahey presided and everybody in the party was present except four of the ladies, who were asleep. The other passengers, most of whom were being herded out to bid distraction, clustered in the balcony and listened to the proceedings of the Chamber.

Mr. Fahey explained the objects of the trip, and asked the members of the party to loosen up and get on friendly terms with one another right away.

Lecturers on View.

Somebody suggested making the lecturers stand up so that they could be recognized. This was done. Then some gentleman who didn't care how long the meeting lasted, proposed that each member of the party stand up in turn and be introduced. Another enthusiast seconded the motion, and it was up to Fahey. One after another he called the eighty to their feet, keeping up a running fire of humorous comment about them. The introductions made a lot of fun and did much to put the party at ease.

Then kind gentlemen from the West suggested that everybody wear a badge with his name on it, or wear numbers. These propositions narrowly escaped passing, but the motion voted to be being tagged.

By this time the newspapers had discovered that the Boston Chamber of Commerce was on board and that it was an interesting organization.

Mr. Fahey received many requests for permission to attend the lectures, and the managers voted to do call the more willingly because they had no right to the exclusive use of the dining saloon.

Here is the Program.

The lecture program was announced, and it was stated that the Boston City Club method of following an address with an informal discussion would be adopted. The program was this:

TUESDAY—"How European Cities Are Meeting Our Problems," by Frederick C. Howe, author of "The City, the Hope of Democracy."

WEDNESDAY—"How European Cities Are Governed," by John Martin, member of Board of Education, New York city.

THURSDAY—"Commercial and Social Advantages of City Planning," by John Nolan, the Wisconsin architect, whose plans have beautified the city of Madison.

FRIDAY—"The Federal Government and What It Is Doing to Promote Foreign Trade and Commerce."

SATURDAY—"European Museums and Galleries, by James D. Kirkpatrick.

In the meantime the younger members of the party were arranging a program of amusements.

It started on Sunday night, when J Pinckney H. Adams of Fair Haven, Vt., an old Yale athlete, organized a glee club which performed on the boat deck. The glee club was not a success because most of the members could not sing, and none knew a single song from beginning to end.

However, the friendly confidences which were engendered disclosed the fact that there were eight Yale men on board, and they immediately challenged Harvard to any kind of contest. This developed into an inter-collegiate shuffle-board tournament, for Tech and Cornell insisted upon being recognized.

The Yale team consisted of J. P. H Adams, Randolph Frothingham, Charles L. Jouin, W. K Stewart, Lyon Weyburn of the Chamber party, while Harvard put forward Arthur C. Comey, Amos R. Little, Hugh Nawn, F. J. McIsaac, Edgar N. Wrightington, J. B. Russell and O. T. Russell.

A Lament From Harvard.

Yale luck entered largely into the tournament, and Yale won by a score of 5 games to 4. The Russell brothers played wonderfully well for Harvard, winning 3 of the 4 games credited to the Crimson. Tech and Cornell trailed.

Monday afternoon the first lecture took place. Everybody showed up but one man, who said: "Link has only spent one week and I have heard that three times."

For about three-quarters of an hour Mr Steffens made the graftiest tremble, and said several very part things. For example:

"An honest man is no good in politics The difference between a crook and an honest man is that the corporations have to pay the cross for special privileges, but they get them for nothing from the honest man. What we must have are intelligent men, who are not only honest, but know how to do things."

There was a lady with yellow hair who seemed very much interested in the lecture, and when the party broke up one of the Chamber crowd ventured to ask her if she had enjoyed it.

"Oh, yes," she replied, "anything is better than sitting alone on deck bored to death."

One for Fitzgerald.

But not to digress, after Steffens confessed Mr. Fahey called upon Mayor Speer of Denver, William Fortune of Indianapolis and John Martin of New York for brief remarks.

Mr. Martin, by the way, was crowded into a corner by a certain Boston uplifter, who told him in detail all the actions of John F. Fitzgerald. When he got through he waited for an expression of distaste for such a personality. But Mr. Martin only said.

"I don't know Mr. Fitzgerald, but if he does the things that you say I should think he would be an ideal Mayor."

It is a shame to chronicle this, but it is necessary to be a faithful recorder of this voyage. When Mr. Fahey announced at the meeting on Sunday his program of lectures for the week, somebody said

"Supposing one of the lecturers gets seasick."

Well, on Tuesday one John H. Fahey did not appear at breakfast or at lunch, and in response to questions sent out word that he was suffering from indigestion. A substitute filled the chair at the afternoon lecture, and Mr. Fahey by a heroic effort managed to attend, but occupied a back seat.

Tuesday's lecture proved very interesting. Frederick C. Howe is a lawyer and editor of Cleveland, who has spent much time in Germany studying the manner in which the Germans tackle municipal problems.

He talked for nearly an hour in a slow but pleasant manner and told by what radical means the Germans have treated their municipal ills. It was very impressive to hear Mr. Howe declare that municipal business concerns to build beautiful offices and stores, and how the city dispensed its funds. Several persons took occasion to follow Mr. Howe and point out the superiority of the German system to the American.

Boston Lawyer a Speaker.

Anne R. Lutle, the Boston lawyer, put his finger upon the nub of the proposition by asking what aware the people of the German cities took in municipal affairs.

"Is it a government of the people or of the privileged classes, what might be termed The Highbrows?"

"Well, the fact is that the people have very little to do with the municipal governments," replied Mr. Howe. "Under the triple council system the working classes have no voice to speak of. It is a government of Highbrows."

This brought us back to the old situation. A city whose citizens have no voice in their government cannot properly be compared with one which is popularly governed.

The German municipalities are ruled by benevolent despots and no American would swap a republican form of government for a despotism, no matter how capable.

The tour committee held meetings daily in the smokeroom and occupied itself lubricating the party into groups.

It is obviously impossible to see all the sights worth while in Europe in two months and the plan is to send the party about in squads, each to visit and study the things of interest them most

Thus there will be the city planning group, the commercial development group, the municipal government group, the industrial group, and similar divisions. On the voyage home these groups are to write out their findings, deductions and conclusions. These will be arranged and put in order and later published in book form for the edification and instruction of the people of Boston.

This is a serious crowd, all right. A little recreation and entertainment may be indulged in, but strictly after office hours.

William H. Bain is one of the pillars of the York Street Church, as well as a director in the Chamber and vice-president of the Boston Wholesale Grocers' Association. If Mr. Bain were not known to be a churchman, some of the stories he told on this trip would be received with suspicion.

People have insinuated that he fell from grace when he told about an extraordinary fish which plints ships in and out of a New Zealand harbor. Mr Bain protests that his story is true and that he has seven photographs to prove it, only he forgot to bring them with him

The story-telling began on the after deck one warm evening, and at first the audience was only half a dozen strong But Mr. Bain talked in a silvery, persuasive way, people who were promenading paused, and soon there were fifty or sixty listening to the tale of "Jack" the pilot fish, a pretty that throws a stream 1,500 feet high, and other natural wonders.

The ship's purser, who did not know Mr. Bains reputation for straight dealing, was an admiring listener, and after all was over remarked:

"He's coming it a bit strong, that fellow. I bet he always has a good excuse for his wife when he comes home late."

English View of Parties.

Mr. John Martin of the New York Board of Education discussed the different view point of the English and American people towards politics, Wednesday, in the dining saloon, and made a profound impression. Mr. Martin is an orator and rhetorician. His delivery is charming, and he will be one of our most effective spellbinders when we attend official banquets on the trip.

Perhaps the most interesting portion of his address was where he explained how the Lord Mayor of London, which we consider intolerable, works for the perfect government of English cities.

"There seems to be a glamor attached to holding public office in America," he said. "Our citizens who wish to accomplish something for their cities always protest as a preliminary that they are not candidates for office; that they are not looking for a job.

"In England it is an honor to hold an office, even a minor office. Perhaps one reason is that few English officers carry any salary. Therefore when a man becomes a candidate for office, it is almost a proof of his public spiritedness and disinterestedness.

"But English officers are protected by laws, preventing a public official profiting directly or indirectly from his office. Men do not accept unsalaried offices with the expectation of profiting by contracts or favoritism.

"So strict are these laws that recently in Manchester a councilor was sent to the penetentiary because the firm of which he was a member had sold some land to the city and received a commission. It was not charged that he got an unfair price, or that the sale was not properly in the interests of the city, but merely that he had profited by his official position upon a question which touched his own affairs.

"Why do Englishmen give their time and money to hold offices from which they can't even draw a salary? Why does a man, that of Lord Mayor of London, spend over $100,000 a year to hold occupation? It is the honor that is in it.

"We all love dignities. In the United States our fondness for titles is well known. Look at all our judges of everything who have distinguished themselves in city politics. They are all quickly knighted. They aspire for that honor. Many Americans affect the dignities of nobility, but I don't see it's a pretty cheap price to pay for long years of disinterested public service."

Mr. Martin is of English birth and education, and has been in the United States a little more than thirteen years. His knowledge of English municipal government was, therefore, first hand. He raved lightly over the German municipalities which had so highly fared at the hands of Steffens and Howe, and declared that although their accomplishments are in many cases admirable, no English or American cities would tolerate for a moment their bureaucratic governments

As the days went by the interest in the lectures grew and the number of debaters steadily increased. In fact, the meetings would last very much longer, except that the head steward cleared everybody out of the dining saloon at 4:30 to set the table for dinner.

John Nolan, the Boston architect, delivered the main talk on Thursday. Mr. McKibben, who presided, introduced him as the man who had done so much for the city beautiful. His work for Madison Wis., is well known, and half a dozen other cities and towns have benefited by his ideas, while the Boston 1915 movement is much strengthened by his attachment to it

"City Beautiful" Attacked.

Mr Nolan began by attacking the expression "city beautiful" as applied to city planning

"City planning is not mere beauty, a frill, an ornament a decoration usually expensive It is mainly a very most efficient It is an organic necessity

"This side on which we are traveling is a wonderful example of the results of efficient planning of a town, for 3,000 set which carries 3,000 people is a good street

"Here we are in a place only half an acre in area and nine stories high, set there is no congestion, no discomfort because space is used to best advantage, nothing is wasted. There are no slums, no bad spots. There are even taxpayers on it, not often get ashore.

"That the result of planning. The ship were not laid out haphazard. Neither should be a city. A little intelligence in making new streets, erecting new buildings, building playgrounds and providing parks will immediately increase the efficiency of a city. I am reminded of the little verse

Little beds of flowers,
Little rows of peas,
Make a pleasant cottage

Coronation Day at Sea.

On Thursday, June 22, when the Carmania was still 1,200 miles from England Coronation Day was celebrated on board at 7 in too morning cannon were fired, because, making allowance for difference in time, that was the moment when the King drove in state upon the Road of the Isle, as I know in Westminster

Most of the passengers were awakened and put on exhilarating no sleepy tonnage in the ship was being attacked by pirates.

All through the day the ship's company were in gala attire, and the American took the infection. Americans will or ... anything for the sake of the ... and they celebrated the coronation with zest.

At lunch the ship's band played patriotic airs of all nations, and the passengers were obliged to arise again and again with their mouths full of food to honor every country

At dinner there was the same patriotism, only more so, and the saloon was gaily decorated, while pictures of the King and Queen were all over the place; also an enormous banner showing a lion with a face like a Cossack rat holding a globe representing the world in his paw

Captain Dow was resplendently patriotic to the extent of singing the "Marseillaise" in French, while every ... body had to sing "God Save the King" or the steward would have dropped hot soup down their backs.

After the dinner, which was unusually elaborate, there was a grand concert. Dr. Mildmland, was Chairman of the musical committee, and a former Massachusetts commissioner of New York, in his capacity of chairman, gave the toast of the Boston Chamber to England proud of the ship, paid a delicate compliment to Captain Dow and sat down, having clearly proved that there is no such thing as ... ing in England and it was the ... of the celebration of his ... ship.

The Englishmen present who had ... American for citizenship did not ... say nice things for their adopted country. Lord Mildmland now the Right Hon. he arose to say "A collection we have to be taken up for poor ... across the sea" stuff in good old-fashioned style.

Then Durand C. Alexander, who has ... left with the Department of Commerce at Labor, and is making the Chamber tour as the representative of the government, payed international harmonic that were sweet to hear, with a practical hand, or rather, voice.

When he got through, the Englishmen present were in tears, and Sir Samuel Fairbairn, who responded for England, was so moved, he had solos in his throat He called upon all the British subjects to stand up, and there were about twenty of them to 300 Americans

Sobs, Patriotic Sobs!

Then Sir Samuel began to tell how England loves America, and what a noble ... he is

Bay State Leaders for Reciprocity

Men of Both Parties with Taft

Senator Cummins Condemned for His Stand Against the President.

[illegible] leaders of both parties in the business [illegible] are practically unanimous in their support of President Taft in his efforts to secure the reciprocity agreement with Canada. [illegible] put forward by the President [illegible] but [illegible] the [illegible] of the country.

[illegible] Senator Cummins, who has been followed by the lead [illegible] in this State as well, nearly [illegible] public officers who are [illegible] the high cost of living in the reciprocal agreement with Canada.

The [illegible] of Senator Cummins that the President is calling his power in relation to [illegible] agreement is scouted at [illegible] by prominent Massachusetts leaders.

Especially [illegible] the statement of Senator Cummins that President Taft does not realize [illegible] party in his attitude [illegible] the reciprocity [illegible] most representative [illegible] men in this State are [illegible] needs [illegible] the President [illegible] in the great public measure.

Some Bay State Opinions.

The failure [illegible] of Senator Cummins as an attempt to [illegible] on a matter of principle in the last [illegible] effort to defeat reciprocity in the Senate. [illegible] the task that Senators Cummins and [illegible] have set themselves is an [illegible] now and one which [illegible] in the near future, [illegible] for them.

Speaker Joseph Walker of the Massachusetts House [illegible] for [illegible].

"So far as I can see [illegible] President [illegible] reciprocity [illegible] thing was or at any rate [illegible] in favor of it [illegible] the reciprocity [illegible]

Senator [illegible] is made of the stuff which [illegible] a statesman of the [illegible] in the [illegible] party.

Nothing but good can come [illegible] this reciprocity [illegible] be rewarded. [illegible] Senator [illegible] personally [illegible] Senator [illegible] [illegible] the interests of New England as this [illegible].

What Mr. Mack Thinks.

Senator J. H. Mack of North Adams, a Democrat and [illegible]

I cannot agree with Senator Cummins in [illegible] reciprocity bill. He stated that the reciprocity bill would have a [illegible] injurious result from the farmers. I do not think that it would be [illegible] I think those two sections, Western and Canada, should be drawn closer together. It would benefit both countries. They would be more neighborly in their commercial relations and, possibly, in political ones, which would be helpful to the interests of New England as a unit itself. Interview with Speaker Joseph Walker.

SPEAKER WALKER SAYS PRESIDENT'S VIEWS ARE RIGHT

Not for one moment do I think that President Taft sought the powers of Congress or exceeded the power lodged in him as executive of his country in the reciprocity act. Senator Cummins is as far of the mark when he makes a statement of this kind as he is [illegible] in the daily press.

Nothing but good can come from this [illegible] I do not think that it should be [illegible] I think those two sections, Western and Canada, should be drawn closer together. It would benefit both countries. They would be more neighborly in their commercial relations and, possibly, in political ones, which would be helpful to the interests of New England as a unit itself. Interview with Speaker Joseph Walker.

power over Congress in bringing it out to view, as Senator Cummins declares, I do not care.

Help for New England.

It has come to stay. It is just what we need. Anything we that will help to develop New England, of even America, I want.

If Senator Borah says that President Taft does not represent the Republican party, then it is about time that traditions were left aside and we began to think of something that would benefit this country. This act will do it.

John C. Cobb, a Republican and secretary of the Tariff Investigating Committee, said:

I consider the establishment of the broad principles of reciprocal trade relations with Canada as far more important than minor details of the bill. If these minor details are found unwise, they can later be corrected.

I believe that the bill should pass as it now is. It is to the interests of the Republican party to see that it is passed. The party should extend its cooperation to the President.

Republican said:

Views of Mr. Richardson.

Frank C. Richardson, chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee, said:

What is Senator Cumming trying to do, when he says that President Taft should have had this original proposal sent to him exclusively from Congress and not from the President. This is merely splitting hairs.

I am not bothering myself about the technical side of the question, and I do not think that the people will think much about the words of Senator Cummins, who is merely dealing in [illegible] The main thing in pass the bill, and, above everything else, do not amend it.

Ex-Governor John D. Long, Republican, said:

I believe the reciprocity bill should be passed without any amendments. I think it is all right as it now stands. It is the duty of the Republican party to rally to the support of the President in seeing that the bill goes through Congress. Attacks on the bill are inimical to the welfare of the Republican party.

That the President had a right to do what he has done in bringing the measure to a point of definite agreement between the United States and Canada, I firmly believe.

I disagree with Senator Cummins in questioning the authority of the President in the matter. The President has spoken about the proper manner and it is now up to the Republican party to stand by him.

Instead of discarding possible amendments, Congress should put through the bill as it stands. I consider the bill as being very fair.

Society Girls Sell Tags.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 1.—Five society girls, selling tags to-day, collected $5,000 in the streets for the benefit of the Town Hill House at Narragansett Pier. Hundreds of children from the congested districts of this city will be sent to Summer outings as a result of the sale. More than 10,000 tags were sold. Each of the girls carried a basket and the contributions were dropped in

REV. M. H. CARROLL, COMPOSER OF DANCE AND CHURCH MUSIC

MINISTER WRITES MUSIC FOR "POPS"

REV. MARCUS H. CARROLL of Hanover has the distinction of being the only minister in the United States who composes music for pop concerts. He has been doing this quietly for many years for Lowell and other cities [illegible] Massachusetts.

When [illegible] pop concert music, he is composing [illegible] for society people to dance by, [illegible] for the churches. He brings hands through out the country [illegible] his compositions.

He has only recently been discovered by [illegible] composer Mrs. Carrie M. Carroll, is [illegible] of one of the oldest families [illegible] Massachusetts, St. Andrews of Dundee.

He is [illegible] and was born in Rutland in 1872. [illegible] of Hopson Carroll, doctor of Medicine, [illegible] College, Canada. He took [illegible] theology in the General Theological Seminary, New York, and was ordained into the Episcopal ministry in 1899.

He has had several parishes in New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

Most of his spare time is spent in composing music. He has just completed festival march for the new organ in his church, which was dedicated last week.

His dance songs are very popular in the West. Some of the "numbers" in the most popular of all Beatles his are not those. What's Doing in Political Arena

How the Prophets Size Up Foss

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

"POPS can't be whipped. Why all this scrapping for the Republican nomination for Governor, when the nominee is going to be slaughtered? You hear it at the State House, in the hotels and clubs, on the street cars and on the street corners. It's in the air. But how much truth is there in it?

It's all very fine to be telling ourselves and our neighbors that we are able to put our city on the ground and recover just what it going to happen at the polls next Fall. But let us see what history tells us in this connection.

Every last Fall there was a Democratic convention in Faneuil Hall. After it was over, everybody told everybody else that no man nominated as a result of that convention could hope to be elected. And Foss was elected.

Two years ago, at just about this season of the year, a District Attorney named Arthur D. Hill was doing a lot of things to municipal gratitude. Everybody told everybody else that it was useless for the Democrats to try to defeat him. Flat Democrats nominated Joseph C. Pelletier, and Mr. Pelletier was elected.

About the same time that Mr. Hill was making himself solid [illegible] the gossips were shedding tears over what was thought to be the political corpse of a then former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald. Everybody said it was too bad about Johnnie, but facts were facts, and one of the facts was that he personally had been a awful [illegible] Well, as we all know, Fitzgerald the same John F. All of which goes to show that you never can tell. The joys of to-day may be supplanted by the gloom of to-morrow, and vice versa. Nothing is ever a sure thing until you've got it.

Get Busy, George.

WHAT'S the matter with George Harlow, Governor Foss's confidential man? George has been a-going to be pretty much in a class by himself as a Mr. Fixit. WAGES INCREASED BY THE TRADE SCHOOLS

Seventy-Five Per Cent. of Pupils Testify to Practical Worth of Manual Education.

The day of the girl graduate bride who boiled potatoes four minutes and eggs four hours, after figuring the two processes out by algebra, has passed into oblivion so far as the public schools of Boston are concerned.

Occupational training, industrial education, and continuation schools to-day are given as much thought as the "three R's." The success of the new method is shown by the records of ex-junction-school pupils, seventy per cent. of whom state that they have received wage increases ranging from twenty to sixty per cent. since taking the special course provided at that city institution.

The boy who doesn't want to be a minister, in Boston to-day may get the preliminary training to be a mechanic while attending school. Girls not desirous of becoming school teachers, are taught the practical duties of good housekeepers. Or if their tastes run in some other direction they can study salesmanship, stenography, and a hundred and one different useful things that will be of practical benefit to them in after life.

Make Their Own Dresses.

One of the prominent benefits of this new theory was seen at the recent graduation-day exercises at the Girls' High School for Practical Arts and the Trade School for Girls, where each girl wore a dress of her own making that was limited to a cost of $4. The parents of these girls, under other circumstances, would have had to pay dearly for the dresses worn on graduation day. W. Sidwell Field, director of the evening and continuation schools, says that out of a total of seventy-nine pupils of the continuation schools who have been heard from, forty-two have been materially promoted, while all but thirteen have been given wage increases of from 10 to 50 per cent.

These facts, it is declared, disprove the theory, and it should allay the fears of members of trades unions, that the schools are an attempt to pauperize the children of workingmen.

David A. Ellis, chairman of the Boston School Committee, gives a thorough explanation of the new theory in the following article, prepared exclusively for the BOSTON AMERICAN:

By DAVID A. ELLIS.

Chairman Boston School Committee.

Education started on this continent with the sole idea of fitting a boy to be ultimately a minister of the gospel. Then conception gradually broadened until it included fitting a boy for some other profession, or, as the old phrase runs, to be a scholar and a gentleman.

Then education, a century ago or so, began to take a more practical form, it became recognized that boys would expect to be ministers, lawyers or doctors and that they have the means to enable them to be mere ornaments of society and that, as a matter of fact, most children are to engage in the great practical pursuits of everyday life. From this conception grew the course of education which developed three or four decades ago. Certain girls, however, were assumed to be, which are so, born to be wives.

It was assumed that the girls were taught at home how to keep house, cook housework and learn to be wives and mothers and that the boys were taught at home how to use tools and to acquire some manual skill.

It was also assumed that the girls and boys would acquire the rudiments of civic or industrial education, either from their parents or if they were from a business or trade for their employers. Indeed, a elaborate apprentice system existed to accomplish this end. All these things were taken for granted, and could be taken for granted in the public school education of a few decades ago.

Great Change Takes Place.

There has, however, been a radical change, at any rate in the more great cities, and none of these conditions can any longer be safely assumed to obtain to any substantial degree in our metropolis.

The manual and industrial training of children took care of itself, as have said above, a few decades ago. The girl in the home was prepared by her mother for the important duties of wife and mother.

The boy lived in an atmosphere of manual labor, speaking generally, and learned the skilled arts of his handicraft unconsciously. To-day in our great cities the girls do not learn how to sew or how to cook or do housework, or the boys to do the simple manual arts without the assistance of the public school, and these are matters of vital importance.

A girl needs more to know how to be a good housewife than to have an accurate knowledge of the geography of South Africa. A boy needs more to learn about the feet of the horse than to acquire the instruction which his brain involves in order to enable him to know the relation between King John and Edward I. of England.

The public schools must, therefore, give manual training, using it in its largest sense, to the public boys and girls alike.

In the industrial system of the past generation there was ample opportunity for the boy or girl in trade or business to learn the life's occupation. The boy who went into a clothing store a few decades ago had a chance to learn the nature of the business, fabrics, workmanship, salesmanship and to come into touch and to become acquainted with the ways of business administration.

To-day, the boy who enters a clothing store in a large city enters the department of it and never has a chance to learn about the rest of the business. A boy who wished to be a maker of chandeliers a few decades ago, learned all about the business, designing, workmanship, execution and salesmanship, and, as a result, became a skilled artisan.

To-day a maker of chandelier spends his business life turning out one small part of the chandelier and never has an opportunity to see the relation of one part to any other part, or how to become a maker of the whole. The result is that the boy who wishes to be a maker of chandeliers to-day, learns little or nothing about the business, designing, assembly, execution and salesmanship, and, as a result, does not become a skilled artisan.

NEW BILL BEFORE LEGISLATURE TO END LOAN SHARK EVIL

Cavanagh and Tinkham to Fight for Passage of Measure to Insure Real Regulation of Money Lending in the Bay State

Opportunity for Massachusetts to Become Pioneer in Correction of Abuses Seen by Advocates of the Bill. Reported by Committee on Banks and Banking and Given Second Reading; Stringent Rules Feature of Plan

THE Massachusetts House of Representatives this week takes up the work of stopping those practices of loan sharks, an expose of which appeared in Sunday's AMERICAN. A bill which is aimed to give those practices has been put through the preliminary stages in the lower branch of the Legislature. The final stages will be gone through [illegible]

Representative James J. Cavanagh of Everett, who reports the bill from the committee on Banks and Banking, a week ago Monday, and who led the fight for the measure in the lower branch. Senator George Holden Tinkham of Boston, who was associated with Cavanagh on the sub-committee which drafted the measure for the Bank ands and Banking Committee, will go after it when it reaches the Senate.

Cavanagh and Tinkham and any number of leaders in the Legislature are the AMERICAN'S fight against the money sharks is certain of victory, and that the bill will be one of the statutes of the Commonwealth before another fortnight has passed.

RECORDS BROKEN IN BIG A. A. U. CONTESTS AT PITTSBURG

Kiviat and Hedlund Have Hot Battle for Honors in Mile Run, With the New York Boy Winning and Setting Up New Time

PITTSBURG, July 1.—Twenty-five thousand followers of wearers of the spike shoes turned out this afternoon at Forbes Field to witness the senior events of the annual field and track meet of the National Amateur Athletic Union which was conducted under the auspices of the Pittsburg Press. Records, one of which has stood since 1897, were fractured by athletes who came from the North, South, East and West.

Over 100 men, frail and sturdy, battled on the cinder path and field for the highest honors in the athletic world. Never before in the history of Pittsburg has such a large and representative body of athletes responded to an event of this kind, conducted here.

To C. F. Sundlear of the Olympic Club of San Francisco goes the honor of smashing the world's best record for the Javelin throw. The slender steel tipped wand hurled through the air 165 20 feet before it finally buried its head in the turf the first time the brawny armed Californian attempted the feat. No wonder the carowd yelled with delight.

Many Records Broken.

The new A. A. U. championship records form a brilliant trio of victories, consisting of the mile run, won by A. R. Kiviat of the Irish-American Athletic Club, in 4m. 19 3-5s; the 880 yards run, won by Melvin W. Sheppard of the Irish-American Athletic Club in 1m 54 1-5s.

The 56-pound weight throw, won by P. McDonald, also of the Irish-American Athletic Club, the distance being 38 feet 9½ inches. These were the features of a long program of field and track events that were encrusted with brilliant achievements and which kept the immense crowd in a commotion of enthusiasm from start to finish.

Irish-American A. C. First.

Irish-American A. C., 58; New York A. C., 28; Seattle A. C., 12; Olympic Club, 11; East Boston A. A., 7; Cleveland A. C., 7; Kansas City A. C., 6; Chicago A. A., 6; unattached (9), 52; P. A. A., 3; Brooklyn C. A. A. S., 3; Chicago University, 3; Ulinn A. C., 3; South Boston A. C. 1.

Albel Kiviat and Oscar Hedlund met again in the mile event and as usual the New York boy just pulled out the winner. Hedlund was strong throughout the race and pushed Kiviat to the limit and the result was that a new record was set up. Kiviat won the race in 4m. 19 3-5s.

Gwinne Henry, unattached, captured the first event of the program, the 100-yard dash. His time was ten seconds flat. His most dangerous rival, Jim Rosenberger, of the Irish Americans, finished second and W. Martin of the Seattle A. C. was third.

Pat McDonald of the I. A. A. C. threw the fifty-six to a new record, the distance of 38 feet 9½ inches, bettering John Flanagan's throw by 1⅞ inches.

Ollie Snedgrar of the Olympic A. C. of San Francisco, made a record javelin throw of 165 20-100 feet. The former record was 163 feet 1 inch.

Babcock, the New York A. C. crack, had a narrow escape from serious injury in the pole vault when the pole broke. In an attempt to clear the bar at twelve

BOSTON BOAT LEADS $1,000 OCEAN RACE

NEW LONDON, Ct., July 1.—The first ocean race of its kind ever sailed under the direction of the Eastern Yacht Club of Marblehead, Mass., started at 4 20 from here to-day; a race around Cape Cod, 165 miles to Marblehead for a trophy of $1,000, a solid gold cup presented by Commodore E. Louis Clark of the Eastern Club.

This race brought together one of the biggest fleets of racing schooners and sloops that has ever assembled in this harbor for a race. For the most part, the boats had been down to the Harvard Yale boat race, and will race around the cape for this trophy and several other cups offered by members of the Eastern Club to be ready for the annual regatta of the club on July 4 at Marblehead, the big racing event of the year along the Massachusetts coast.

Attractive Prizes Offered.

It will be the first time in twenty years, that any New York schooners and sloops have raced off Marblehead, and the trophies offered have made it an attraction well worth taking a trip over the shoals and down the coast.

This race brought together several big schooners that have met but a few times this season, and it will be a good test of their racing abilities.

The Queen, now known as the Irolita, was found at the starting line ready to meet the new Iselin schooner Enchantress and the Fiant schooner Elena. The captains of the schooners, yawls and sloops that were to start in this race were called aboard the schooner Emerald flagship of the Eastern Yacht Club, at noon and the details of the race were discussed. It was agreed that all yachts in the race would not use spinnakers during the night. All other sails were allowable.

Vagrant Takes Start.

Much jockeying for the line took place between the Vagrant, Elena, Enchantress, Irolita and Savarona, with the Vagrant taking the weather berth, the Elena hugging her quarter. A stiff southwest wind was blowing and was holding fair. The boats in both classes shook out the canvas they could carry and went down the Sound at a ten-mile clip. If the wind holds strong and fair, the finish of Marblehead Rock ought to be made early to-morrow night.

The starters were schooners Vagrant, R. E. Vanderbilt; Enchantress, William E. Iselin; schooner Elena, Morton F. Plant, schooner Venona, E. J. Bliss, schooner Setauna, C. Howard Clark; schooner Vision, H. A. Morse; schooner Irolita, C. Howard Clark; schooner Seafox, schooner Wayfarer, schooner Seneca, Demorest Lloyd, sloop Avenger, Daniel Bacon, jawl Rainbow, schooner Margaret, sloop Adventuress, sloop Arcadia II, and Sylvia.

Nine miles from Sarah's Ledge, the starting point, the Enchantress had taken a lead of one minute and fifty seconds.

Frank Chance Collapses, Is Out of Game

CINCINNATI, July 1.—Chicago's champion Cubs will make their next Eastern trip minus the services of Manager Frank Chance. If the peerless leader keeps a promise made to the physician who attended him following his collapse before Saturday's game. Chance was advised to forget all about baseball for two or three weeks, and said he would retire to some quiet place for that length of time.

Chance collapsed just after he handed Umpire Klem the Cubs line-up for to-day's game. Walking back towards the Chicago bench, Chance dropped over on one of the benches in a dead faint. Trainers Martin of the Reds and Semmons of the Cubs rushed to his aid. After recovering consciousness, Chance went to the clubhouse, where a physician attended him.

It is not likely that Chance will ever play regularly again. He is subject to dizzy spells and severe headaches which make it dangerous for him to try to play.

GOULETTE WINS RACE.

Beats McFarland — Collins Defeats Nat Butler.

Al Goulette defeated Floyd McFarland in a special match race at the Revere track last night, winning in straight heats. The first race was a half mile sprint and was won by Goulette in 1m. 24 1-5s. The second heat was a pursuit race, and it was captured by the speedy Goulette in 4m. 57 3-5s.

The twenty-mile motor paced race between Elmer Collins of Lynn and Butler was won by the former in 20m. 54s.

At the firing of the starter's gun, Butler jumped into the lead setting a terrific pace. Butler held the lead until the seventh mile when Elmer Collins let out one of his famous sprints, and took the lead. From then until the end, the race was a merry duel between these two great players with Butler making desperate efforts to regain the lead, but Collins would not be denied and crossed the line a winner.

While Turville won the half mile handicap with Comer second and R. Kneeran third, Turville's time was 2m 29s.

The two mile handicap was won by Cutter. Second place was captured by Rolland.

COMPANY K LOSES.

Company C Wins the Butler Cup.

LOWELL, July 1.—Company C, Sixth Regiment, M. V. M., defeated Company K of this city in a rifle match at Bryant Range this afternoon, 626 to 592, in the monthly shoot for the Butler Cup. Lieutenant Harold Patten of Company C led for the Parker Cup. His total was 67,

GIANTS SLAUGHTER RUSTLER PITCHERS

By SAM CRANE.

The Giants had an easy time in defeating the Rustlers this afternoon. The batting of the home team was very heavy and timely, the first nine base hits resulting in a total of twenty two bases. Devore got off two home runs, one into the right field stand and the other to deep centre.

Matters started off in the box for Boston, Devore, the giants took to his delivery very well. He start Devore led off with his third home run. Doyle walked and Snodgrass sent both home with a long double to left. Snodgrass got around when Steinfeldt missed Sweeney's throw. Steinfeldt had his hand hurt on the play and was obliged to retire. This caused a shift in the Rustlers line-up Huston going to third, Jones to centre and Kaiser to left. This did not weaken the infield any, for Huston played a great game at third.

In the third inning after Snodgrass and Murray doubled in succession, Manager Dooin of Matteen out of the box and substituted Gaffin, but this change failed to choke off the Giants, who had a big thing day, and would probably have pummeled any pitcher. The final score was Giants 9, Boston 1.

The fielders' lonesome tally was made in the third inning, when Sweeney singled, went to second on Devore's catch of Tenney's fly and scored on Herzog's single to left. Marquard was hit freely by the Rustlers, but he kept the dozen hits well scattered, and when singles meant runs he tightened up strongly. There were few errors made by either team, considering the many showers of wallops.

In one was the thrilling star of the contest, as well as the slaughter in which he made four hits, and several of his catches were in the sensational order.

Quakers Win 11 Inning Game But Dooin Is Hurt

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 1.—Charley Dooin, manager of the Phillies, who are first place contenders, is so seriously injured that he may not be able to appear in a game for weeks. The easy manager, captain of the Phillies is badly crushed to go into the game with Brooklyn, and it was evident that the Dodgers would win the game. For ten days Dooin had been limping about with a bad leg, but notwithstanding this he thought he could pull the Phillies out of a tight and won the game.

The very first ball pitched after Dooin had donned the mask, hit the game little manager on his bad leg. Although he managed to finish the game, he suffered excruciating pain.

To-day Dooin announced that he is about to go on a scouting trip. He has denied the report that he is incapacitated and declared he would be able to play behind the bat within a few days.

"I was hurt because I wrenched my leg a little," said Dooin, "so no reason why I should remain out of the game. We are going to hustle to win from New York and even though I am not behind the bat we will win anyway."

LILLEY WINS RACE.

Does Ten Miles at Pinehurst in 1h. 3m. 30s.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 1.—Thomas Lilley of the North Dorchester Athletic Club won the ten-mile Marathon race which was the big feature of the annual Field Day at Pinehurst. Lilley's time was held to-day at Pinehurst. His time was 1h. 3m. 30s. H. F. Pickett of the Brookline Gym was a close second, with William Brown of the Ottawa Athletic Club of Cherry Valley, third, Warren H. Wood, Clinton, fourth; Arthur McGlone, Natick, fifth, and Mikka Aleva, of the Finnish Athletic Club of Worcester, sixth.

10,000 Turn Out to See Game.

Well, here is the baseball game that the 10,815 fans saw, applauded, derided [illegible] Ray Collins was the [illegible] out to face the Yankees, his opponent in the box being the much-touted star of Russel Ford.

[illegible] the first couple of innings Collins certainly looked like he was to be the hero, only six of the Yankees faced him in these two sessions, of which three swung their bats at deceptive curves that placed them in the strikeout column.

Now as sure as the world, Collins wanted to do his best, but it must have been the Saturday jinx that strolled on the diamond in the third, for the way that four of local players working for Hal Chase [illegible] out to face the Yankees, his opponent in the box being the much-touted star of Russel Ford.

At this stage of the proceedings Donovan recalled Collins' work and substituted Jack Moser, who was just arching to get even with the Yanks for the pounding they had handed to him in the initial innings of Friday's game.

The very first thing that was passed to Moser was a single from the bat of Knight, though in justice to Moser, it should be stated that the hit should have been an out Yerkes and Pratt got mixed up as to which would have the credit of gathering in the fly, both acting the alfonse in allowing the ball to land safely between them. This permitted still another run to come over, and then Chase swatted out a single, which sent in another tally.

Away down in the heart of the manager of the New Yorkers is a soft spot, for he readily tried to pitch the second big game of the season to catch the Chase party for the third out. The result of the inning was seven hits netting six runs.

JOHNSON BLOWS UP AND ATHLETICS WIN

Mack's Men Trounce the Great Pitcher in 13 to 8 Game.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 1.—In a heavy hitting game the Athletics defeated the Nationals here this afternoon, 13 to 8, taking the series 3 games to 2. The Athletics' victory was a costly one as Eddie Collins, the champion great second baseman, dislocated his left elbow in a collision with Murphy, when both chased a short fly in right field during the second inning. A physician said that Collins might be out of the game for two weeks.

It looked like the Nationals had the game won for when the sixth opened Washington was ahead by three runs and Coombs was getting bunched regularly but Walter Johnson went all to pieces in the sixth. A home run, triple, two doubles, and a single scored seven runs and put the game on ice for the Macks.

Coombs was relieved by Bentley in the seventh and the Indian was in fine form. The hitting of Baker, and Meinnis featured the game. The score:

LAJOIE'S BAT WINS GAME FOR CLEVELAND

SOMERS PARK, Cleveland, O., July 1.—With the score a tie and the bases filled with Nap pussyers in the eighth inning to day, Manager Stovall pushed Left Fielder Graney aside and asked Napoleon Lajoie to come to the bat. Larry had limped on the field before the game to see if he could play, after eight weeks in the hospital. Larry came in the first one and fouled. The second time he tried he made one of his old-time doubles to left and three runs came scooting over the plate. The game was a desperate battle indeed, two teams primed for victory, the struggle being

WILLETT WINS HIS GAME AGAINST BROWNS

BENNETT PARK, Detroit, Mich., July 1.—Willett pitched magnificent ball and the Browns were never dangerous. Willett practically won his own game by two triplets, both of which Drake assisted him to convert into scores. Hamilton pitched well, but weakened in the eighth and was taken out and replaced by Mitchell. Detroit today included Jelleiffe, Klinz, formerly of Syracuse University, and Flint, of the Southern Michigan Club. The score:

THREE SOX PITCHERS FAIL TO STEM THE TIDE

town took up other diversions, such as perusing the latest chasing the balls and strikes on Anderson with the "Singing Umpire" Egan and generally rooting all over the place.

Moser Stuck to His Job.

However, Moser stuck to his duty till after the seventh inning, when Nagle, the new comer from Pittsburg, was requested to show what he had. This shift was through triples by Daniels and Walter, and Cree's single in the seventh, batting produced two more runs for New York.

In the couple of sessions that Nagle twirled he made a very handsome showing. One single was made off him, that by Earl Gardner, but with this only scratch men faced him in two innings, and his snappy work in covering first in the ninth, when Larry Gardner pulled Hartzell's ground liner, which Myers left to infield bag uncovered to chase, made him a lot of friends in showing that he was up to the fine points of the game when they were presented to him.

The Red Sox made their couple of tallies, one each in the second and sixth. The first was through Yerkes' single and Sweeney's error after Yerkes had stolen second and went to third on Myer's beating out a bunt. In the sixth Hooper placed a Texas-leaguer for a single in right field, stole second, and came home when Lewis singled to left.

Cobb, by the way, the sixth saw Tris Speaker put out of the game by "Home Run" Egan. He heard a lot of noise coming from the Red Sox bench, and considered it as coming from Speaker.

Speaker is Canned.

"Away you go," he said, or words to that effect, and the king outfielder sauntered out of the gate. This caused a shift in the make-up of the outfield, Daniels going from left to the middle garden and Lewis taking Speaker's station.

Referring to Speaker, he has been batting in the toughest of luck lately. In yesterday's game, in three times to the bat, the first time he hit to Knight, who tossed the ball over to Chase at first, and the last couple of times he just simply fanned. To this up Speaker in this style made Ford a happy loan but the hard luck of Speaker is more particularly in his previous games of the week, when with men on bases he had been unfortunate enough to hit straight to some of the popping fielders.

However, it is well for the fans to realize that there is a new deck to be dealt this week, opening Monday, for the Sox meet Frank Washington, D. C., will be out for fourteen. The game is in Boston Thursday and Egan generally rooting all over it.

WOLGAST FIGHTS MORAN FOR A WORLD TITLE

Lightweight Championship at Stake in Battle to Be Fought Tuesday, at San Francisco; Wolgast Is Made the Favorite.

First Great Struggle for the Title Since Wolgast Won It from Nelson Year Ago; Moran Only Man Who Knocked Out "Bat"

ANOTHER world's pugilistic championship will be fought this Independence Day. Last year the battle for the heavyweight crown was fought. This year Ad Wolgast will meet Owen Moran and the lightweight title will be at stake. Wolgast will receive $12,500, win, lose or draw, while Moran will get a percentage of the receipts. There will probably be a 60,000 side bet.

The match will be the first international bout for a real championship for many years, and it will be closely watched by the box ng enthusiasts of two continents. Moran holds no title in this country or in England, but he is considered a champion by many of the boxing judges of this country, and all have agreed that Wolgast took on one of the hardest lightweights and one that is likely to start trouble in any of the twenty rounds, if the bout goes the limit.

Wolgast Is the Favorite.

Ad Wolgast, the Michigan farmer and boxer of the title, is the man that the American will watch. Ad won the title from Battling Nelson on Washington's Birthday, 1910, and has defended it successfully since. Shortly after winning the title Wolgast picked up bouts with several third-raters and injured his hands. He took a lay off of several months, and during that period the boxing fans and many lightweights, headed by Battling Nelson, began a country wide campaign against him, hailing him as the "cheese champion."

That was enough for Mr. Wolgast. Less than six months ago, with the laurels of "cheese champion" resting heavily upon his shoulders, Wolgast started out to show the boxing public that he was a real champion, and many of the lightweights who did get a match are sorry that he started.

The Michigan farmer began a campaign that led up to the battle that he will go into Tuesday. He took on "Knockout" Brown as a starter for six rounds in Philadelphia, and those were six hard rounds, too. Many of the critics favored Brown as having the better of the bout, but Wolgast was boxing at a disadvantage, for he was nursing injured arms. After that bout he was knocked by fighting rifles every where. Many of the sport writers, Packy McFarland, Owen Moran, Tommy Murphy and all the other lightweights rotated the champion and agreed that he would be beaten in his first bout against a live man with the championship at stake.

His second bout with the little Dutchman in New York was a repetition of the first. Brown held the champion off for rounds and again the critics favored Knockout, but they admitted that Wolgast did some heavy execution at the end of the bout.

After this battle he packed his grip and beat it for the coast, where he took on George Memsic for a twenty round go, but the quarrel came to an end in the fifth. He immediately signed up to meet Anton Lagrave one of the toughest and hardest lightweights on the coast, and put him away in the ninth.

Wolgast was just beginning to find his old form and the lightweights all over the country started to take notice. His stock boomed, his supporters doubled and many fight followers are just beginning to realize that he is a real fighter and one worthy of holding the lightweight title.

Tom Jones, Wolgast's manager then took his champion back to New York and had a ten-round bout with "One Round" Hogan, a lightweight from the Coast, who had made a great reputation by his quick knockouts and his clever bouts against "K. O." Brown, whom Wolgast could not stop. This was his third appearance in the ring in the East in one of those no-decision bouts, and he had made up his mind that it was about time that he got a decision. According to the "fans" of the Big City He did, and Mr. Hogan was sorry person. He started off like a hero- ess and in the second round the referee stopped the battle. After that bout he was hailed as a real champion.

Wolgast came back to the Big City and boxed Frankie Burns, a clever little fighter from the Golden State. Burns was puzzling, but the champion mulls got around him in the sixteenth round and put across the final wallop.

First Battle for Title

Moran in Wolgast's Way

Britisher Declares That He Will Take the Champion's Measure.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—The Moran-Wolgast clash at Jim Coffroth's arena to-morrow will be the first bona fide battle for the lightweight championship since the title holder sent Battling Nelson into oblivion over a year ago. With Moran out of the way, the little Dutchman from Milwaukee can claim a clear slate. And if Moran wins, there can be no disputing his right to the lightweight crown.

Both men are fit and full of confidence. "This is a sure thing," said Wolgast to-day. "Moran is not half so strong as he is being rated, and I'll win from him a whole lot easier than I did from Burns."

The Britisher was a spectator at that battle and saw young Frankie Burns take the count under the lingers of the Milwaukee's lunch of fives. Moran's sole reason for being there was that he wanted to get a line on Wolgast's present form.

"I will be the champion before the sun sets Tuesday," he said to-day. "I have analyzed Wolgast's style and will make it hot for him from the start. I will wear him down with busy punches and will drop him in about the fifteenth round, if not sooner. I never felt better in my life."

Moran went through a brief but fast workout at his quarters in Sau Rafael to-day. He looked the perfect boxer and his physical trim could not be better. He is neither undersized nor overtrained. He is drawn just right. He carries no fat on his square rugged frame, and when he moves he steps about as lightly as a cat. He doesn't believe in too much training, but keeps himself, as he expressed it, "feeling fit" between fights. Tex Kreling, who has been training Moran, declared his belief in his charge to-day, and opined that it would be "easy money."

Judging from the mental attitudes of the rival lightweights, a great scrap is due Tuesday, as both have proved themselves to be game to the last and not afraid to carry the fight to the enemy. Wolgast is the more roughandready of the two, but it is certain that Moran is the more finished in the art of hit and get away.

The men will stack up as about the same size, weight and build when they enter the ring Tuesday—both built well down from the ground, with their strength in their shoulders. Plenty of speed and ability to assimilate punishment are qualities possessed by both. Moran probably has the stronger willop, but that is offset by Wolgast's endurance and his almost unlimited stamina. The man who out-boxed Nelson, he is probably the best of the little fellows over a long route.

The fight will be decided inside the first fifteen rounds, if Wolgast faces Moran in the fifteenth, with the latter hung on to that point, the little Dutchman is almost certain to come out on top, but Moran's cleverness, combined with his fighting power—and a willop that put Joe Rivfer into "dreamland" may end it for any one of them, or they have total opposite to process. It looks like a toss-up, and one thing that left better to go than to see these little gladiators go to it. Fight fans have come all the way across the country for the battle, among them some of the best known sporting men of New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. The odds are even and much money has been placed on the event.

Critics who have visited the training camps of both Wolgast and Moran are pronouncing the Britton in better shape than his opponent. They do not intimate so say that the champion is not fit for the fighting battle that is anticipated promises to be, but Owen seems to be fresher and has wind less affected after a hard training siege.

Fans in large numbers flocked to the training camps to-day to size up the boxers. Being closer at hand, the Seal Rock House training quarters of Ad Wolgast, the little holder, held the larger crowd, but enough admirers of Owen Moran took the trip across the bay to Shannon's place in San Rafael to crowd the gymnasium uncomfortably.

BALDWIN DECLARES HE DEFEATED WELSH

MATTY BALDWIN and his manager, Alec McLean, arrived in Boston yesterday from their trip to the Coast, where the Charlestown lightweight boxed Freddie Welch. Matty did not get the decision that will go down in the "dope" book, but Matty believes he did win the decision of the Coast boxing fans and he has several good offers for other bouts. He will most likely pack his grip for the golden State next September.

Both McLean and Baldwin were much elated over the success of the trip and had a lot to say.

"Matty lost the referee's decision, but you should have seen the great ovation Baldwin received from eight of the ten thousand people present," said Manager McLean. "Welch was very fast and clever and got in many light punches, but Matty scored nearly as many times as the Englishman and he did more execution in one punch than Welch did in three, and that is what counts."

Crowd Was Dissatisfied.

"Matty was strong in a right-cross to the head and jaw and he got many in on Welch's body. At the finish of the bout Welch was hanging on Matty and, in fact, when the final gong rang the referee waited over and took hold of Welch's arm when it was dropping feet around Matty's body to hold it up, signifying that he was the winner. Mighty per cent. of the people stood up and yelled for a fair decision, showing their dissatisfaction with the decision.

"Matty has also much to say, and although he was the "beaten man he said that he was the most satisfied man in the ring to-day. When the final bell rang I was waiting for the big end, but it was to my surprise I got the opposite. The referee I expected was a draw, but I did get one thing that left better to me than the decision. I got one of the warmest receptions ever handed to a boxer in a Boston ring, and this statement was verified by every one of the 10,000 people who was there. I was the beat-up in body and face, but not in spirit. I received a reception at the ring a hotel man presented me with a silver loving cup, some shoe, and all in all it was a great reception even to a visitor.

Favor Wolgast-Baldwin Fight.

Baldwin and McLean stayed in the city a day or two after the bout and got the general opinion of the boxing men. The directors of the club which staged the bout were in session the next day when McLean went up to get his end of the purse. Tex Grant Wood, local boxing reposed, but it was voted that a Baldwin-Wolgast bout would draw more money as Baldwin had made a great many friends by his showing the day before.

Alec Coffroth, the well known boxing promoter, was after the ringside and said that Baldwin won the bout.

WHAT THE FIGHTERS SAY OF BIG BATTLE

WOLGAST WILLING TO BET $40,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—I will win Moran has stated that I have only one punch, so if Moran is so sure that I have only that one punch who hasn't he put up some money. Why, when he challenged he said that he would bet $5,000 to $10,000, but when we were matched he cancelled it or offered that side bet proposition. I stand to bet $40,000 at 10 to 6 that I will beat him, and last shows how confident I am.—By Champion Wolgast.

MORAN SAYS WOLGAST HASN'T A GOOD PUNCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—Ad Wolgast couldn't knock Battling Nelson down when he had him dazed in their fight on the coast and he failed to keel "One Round" Hogan over under similar conditions in New York, and I have come to the conclusion that he is shy of a good punch. I expect to be champion lightweight of the world on July 4, as I think the crown which Wolgast now wears will just about fit little Owen.—By Owen Moran.

McFARLAND MEETS YOUNG AHERN NEXT

CHICAGO, July 1.—Packey McFarland to-day finished work at O'Connell's gym, where he has been training for his ten pound battle with Young Ahern, the Gotham dancing master. They are billed to battle at Kenosha, Wis., Monday. And while that McFarland goes into training there is a boom at the Sixty street gym for Packey's speed, and classy boxers draw the spectators from all over. The appearance of Emil Thiry, Packey's trimmer, adds interest to the boxing bouts, for Emil walked the Kansas lad out his game for gridestone and there is no losing.

MOHA MEETS GARDNER.

Lowell Boxer in Great Shape for Boston Bout.

When Jimmy Gardner of Lowell enters the ring Thursday evening at the Armory to face Bob Moha of Mills Saloon in a twelve round bout, he will be in better physical condition than he has been for any boxer he has ever met. Gardner is capable of performing at his best, and Billy Papke for the first time in his career would remove all chances of him winning that chance, and he is looking nothing undone to be at his best. He boxed Frank Klaus when put in condition and suffered a defeat. The next time Gardner met Klaus it was a different story.

"Wild Bob" Moha is just the opposite to Gardner in build as well as in the style he adopts in the ring. He is only 5 feet 6 inches in height but what he lacks in size is made up in the breadth of his build. He is a second Joe Wolcott, when Wolcott was at his best. He is clever in his own peculiar style, having quick arms, he is compelled to get inside of his opponent in his record for the past year has been a few occasions. Young Loughery, Terry Martin, Tommy Quill, Hilliard Lang, Mike Twin Sullivan and Jimmy Tubby have all suffered defeat at his hands.

JULY FOURTH GREAT DAY FOR YACHTSMEN

Best of the Sailing and Power Racers Will Compete in These Waters.

With three open races at Marblehead, in which the cream of the racing fleets of the Eastern coast will participate, and the New England power and commercial craft races in Boston harbor, for classes of all kinds, July 4 will lead the fourth of July full of excitement.

The annual regatta of the Eastern Yacht Club is the most important event, and in this the club will hand many of the last seasons craft and those owned around the Hub from Nova Scotia to Marblehead for the Corinthian cup.

The Eastern Club sails an open race for boats over forty-six feet, and the Boston and Corinthian clubs will open races for all classes.

Marblehead harbor will be a gaily place with the two days already named there and the addition from New York and Narragansett Bay. The three big club houses of the Eastern, Corinthian and Boston clubs will be wide open for the entertainment of visiting yachtsmen, and all in all it will be a great day, if the weather is what the yachtsmen call good.

Power Boats Race Here.

Prominent among the classes in the power boat championship races in Boston Harbor on July 4 will be the Class A boats. Each of the Motor Boat Club of America, Eastern Yacht Club and Quincy Yacht Club have been at work for months perfecting power plants for this class, and to bring together some of the fastest power craft ever seen in Massachusetts waters. This committee is composed of Nathaniel L. Skeele, Arthur P. Hourse, L. I. Campbell, A. N. Hoag and W. H. Stearns.

The Class A boats that the races have been sailed in one day over an open course for a number of hours. The events have been sailed at the Charles River basin and off Winthrop, but this year the committee decided to make it a real race and selected a course of fifteen miles down the harbor with a start off Long Point, Quincy, then a run to Boston Light, through the West Way into Quincy and Hull bay, out of there, to Hull and up the harbor to the starting point. It will make an ideal course for everyone interested in power boating to witness or follow the race.

Fastest Power Boat.

This race decides what power boats of that class, from the speed boat to the big seagoing boat, are the fastest power boats in New England and gives them the right to the Governor's cup and a leg on it. A bronze trophy goes to the fastest speed boat.

Although a number of new boats of the Class A order and independent types will be in the running and speculation on the race and some records will undoubtedly be broken, Mr. Stearns has the right idea when he recommended for use during the race

And sailing Massachusetts Bay will be yacht races of the smaller cruise among the fleets of the Eastern Yacht Club, which go on at Marblehead, Quincy, Hingham, Winthrop and one at Beverly Harbor, by the Beverly Yacht Club and one-design class at Salem.

YACHTS RACE IN BAY.

Many Power and Sail Boats in Regatta.

The Dorchester Yacht Club held its first races of the season in Dorchester Bay yesterday afternoon. There were three classes, two for power and one for sailing craft.

The class A event for large power boats and six started in a 12 mile race. The prize boat was the Quelock, owned by J. Chase and Earl R. Cabed by H. Grant, was second.

Class B for small power boats had 10 entries. The Nyce owned by Harry Millard, finishing first, closely followed by P. Baldwin Shield.

SARACEN, SEACOON AND ENDEAVOR WIN

Beverly Yacht Club Regatta Brings Out Many Yachts.

By J. F. McCLUSKY.

BUZZARDS BAY, July 1. The fleet of yachts which sailed out of the waters of the Beverly Yacht Club on Buzzards Bay this afternoon, although the wind was not the most favorable for a good fast race, yet the rivalry in each class, and especially the sonder, was keen.

There were many of the old stand by type in the first class this afternoon, the Peg, Gail, Nyce's craft, and R. W. Whitmore's craft.

The wind was blowing northeast at the start in the morning, but as soon as the starting gun was fired it shifted to south east by south and hit velocity diminished. This was not just what the heavy weather boats wanted, but they speed all their canvas and sped and reached all over the course on each leg.

The seven class was started over course at 1.10. This is a triangular course, [illegible]. Today the first leg gave the boats a chance to Run Inlet in a beat to the Buoy B to Buoy B Inlet was a run home.

The wind favorable to the [illegible] Whitmore's craft and Saracen and D. L. Whitemore's [illegible] were boats in this class.

The Wilson boat proved [illegible] light weather and finished two minutes ahead of the Saracen. Mr. Jernigin, who last year was a pennant winner, could not make better than third place.

The sonder class was sent out over the same course as the twenty one footers but did not meet as good time.

The old class the Peg, which has only been in the water for a short time, put up a good showing and made the finish of L. Stackpole's favorite boats [illegible] the race.

On the reach down the bay the sailing [illegible] Saracen went out for [illegible] gave the lift but were unsuccessful and had hard work to their finishing place.

The first leg on the course was [illegible] of a drifting quietly [illegible] one and although all the sonders [illegible] the finish line [illegible] the wind, their finish was a [illegible].

In the fifteen foot class, three were sent three starters. The racing, however, was [illegible] in the larger boats. These little craft were sent out over course [illegible] gave the boats a chance to the windward, to Bird Island, a close haul and a flight run home.

C. H. Fiske's Endeavor had the race [illegible] the threads in the water nearly [illegible] and the run home was fourteen minutes. Mr. Fiske's Endeavor will next race [illegible] Sidney Howgate's [illegible].

Miss Cudahan, however proved [illegible] in the larger boats. These boats [illegible]

"US BOYS"---As Far as We Know, Puggy Mullane Is Still King

By Tom McNamara

The cutest game of base ball I ever saw by Queen Emily Morton

I do not remember just now what teams were playing but I am positive that I was sitting in the grand stand with two girl friends and I had on my lite blew waist with the purple inserton and my other skirt, the gray one, cut lite around the knees very plain, with just the faintest suggestion of a flair around the bottom. P.S. Oh my yes and I were a bunch of rubes too.

THE AUTHORESS IN HER NEW SPARROW TAILED SKIRT

If Puggy Mullane [illegible] he is not a king. Queen Emily insists that he is. Everybody else in the neighborhood sticks by the Queen. Perhaps it is all a well organized movement to get Puggy's goat. We never thought of that before. If it is, we take off our hats to whatever person started it for we never saw a klug more on plus and needles in our life.

While all this excitement that "Puggy" has a king with himself is going on, it is absolutely impossible to get any real baseball dope. We cannot waste very much more time or space on this royalty business, as our contract only calls for baseball.

Queen Emily Morton breaks into the baseball situation worth while printing in the paper. So far, we know that the Stanfish Giants and the Wasps are scheduled to play a championship series. Just when we do not know. If it comes to a pinch we will go directly to President Umpire and put in a good, strong kick. That might start things rolling again.

HARVARD PILGRIMS WIN AT PLYMOUTH

"Tessie" Hicks Fans 10 Cape Batsmen in a 3 to 2 Game.

PLYMOUTH, July 3.—The Pilgrims of Boston, the Old Harvard favorites, defeated the Plymouth Cordage Company team in one of the fastest games ever seen on the home grounds to-day. Hicks was in rare form, allowing but five hits and striking out ten batsmen.

The visitors' infield was like a stone wall and Wadsworth and Hayduck starred. Young Ward, the new pitcher secured by the Cordage team from Pawtucket, twirled a good game. He allowed [illegible] hits, but [illegible] in the pinches. Manager Mc[illegible] suggests Mc[illegible] errors, Ward himself being responsible for one wild throw to first [illegible]

Diamond Ditties

Ballad of the Umpires

By Damon Runyon

YES, I sata take to the alley; I sata take to the trees;
I sata beg for me wretched life from the fans on me bended knees;
But hate you noticed me manners lately, an' the way I talk to the throng?
Some one crackin' that I'm a slob?
Runs with the gay that opened his nob?
Umpire's job is a difficult job?
Where do you git that noise?

I sata side in a day coach, an' carry a phoney name;
I sata skink like a burglar, an' me life was devoid o' joys -
But I've quit that Duffyin' out o' a row-
We will' me cheat an' me big high brow
Umpire's job is difficult now!
Where do you git that noise?

I SATA stand for the language that only a player knows:
Me hands was crippled, me feet were bunged where they sata step an me toes;
The spit from me fingers into me mask an' they'd kick us out o' the box;
Do then do it to-day? Well, I guess not!
You to the bench an' out o' the lot!
Umpire's job is difficult--what!
Where do you git that noise?

MAYBE they're lunchin' some umpire's yet, way, way down in the clinks;
Maybe they're guttin' away somewhere wit' all o' them ole time kicks;
But take it from me, that bush league stuff--So you hear me speak it the loud?
"Fifty per you!" (an' fifty a gob)
"Into the map, you eat-foot lob!"
Umpire's job is a difficult job!
Where do you git that noise?

RANDOLPH AFTER OLD COLONY LEAD

Defeat Stoughton Team 8-4 and Keep After League Leaders.

Randolph-Buchanans kept up their winning streak by defeating Stoughton 8 to 4 at Stoughton in the Trolley League series. The winners bit the ball at will but were unfortunate on hit and run signals, as batters hit into three double plays. Lamb, after the first inning, was invincible. Delear, P. Kelley and Lamb led in batting, while Cannon and Hatch excelled in the field. For the losers, Monahan and F. Leahy excelled.

Joe Norton injured his leg while sliding to second and had to retire in the fifth inning. On the Fourth, the Bucks will play a double-header with Middleboro, and the team winning both games will have a clear lead in the league. The score:

BAY VIEWS SWAMP NORWOOD, 14 TO 5

South Boston Team Bats Hard and Connolly Holds His Opponents Safe.

The Bay Views of South Boston had an easy time in mowing down the strong Norwood Press team at Norwood yesterday, winning at will by the score of 14 to 5. Judd Logan's boys are going at top speed and are batting away times in defeating the strongest semi-professional teams in the State. They have already some of the best teams on their lists of defeated, and they are going out after more.

The game yesterday was one-sided from the start. The visitors piled up four runs in the first inning and one each in the third and fourth inning, and then they made a big bang in the fifth and scored six runs. All of the Bay Views, with the exception of Fitzgerald, got one or more safe hits with McCarthy and Rheehan leading with three hits apiece. Connolly was on the box for Logan's team, and he performed in good style. The score:

DESPERATE DESMOND

Copyright 1911 National News Association

With the Aid of the Wild Men Claude Foils the Villain and Sends Him to His Doom

With Rosamond in his power, desperate Desmond guides the rhinoceros toward a house from which Claude and his friends have been driven by the flood. Although pursuit seems hopeless, Claude and the resourceful Wild Men are doggedly after the plunging rhino. Perseverance always pays, as next we see—

Claude and his friends find a way out. They come upon a sunken fence, which suggests a good plan for the capture of the villain. To the observant eye everything is worth notice, and we never can tell what may turn up. So Claude begins an underwater surprise for the villain, Desmond.

Never be too sure of anything. Here overconfidence has brought disaster to Desperate Desmond. The fence released from its fastenings, has shot suddenly to the surface, and Claude and the Wild Men are hastily completing the barricade which is to hold the rhinoceros and its rider.

Quick to realize his changed fortune, Desmond smarts curses upon our hero and his own former allies. Even to one reduced as Desmond, it is undignified to curse, and desire to see the friends taking the part of enemies. But Wild Men nevertheless complete him capture.

Again Claude and Rosamond are together. Our hero binds the scoundrel Desmond and with a large club forces him to walk along the top of the fence which has proved the undoing of the Wild Men, conscious of now being in the right, show no compunction as they lead Desmond to his fate.

"I'm the boy!" says Desmond, defiant to the end. Although bound to the fence and facing the returning rhinoceros herd, he vows vengeance upon Claude. In this spirit he escapes a terrible death, even if one is free and unbound. Is there any chance for Desmond? We shall know to-morrow.

RIFLEMEN GATHER FOR ANNUAL SHOOT

Teams From All Over New England to Take Part.

BARKEFIELD, July 1.—Beginning Monday morning and continuing throughout the week, the seventh annual tournament of the New England Military Rifle Association will be held at the Bay State range, Wakeneld, and over 1,000 marksmen from all parts of New England are expected to be in attendance.

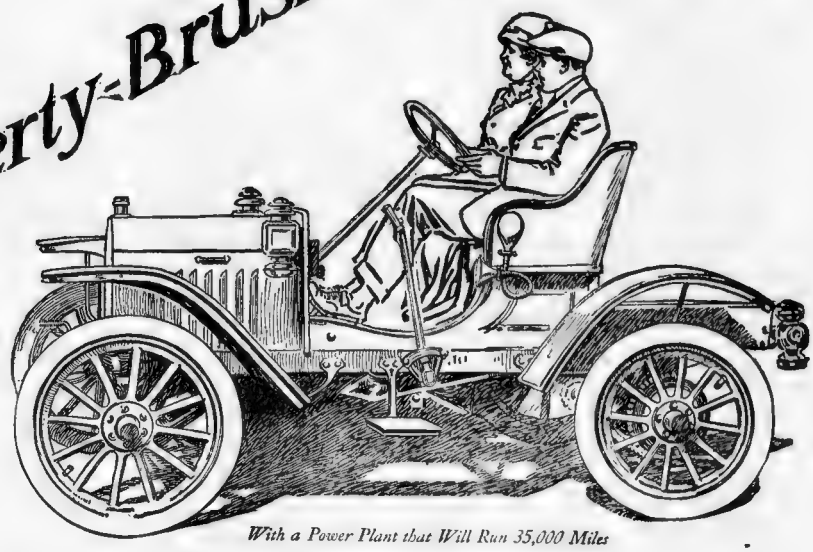
A Guaranteed Efficient Automobile $350

The Biggest gun ever fired in the Automobile Industry

The Liberty-Brush



With a Power Plant that Will Run 35,000 Miles

The Car that Frees the Horse

As a declaration of independence for the horse, we announce appropriately at this Fourth of July season a new model Liberty-Brush car which will occupy the same position in its class as the famous Brush Runabout does among the thousands who satisfactorily use it.

The $350 Liberty-Brush is the result of long experience in manufacturing a car of this type. It insures:

LIBERTY to go where you will, when you will, without dependence on the movements of others whom you cannot control.

LIBERTY to go anywhere easily and comfortably without regard to steel rails or the ordinary limitations of travel.

LIBERTY to go to your destination directly and quickly without delays, with a minimum expenditure of time on the way and to do more work in less time and at less cost.

The new Liberty-Brush car means for you:

FREEDOM from failure to keep appointments, loss of time traveling from one customer to another and the loss of money that such failure means.

Everybody has wanted a motor car and has waited for the time when it would be within his means. The Liberty-Brush fills the want.

The Liberty-Brush, built on standard lines, and a thoroughly capable car is made possible by our tremendous manufacturing facilities and the fact that we are willing to manufacture for a small profit on each car.

It is a car for salesmen, collectors, solicitors, canvassers, and for anyone who must get quickly from place to place. It is an ideal car for family use, as a boy or girl of fourteen can drive and care for it.

Most important of all, it is the product of the United States Motor Company, which immediately assures its position and its worth.

It is an epoch in the automobile industry, marking as it does a response by a standard manufacturer to the demand for a motor car that any man can buy and maintain.

We have 1800 dealers throughout the country selling our various products, but shall need more dealers to handle this car. We require a representative in every county and a rare opportunity is offered for men of energy who wish to enter a business with a great future. Write or wire for our proposition to dealers.

We shall continue to manufacture the Standard Brush Runabout at $450.00, the success of which is attested by the thousands in service.

ENTRIES ALREADY IN FOR COMING ELGIN AUTO MEET

Expert Drivers to Have Charge of Three Fat Cars Now Booked for Event.

Although the S. C. automobile race meeting does not take place for nearly two months, large entries already have been received by the management, Charles I. Hitchcock, chairman of the contest committee and referee, believes he made a mistake in not limiting the number of cars for these races, instead of increasing it.

The Chicago Motor Club is anticipating a record-breaking entry list, and Secretary Harry B. Shaver, president of the Milwaukee Automobile Club, is also ready to nominate three Stearns cars for the Kane County, while Hugh Hughes, manager of the Motor Parts Company, has declared he is prepared to nominate three Mercers and maybe four.

It is planned to have future meetings of the makers of the various cars, the idea of the event being to bring forward with entries already pledged for the Elgin, Sioux City and Vanderbilt Cup contests. Each maker is prepared to enter the same number of cars and the same drivers that he expects to have in these three events, and it is believed that the meeting will be one of the most interesting ever held in the Chicago district.

The Chicago Motor Club will issue every precaution to see that accidents at the races do not occur, as the officers intend to have a straight course and a number of days before the races. If any unqualified drivers will not be permitted to take part in the contest.

As for the course over which the four races will be run, the Elgin Automobile Road Race Association is spending $2,000 on improving the home stretch. From Hornbeck's turn to the grand stand the road has been widened to fifty feet, and so four cars could run abreast if necessary; from the grand stand to Bittner's hill the road now is thirty feet wide, and from there to Lake the highway is the old width, sixteen feet, but with a surface made as smooth as a floor. These improvements are the result of the Elgin Motor Club's desire to make the course safer and even more exciting for the spectators than in the contests of the past three years, when thirty miles an hour seemed to be the speed limit. Records this year will be the result.

WORCESTER HILL TEST GIVES PROMISE OF BIG RECORDS

Efforts Being Made to Secure Presence of Most Famous of Drivers.

MOTOR AMBULANCES IN WAR

George Roberts, "Vanderbilt" Winner, does Red Cross Work

It seems fitting for one from the winning driver of the Vanderbilt Cup race to the successful pursuit of driving the life-saving ambulance of the Seventh Regiment of New York last week, prompted at Peekskill but this is just what happened and the man is a well-known racing driver, George Roberts Train, a corporal in th Seventh Regiment.

REGARDING LAMP AND MOTOR CAR SPEED LAWS IN THIS STATE

All Vehicles Must Now Carry Lights; Speed of Automobiles Has Not Been Affected by Supreme Court Decision, Thinks Chairman Parker

By J. C. KERRIGON.

By the enactment of the light bill, the Massachusetts Legislature has again proven itself to be among the foremost of the States of this Union in safeguarding its people.

It is a measure which is of vital importance to everyone who uses the highways at night, as it provides that every vehicle on wheels shall have attached to it a light, or lights, and be visible from both front and rear during the period of from one hour after sun set to one hour before sun-rise

This bill is the result of the activity of Lewis R. Speare, A. E. Bliss, A. D. Converse, W. H. Chase, J. P. Coghlin and A. H. Learch, all of whom have for the past five or six years advocated its enactment by the Legislature. Before these great arguments, they have redoubled all last year convinced the legislators that the measure desired was not desired so much for the safety and welfare of the motorists as it was for other users of the highways.

The committee on Roads and Bridges, to which the bill was originally referred, reported unfavorably on the measure, but A. E. Bliss of Malden secured a substitute for the report in the bill, and by watching it at every turn he, together with the others that comprise the legislative committee of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association, brought about its enactment and Governor Foss, himself a motorist, was not slow to sign the same.

While it would appear that in these days of multiplied road travel common safety would require that all vehicles should carry lights at night it has been an exceedingly difficult proposition to secure legislation along these lines, not only in Massachusetts but elsewhere throughout the United States.

It may be somewhat surprising to know that the first act of this kind to be secured in this country was in New Jersey, which adopted a light measure at a recent session of the Jersey legislature. Massachusetts is the second Commonwealth to record to accept such a bill, and with these two precedents it is extremely probable that similar statutes will be sought and secured in all parts of the country.

It is a measure which has everything in its favor and not little against it. The great consideration that has been raised in the past against the measure was that it would cause a large expenditure on the part of horse-drawn vehicle owners by forcing them to purchase lights. This argument, however can hardly hold, inasmuch as the greater number of vehicles are equipped with headlamps before the delivery to the purchaser, so that in reality, considerable money is saved thereby at night, and especially the coming year.

The law becomes effective on the 23d day of August.

In his answer to the offer of President E. A. Filene, of the Big Brother Club, to help him in every possible way in improving the conditions as far as the operation of the automobile in Massachusetts is concerned, Chairman Alfred Parker of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, hits the nail right on the head when he says:

"I was in doubt myself as to whether the decision of the Supreme Court, to which you refer, had not affected the speed of automobiles. The appeal to the whole is accentuated because the law has not been urged by the lobbyists. Any speed, which is unsafe, comes within the terms of the law no matter whether it is ten, fifteen, twenty, or more miles per hour."

This is the position which has been taken by the AMERICAN since the handing down of the decision of the Supreme Court.

Any speed, which is unsafe, does not necessarily mean that it must be fast. A man can drive down Washington street at five miles an hour and, under certain conditions it would be magnificently unsafe. The same man can drive on a straight away road with no one across it for thirty or more miles an hour and it would not be unsafe.

It is simply a question of conditions. If the road be clear a man can with safety travel much faster than what he would ordinarily desire, while if it be crowded, he would, with due consideration for the rights of others, reduce his speed to what at the same time might be a man's pace and anything faster than a man's pace would be unsafe.

It is not, however, the majority of the drivers which brings the motorists into disrepute; it is the irresponsible five per cent—the men who have no thought or consideration for the rights of others, but who are determined to do as they please and never mind the consequence.

Those who think that by the decision of the Supreme Court all speed laws have been razed will sooner or later find themselves in trouble. The speed laws have not been removed, and since the decision of the Supreme Court was handed down it behooves the motorists to drive with fully as much, if not more, consideration than before; for while it may not be possible to secure a conviction for speeding there is a clause in the statute which is more feared than is the one covering the maximum rate of the speed law and that is the one covering reckless driving.

It is interesting to know that since the decision of the Supreme Court in the number of tests that have been operated in the suburban districts is seemingly a clearer understanding of what is right and what is wrong in the matter would than ever before.

HIGHER EFFICIENCY IN MOTIVE POWER

Two New Sixes Added to Peerless Output for 1912, Making Five Models by This Firm

Peerless cars for the season of 1912 are made in five styles, the [illegible] Probably the most distinctive [illegible] called in the announcement the pilothill is in regard to the two new sixes called as 36 horsepower and 48 horsepower, and some important improvements and additions to equipment will be found [illegible] all models. The Peerless Company has built a large [illegible] for the past four years. This model and the new four cylinder cars are continued for 1912.

The medium size six [illegible] of the new models, has a 4½ inch bore and 5½ inch stroke, and is rated as forty-two horsepower. Although smaller than the "six," it has an abundance of power and is an unusually good hill climber. Liberal tire equipment is furnished on wheels of the same diameter, making [illegible] interchange tires on the rear [illegible] may be equipped with [illegible] The long wheel base permits [illegible] and bodies with liberal dimensions at [illegible] easy riding.

The small "six," rated a [illegible] horsepower, has 4-inch bore and 5½ inch stroke. The tires, as on other models, are extra large and also interchangeable. The chassis can be equipped with [illegible] ger, touring, runabout, torpedo, limousine landaulet, Berlin or coupe type of [illegible] This one is especially well adapted for a gentleman's roadster

The large four-cylinder car rated as 40 p. has 5 inch bore and 5½ inch stroke. This model is so well known to automobile users that it needs no further introduction

The small four-cylinder car is the "Peerless Town Car," and is particularly equipped with luxurious and completely upholstered limousine and landaulet bodies. The motor is the same size as the large four—bore 4½ inches and 4½ inch stroke. The short wheel base and low entrance of this car make it very desirable for city use.

For the season of 1912 a great deal of attention has been given to the body designing and equipment, the manufacturers having in mind the comfort and convenience of Peerless users, all cars will be furnished with new and distinctively individual, pattern fore-door bodies, specially designed with a view to increased roominess and comfort, and to give a luxurious appearance to the car. The front seats are particularly spacious and comfortable and the control levers, in every instance on the inside of the body so as not to interfere in any degree with the comfort and freedom of the occupants. The front doors open backward and are provided with [illegible] which is [illegible] partly open position, allowing a free circulation of air. The doors are also locally removed, and a moulding attached to give a finished appearance to the car.

One of the features which deserves special mention is the electric lighting system, consisting of dynamo, directly driven from the motor, two powerful head lights, two electric side lights and one searchlight combination tail and number lamp all controlled individually or collectively by a switch on the dashboard within easy reach of the driver. The lamps are of special design, finished in black enamel and brass and equipped with parabolic reflectors. This lighting equipment is not only efficient, but also economical clean, and less weight than the gas lamps formerly used. A small electric storage battery constantly charged by the dynamo forms a part of the equipment. This is used to supply current for the lights when the motor is not running, and it also supplements the lighting system. The use of this combination for lighting system is a feature of modern enclosed cars and equipped with a similarly arranged system, and its use on motor vehicles is now, and a very decided step in advance.

Another feature which should be mentioned is the four-cylinder mechanical tire pumps attached to the transmission case. The operation of the pump is controlled by a lever, conveniently located, with hose connection always attached to the pump, and sufficiently long to reach any wheel when such is in use, this tube is gotten in a compartment under the driver's cushion.

How it double a nickeloided type of [illegible] tion is used on all models furnishing two complete and independent systems, so the current available from either the [illegible] ignition engines or from the storage battery. This arrangement does away with [illegible] box in which are located the [illegible] been attached to the dash. The small [illegible] controls for magneto or [illegible] and both in combination. It also can be [illegible] making the motor inoperative. The famous peerless wire [illegible] is [illegible] but is a wire altered to meet the requirements of the above described ignition system. The wire is connected by a spring attached at intervals.

One of the features of Peerless cars is the [illegible] two pedals are [illegible] lever under the hood which [illegible] is done by [illegible] and by using a common and positive method of [illegible] the gears [illegible] without the necessity of running [illegible] the motor. This device has been [illegible] improved for 1912 by [illegible] the control lever in such a position that it is impossible for the hood to be closed and fastened until the pet cocks have been opened.

Standard finish on all 1912 models will be Peerless green and 1 1/16 inch gold stripe on inner edge of mouldings. Other colors are optional.

Excellent Results.

Sales Manager A. H. Berndt of the Decatur Motor Truck Company [illegible] making his headquarters in Boston for the next couple of weeks, at the office of the Tayer Motor Sales Company, where he has been directing the sales of the truck throughout the eastern district. Excellent results have been far greater than were expected, not only here, but elsewhere. Mr. Berndt has arranged through the [illegible] a dealers agency, to equip one of the biggest retail firms there, and he has also secured similar results with several of the New York houses. In this territory, the orders were coming in faster than the plant could [illegible] but now with the factory equipped to more than double its capacity, [illegible] will be filled more rapidly. This will also allow the Tayer Company to [illegible] aggressive campaigns, and Mr. Berndt is to remain here some weeks assisting in the work. More than 500 Decatur trucks have been sold since January 1

An Attractive Booklet.

"Around the World in a Humpobile" is the title of an interesting little booklet reciting the experiences of three soldiers of commerce—Drake, Hanlon and Jones—who are carrying a Humpobile into every country where motor cars are known.

The booklet is typographically a work of art, while its contents are interesting, to say the least, reciting as it does the many interesting and what one might say novel experiences of these three men from the time they left Detroit until they reached Manila.

The H. J. Koehler Company of Boylston street will be pleased to furnish copies of the book.

Announcement

The 1912 models include Four-Cylinder and Six-Cylinder cars of Pore-Door Bodies, individual in design and built very roomy and comfortable, for both open and enclosed cars.

Among the important conveniences of the 1912 Peerless are the Power-driven Tire Pump for easy and cleanly inflating of tires and the Dynamo Electric Lighting System, which supplants the gas tank and oil lamp, affording a brilliant, effective light for every lamp on the car.

We are now prepared to accept orders for early delivery. Demonstrations by appoin

SCIENCE OF QUICK DELIVERY BY TRUCKS

Dan Baker, New England manager of the General Vehicle Company, who has given much time for the past few years to transportation and delivery problems, in an address before a business men's association recently said

"The manufacturers and merchants are all seeking out for the improved method of transportation and delivery. They realize that as the steam and electric locomotives have superseded the stage coach, so must some improved mechanical form of transportation be found for trackless motor vehicles to run with sufficient rapidity and safety through our streets, and at the same time do the work better than it is possible to do it with horses and show greater reliability and economy

"For deliveries, the sorting, routing and loading should be on the basis of mechanical transportation. An expensive vehicle should not be kept at a curb for hours waiting, but should be quickly filled by a skeleton body of hampers which have been packed outside and listed in a scientific manner enabling the delivery men to execute at least twice as much ground as possible over a horse drawn wagons.

"The same principle can be applied to dry goods department store deliveries, coal and lumber, but each conveys a different problem as a separate problem to be carefully worked out.

"Quickly and scientific work a vehicle can only travel over certain streets at a speed, and to go, the proper kind of service which will always be quick and which the regular delivery men can use. It must be a simply constructed and inexpensive piece of mechanism

The 1912 Everitt line will include one six cylinder and two four cylinder chassis on which will be mounted the most modern types of touring, roadster and roadster bodies, rating at 48, 36 and 30 horse power and selling, completely equipped, for $1,250, $1,000 and $750 respectively. The mechanical and technical details of these cars have been brought to a point of almost perfect durability

The Everitt system of manufacture is by automatic tools, jigs and fixtures, every part of the car being made in the one factory. During the past year the factory organization has been brought to a point of highest efficiency and by a splendid example of scientific management, losses have been stopped at every corner and in every possible way, with the result that the actual cost of manufacturing has been reduced to an extremely low figure

The new Everitt six is equipped with many details of which one of the most striking is the use of a blow type oxy-acetylene welding process. This is a method by which the six cylinder engine and its [illegible] pipes and the upper half of the crank case are cast all in one piece, doing away with about 200 extra parts, materially simplifying, rigidity and perfect alignment impossible to the old style construction.

The new six-cylinder Everitt has a wheel base of 125 inches, and large wheels and tires 36x4 inches in size demountable rims and a new cellular radiator of the [illegible] honeycomb type. The [illegible] is provided with magneto and battery [illegible] composite control placing all on which is held a sealed cap. The [illegible] and one which [illegible] being more and more developed in high priced cars is the use of positive acceleration of a compressed air [illegible] operated by a push button on the dash

MID-SEASON REALTY BUSINESS AT HEIGHT

Big Suburban Sales Planned by Developers for the Holiday on Tuesday,

DEMAND BEST IN YEARS

Hundreds of Home-Seekers and Investors Taking Over Titles,

By FRANK A. LAVELLE.

MID-SEASON in the real estate market will be in full swing Tuesday, the holiday. Though none of the downtown offices will be open on that day all the suburban brokers and developers of land will be at their posts, for the Fourth of July is always a big day of business for those who deal in suburban real estate.

The suburban real estate market has been the best so far this year for a score of years and the demand for such property is very large. Hundreds of home-seekers and investors are buying in the various districts about the city, thus indicating plenty of confidence in real estate values.

All the land operators and developers have been pleased for the last two and extra salesmen will be engaged at each tract to take care of the crowds expected to visit the properties. Some of the firms will hold festivities in connection with the sales and a large volume of business is expected.

Buys Back Bay Property.

Among the big sales reported to the city yesterday was of property at No. 22 Bowdoin street, Back Bay, which has been sold by the office of Frank A. Rimmell. It comprises a five-story stone and brick apartment house, known as the Langham apartments, and was sold for $45,000, $10,000 being on the land. The grantor was Martha E. Pratt and the purchaser Frank C. Fox, who bought for investment. The building contains ten suites of three rooms and bath each, is equipped with all modern conveniences, including elevator service, wall-board hall, wash-basin [illegible] and with a kitchen in the basement equal to many of the downtown hotels. The property was well leased but it was [illegible] in order to assemble a [illegible].

Arthur L. Race has transferred his property at No. 60 West Cedar street, corner of Revere street, Beacon Hill, to the estate of William Chapman Cook. The consideration is $11,000, of which amount $6,000 is on the 1,270 square feet of land and the balance on the dwelling. The property has a [illegible] on Cedar street and [illegible] Mr. Race purchased it [illegible].

Henry W savage reports that he has sold the investment property at Nos. 70-72 Revere street and Nos 1 to 6 Irving place [illegible]. HARD-EARNED DOLLARS Must Not Be Thrown Away

DON'T PAY TRUST PRICES FOR ANY MAKE PIANO

I have been telling the people for years that it is not necessary to pay luxury prices to the Piano Trust for pianos. A piano is no longer a luxury. I have taken it out of that class. I have made it as easy to secure a piano (by reducing the price and making the terms of purchase liberal all) as it is to secure any other household necessity.

I have educated the public on piano values to such an extent that the intelligent man or woman, who knows how to go about it, can now buy a piano for much less than it could be bought for three years ago. I am in receipt of letters daily from all over New England, praising me for my stand against the Piano Trust, and I am selling more pianos at lower prices than ever before. It pays to protect the public.

Don't buy any make piano till you see me.

Truthfully,

GLOOMY OUTLOOK FOR CASH WHEAT

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, July 1.—The carriers of cash wheat in this market furnish the most bearish conditions in that grain in the history of Chicago. There is no demand for the cash grain and unless export bids is searched and the large lot of old wheat on hand is placed abroad, the outlook, not only for those who are now buying the new crop but for the grower as well, may be said to be alarming

Minneapolis reported more interest shown in the spot market during the latter part of the week, but the movement is not pronounced and buyers are asking for concessions on even moderate sized lots.

Trade Conditions Stagnant.

There is no trade here on outside account, as outsiders fear the manipulative tactics of those who now control wheat. Word comes from many sections of Missouri, Kansas and Illinois that owing to the present price of wheat, complaints a small percentage of it will be stacked.

July fell from Sept. to 91¼c, then off to 88¾c. September from 88⅝c, up to 90¾c, and back to 89¼c. December from 91c. up to 92¾c, and back to 92¼c.

Cash have been shaded in price somewhat, many of the longs changed their paper profits into actual cash. It is believed that much of the cash held has been fully discounted. The demand for cash outs has been small, wedges of the new crop sold from 40½c. up to 44c. and back to 43c. September from 43⅞c. to 44⅝c. and back to 44¼c.

Corn Crop Not Damaged.

The corn market is a weather affair, and price changes will be governed by the temperature and moistures until the crop is ready for the harvester. Those who are best posted on conditions on the farms say that the crop has not been hurt one particle by lack of moisture and high temperatures, but rains are needed in nearly all sections. An export demand has sprung up in the absence of offerings from Argentina, but the cash grain is slow at Chicago, although active at the Seaboard. Corn sold between 65½c. and 66¾c. for July, 67⅝c. to 67¾c. for September, and 66¾c. to 66¾c. for December.

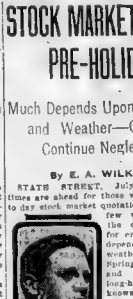
STOCK MARKET A PRE-HOLIDAY ONE

Much Depends Upon the Crops and Weather—Coppers Continue Neglected.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, July 1.—Perhaps few weeks will be found a more critical period for crops and much depends upon the weather for growing spring wheat, corn and cotton. The long-headed person knows that crop scares will come at intervals and that corn will all dry up with the hot winds. Then rain will come and all the damage will be repaired over night. This will be the factor towards making market fluctuations until midsummer, everything else being equal, and those who are armed with early information upon this subject will be in a position to take advantage of it.



At present the market is a pre-holiday affair, but it is a much better one than that from the financial centers. To-day was a short one, which many took advantage of to vacation a day earlier. North, as that normal conditions will not prevail until mid-week. Not much encouragement, however, can be gleaned from general business conditions, although the sentiment continues hopeful, and this is the most important factor in the situation. A general resumption of business, but it is all a question of confidence. The Supreme Court decisions have so far helped some, but the adjustment of labor and the maturing of crops will help more.

Little Public Interest in Market.

Little public interest is manifested in the market and this is not to be wondered at with the investigations and indictments at hand, together with the threatened ones. The professional interest is mainly responsible for the present activity, which prices have received. The big interests are sitting tight and will continue to enjoy that position until the way is made clear for getting prices another notch. The fact that stocks yield more than money will bring in evidence enough that nothing of a serious nature can happen to give any of the prices anything but a temporary set back.

June Big Month in Copper Industry.

Copper stocks continue to be neglected and those securities are to buy and grass. The metal retains its strength, but a period of dullness is at hand, and there is little or no tendency to either buying or selling. June was the banner month for a copper trade for a long time, and a favorable exhibit of figures is expected to be shown for the month. The share market is very inactive and for this reason is heavy. The Boston market is still preparing for leadership. Some day this will come and then coppers will again take the place they once held in the spotlight of the whole world. There is plenty of good blood present for this sort of thing but a little encouragement is desired from the outside world.

First National's Disappointment

Big Loss Represented by Present Market Price—Will Not Be Abandoned.

We believe, say Messrs. Hodges, Towle & Co., that some of the recent New York selling of First National stock is by what might be regarded as outsider and that it represented losses at above per share, to say nothing of interest, as that the proceeds were put into several low priced Porcupine shares in the hope of making up losses. There has been no greater disappointment in any of these shares than that of First National. There are about 30,000 stockholders, the great majority of whom paid from $60 to $85 per share for their stock, and has also paid several assessments. Of course, the property will not be abandoned notwithstanding the decree of the court shutting down the company's smelter, but it may take a long time to bring any out of chaos.

It is possible that the Cottrell process will yet be perfected. In fact [illegible] National Copper officials declare that it already perfected, and that almost 10,000 lbs. of copper were produced by the company in the month of May. Nothing has been published through this process, the policy of the officials being to keep the trouble is that they cannot make the farmers of the court believe it.

The 5000 employees have now been discharged, and stockholders see their property in the hands of the receiver for $1,000,000, which represents less than the amount which amount is but slightly above the company's present working capital.

Stockholders evidently face a rather serious condition, but not a hopeless one. The Guggenheim interests are the largest holders, and they are in control. Just what they have the best mentality can be only conjecture at this writing, but the natural assumption that they will not hold out for more than a reasonable price for the property. Should this be the case, First National Copper Company stock will be a purchase. Fortunately there are now bonds on the property.

CORIE STRONG IN SAGGING MARKET

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Strength of Corie in the corn belt West of the Mississippi river in the face of a sagging market on reports of drouth conditions in that section was the feature of the stock market to-day. Stocks declined all around and closed at the lowest prices paid for the session. Net losses, however, were not large because in the early trading a sharp rally followed the high prices in London. The strongest stocks were steel and Erie.

Owing to this bull day in London and what one way or another.

A moderate amount of [illegible] was in progress in the market, but the speculation which a year ago was so marked was not in evidence to-day. The buying was confined to a few stocks, and these were largely professional. The public is not in the market at all, and there will not be any material change in the situation until the crop conditions are definitely known.

Almost Every Business Man Liable.

The indictment of steel men connected with the crops had no influence on stocks, as it was generally expected that would be the case. The real attack on the Steel Trust, which has been in progress for a year ago. If the Indictments had had any depressing influence it was more than offset by the report of the Russell Sage gain in the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. The indictments of the steel men, which [illegible] other banks besides this one, and Michigan, [illegible] thousands of cases of the unmarked [illegible] at 25 cents per [illegible] was also made [illegible] 25,000 pounds of [illegible] Both of these goods is established [illegible] Mexico.

Hesitation Over Steel Report.

After dumping the public to the extent of a few hundreds of millions of dollars, the government may discover the correct method of handling the trust problem. Publication of the Steel Trust by the Bureau of Corporations does not differ materially from the formal [illegible] made from time to time by Post & Flagler. About the only [illegible] of opinion is that the [illegible] very pronounced concerning the [illegible] strength lies in [illegible] monopolistic grasp or lease of raw materials.

Gov. Pothier, in Remarkable Statement, Seeks to Evade Responsibility for Enforcing the Law

GOVERNOR ARAM J. POTHIER

State [illegible] the people practically walk up to the State House, take him by the scruff of the neck and force him to do so.

Slattery, who has made a fortune [illegible] Rhode Island and who has confessed to the public through the Sun-day AMERICAN that he runs a gambling [illegible] at North Providence, has got to prove [illegible] he will take any action.

In a remarkable interview with a representative of this newspaper Governor Pothier made his position on gambling in [illegible]. His position in brief is that the gamblers can own Narragansett Pier, Newport, Cranston, North Providence and other places in the State, so far as he is concerned, if the people in those localities allow it. When a reporter called on the Governor at the [illegible] was handed a little type-written [illegible] which Mr. Pothier pulled from his inside coat pocket.

[illegible] amazing statement de-fining the conditions under which Gov[illegible] that he will get busy.

Position of the Governor.

"As a general proposition, however, there is no question but what the officials of every city and town are clothed with ample authority to enforce the law, and public sentiment in any community always will be powerful enough to exact such enforcement when it desires. If any evil exists, and a complaint based on tangible evidence, signed by reputable citizens, and supported by affidavits made by responsible parties bearing testimony of such a nature as would be competent and conclusive in court, is made to the council or to the local prosecuting authority, and this results in no effort on the part of the officials to prosecute or to abate the evil, then I shall be glad to receive such evidence and affidavits and undertake an investigation, with the means at my command."

"Shuts His Eyes."

The Providence Tribune in commenting on this statement charges terrible things. It says:

"The Governor's position relative to the gambling industry in this State is almost the most outraged expression of the official who shuts his eyes and calls for evidence that is before the eyes of all and officials. His position is the same as that assumed by the presidents of the councils, the chiefs of police and the sheriffs of the counties where the gambling goes on and the grafting goes on. Perhaps Slattery, who has told so much, may tell more."

As the reporter walked over from the Providence railroad station toward the [illegible] he was impressed by the [illegible] beauty of the great white marble [illegible] as many thousands of people [illegible] who pass through Providence on the railroad trains. A green lawn [illegible] town slopes down from the imposing pile [illegible] two different points cooling sprays of water flared up into the air, [illegible] a crystal drops up on the sward.

HAVILAND and THORNTON

With Sketches of and by Themselves.

(Printed by Permission of Haviland and Thornton, Who Control All Stage Rights.)

HAVILAND—So you just got in, eh?

THORNTON—Yes, I came clean from Chicago.

HAVILAND—If you did, you're the first one that ever came clean from there.

THORNTON—I had to lay over in Pittsburg between trains.

HAVILAND—So did I, between two cattle trains.

THORNTON—I've got to go to Boston and I haven't enough money.

HAVILAND—How much have you?

THORNTON—Ten cents.

HAVILAND—I can get you there.

THORNTON—How?

HAVILAND—Buy a tin horn and go there on the sound.

THORNTON—My, but you are bright, aren't you.

HAVILAND—Indeed I am, my blood is full of phosphorus.

THORNTON—Are you a sporting man?

THORNTON—You mean the one that married the circus chap?

HAVILAND—Yes, the one that married the ossified man.

THORNTON—Oh, he was too hard to get along with; she divorced him and married the India rubber man.

HAVILAND—I guess she can twist him around her finger, all right.

THORNTON—Yes, they have one bouncing baby boy.

HAVILAND—Small family, isn't it?

THORNTON—Indeed it is.

HAVILAND—Think they'll stretch it?

THORNTON—By the way, where is that thin sister of yours?

HAVILAND—Oh, she's working downtown in a restaurant.

THORNTON—Is that so? What is she doing?

HAVILAND—She's a mode

THORNTON—In a restaurant?

HAVILAND—Yes, she poses for sandwiches; you know they wear them very thin in the Summer time

THORNTON—Speaking of Summer, I hear that it is so warm in Chicago that people are shedding their clothes right on the street.

HAVILAND—Yes, while I was at the depot, it was so hot there the train shed, but that isn't so warm. I've seen it so hot in Kansas that corn growing in the field popped and flew over the fence and a cow in the next field thought it was snowing and froze to death.

THORNTON—And you think it was hot there? Why, I've seen it so hot in Brazil that the rubber trees became prostrated when they stretched their limbs.

THORNTON—You've travelled quite a little, haven't you?

HAVILAND—All over the world, from Sunup to Sundown in an hour.

THORNTON—How did you like England?

HAVILAND—All right, but there were too many Englishmen there when I was over.

THORNTON—What country did you like best?

HAVILAND—Mexico.

THORNTON—For Heaven's sake! Mexico! and why?

HAVILAND—Well, all the houses are built of mud there, so when you get married you just take your hod, go down the road a piece, pick out a muddy spot, and put it in her name and live happy ever after.

THORNTON—Oh, then you do believe a man should take a wife?

HAVILAND—Yes, but he should use some judgment as to whose wife he takes.

THORNTON—Do you believe that marriages are happy?

HAVILAND—The marriages are, but the people, Oi, oi

THORNTON—You must have been married

HAVILAND—I was, but it fizzvered. She wanted me to become a Socialist.

THORNTON—What's a Socialist?

HAVILAND—A Socialist is a man who is always dividing something he doesn't own

THORNTON—By the way, did you know my sister Leona is on the stage?

HAVILAND—No, poor girl, what is she doing?

THORNTON—She is with a musical comedy and gets twenty-five a week, and only has to say, "Hip, hip hooray!"

HAVILAND—Twenty-five a week just for two hips and a hooray?

THORNTON—Yes

HAVILAND—Only gets five for the "hooray," eh?

HAVILAND—But your father and mother get along fine now, don't they?

HAVILAND—Yes, I know. He discovered Hell Gate, didn't he?

THORNTON—What are you doing now?

THORNTON—A doer? What's that?

HAVILAND—Well, you see, they have three letters and a doer, the cashier tells the bookkeeper, the bookkeeper tells the treasurer, the treasurer tells me what's to be done and I'm the doer.

HAVILAND—You say you were born in Jersey?

THORNTON—Yes, in 1887.

HAVILAND—When were you naturalized?

HAVILAND—What became of that fat brother of yours that used to go to school?

HAVILAND—What does he do there?

THORNTON—He is supposed to remember, in his head, the number of bullets fired each day so the directors can keep track of the money taken in.

HAVILAND—I always thought he was a bullet head.

THORNTON—You had no reason to think so, did you?

HAVILAND—Indeed I did. He was the most ignorant boy in our class. One day the teacher asked him the meaning of the word recuperate. He said, "I don't know." She said, "Well, if your father works hard all day and comes home at night, tired, he rests—recuperates. Now what does your father do at night?" And that boob brother of yours said, "That's what mother wants to find out."

HAVILAND—Well, I guess I will beat it now.

THORNTON—Yes, so will I, I want to go to Union Hill.

HAVILAND—Want to go? I bet you have to. Well, good-by forever.

ADVENTURES OF HAROLD HANGOVER

By William F. Kirk.

Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

(Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.)

HAROLD HANGOVER, the celebrated Oshkosh baseball pitcher, comes to New York and signs with the Giants. He invents the "Crab Glide," the "Beer Ball," the "Alum Ball" and the "Murphy Ball." With the last named ball, which is nothing more nor less than a round potato nine inches in circumference, he fools the foxy Chicago Cubs and brings grief to the heart of Magnate Murphy.

CHAPTER XXVII

"HAROLD," said McGraw, as the two were playing a game of pool one night shortly after the events set forth in the last chapter, "why don't you get married?"

The great Oshkosh pitcher blushed to the roots of his eyelashes.

"You must be a mind reader," he said. "I was just thinking about it."

"You mean the little brunette you had out to dinner last night?" asked McGraw, with a slight twinkle in his shrewd black eyes.

"That is her," replied Harold Hangover. "She used to know a lot of Wisconsin people that I know."

"It wouldn't be a bad idea for you to wed," said the manager of the Giants. "I always like to have my players marry and settle up. I find that the married state tends to regular habits. I had a friend in Baltimore that used to go on sprees and lose himself for a week now and then. He married a Baltimore belle, and after that he became very regular in his habits. He drank every day."

"I will admit that marriage is a wonderful thing," said Harold Hangover. "There's only this one thing that keeps me off—the expense."

"That is all fallacy," said McGraw. "Two can live as cheap as one."

"This brunette girl, Mr. McGraw," said our hero, "eats too much. That's what scares me. Last night our dinner check was $6.00. That's a lot of money for a dinner for two young people just starting out in the world. Why, she can order more and eat more than a trained nurse!"

"True love never takes account of cafe checks," said McGraw. "It is evident that you have not yet met the girl that Fate has ordained shall be your life partner When that day comes you will float heavenward together, wafted on the wings of Love. It's your shot. Here is the four ball."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE Pittsburg baseball park was crowded to the turnstiles when one of Mr. Lynch's near-umpires cried, "Play ball!"

Four of McGraw's talented pitchers were warming up in front of the stand, and the famous "Lefty" Leifield was warming up for big, wholesouled, generous Colonel Dreyfuss, the Pittsburg magnate.

Some of our readers may not understand that big league pitchers guard their records as jealously as a mother guards her first born. No pitcher in the National League, for instance, cares to work against a star like Mathewson or Leifield. The result of games in which these worthies work is usually a loss chalked up to the discredit of the man bold enough to face them. And so, when the quartet of Giant twirlers saw "Lefty" warming his wing, they began to grow singularly languid.

Harold Hangover, in particular, had no longing for a duel with Leifield. McGraw was standing behind him, and he knew it. He began to utter low sounds of anguish, tenderly rubbing his right armpit the while.

"I'm chafed a little," he complained. "And I think there must be a tendon loose up in there."

"If you think you are going to get away with any bush league stuff like that," retorted McGraw, "there's a tendon loose in your head."

"Do you mean, Mr. McGraw, that I am to have no excuse for this sore arm?"

"A bushel of it, Harold," said Mac, "after the ninth inning." He walked away.

Realizing that he had to pitch, our hero made the best of it, and by the time President Lynch's almost arbitrator gave the "Play ball" sign, as above stated, Harold Hangover was ready to go in.

The Pirates got to him in the first inning It was not altogether his fault, though he had faked so religiously about his chafed arm that during the first inning he almost thought he had one. His support was loose enough, and two singles helped to send two Pittsburgers across the plate, so that in the space of a few short minutes the score stood two to nothing.

For seven long innings the Giants could do nothing against Leifield. It began to look like defeat for Harold Hangover—his first defeat in many moons. The thousands in the stands could not see the misery depicted on his fair, boyish face, because his head was down. True, the Pirates had been able to do nothing with his "sneeze ball" after that fateful first inning, for he was pitching masterfully, but two runs is a great handicap in some games.

The Giants got one in the eighth, and in their part of the ninth they made a valiant effort to win out. They succeeded by hard, consistent batting, in filling the bases before anybody had been retired, and hope ran high in the manager's breast. The next two Giants, however, were out on easy pop-ups. It was up to Harold Hangover. The mighty batter and pitcher, resolved to do or die, stood there with his great frame tense, waiting for a good one

"Win the game, Harold! If you win the game you may take me to dinner again to-night!"

For one fleeting instant Harold Hangover turned and glanced into the stand. It was his pretty brunette!

OUR CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL

How to Become a Hod-Carrier.

FOREWORD:

WE DID not announce in advance this special "course" in our unprecedented, unsurpassed correspondence course, or higher education, for the reason that it would have been doubted. Rather, we preferred to spring it and let our vast army of pupils see for themselves that we are sparing no expense whatever.

Professor Mortimer Horace Tote, called "Hod Tote" by his close friends, but whose real name is Terrance Swenson, was secured by the publishers at great cost to outline this course.

REASON:

THERE is reason in everything, except, perhaps, a harem skirt, and the reason for being a hod carrier is substantial. A ribbon clerk receives as much as $6 a week. An expert hod carrier who can perform his duties without one false move, who executes his tasks with finesse, receives as much as $6 per diem.

If there is any better reason for being a hod carrier it is in another world.

FIRST MOVE.

TO WORK one's way to the pinnacle of success as a hod carrier one must start at the very bottom of the ladder.

After that it is a matter of long training. Take a couple of courses in squilibrium. Next learn that a ladder is full of holes and that these holes are not for use, but merely for ventilation.

THE HOD:

A great deal depends upon the selection of the proper hod. By all means secure one with a friction clutch. A hod done in rosewood ornamented with inlaid silver birch in the well-known brickyard design will be quite appropriate for a beginner.

Remember one end of the trough in the hod has a hurdle. There are few bricks trained to leap hurdles and in consequence, unless one stumbles on the fourteenth floor, the bricks will remain where they were placed.

There are two methods of carrying the hod. One is to do it yourself all your life. The other is to get in politics, secure contracts and hire others to do it.

HOW TO OPERATE A HOD:

THERE are several methods.

One may have a "V" shaped incision made at the top of the right shoulder. Have this incision lined with felt or flannel to prevent marring the hod, insert hod in notch in shoulder and proceed up the ladder.

Another method is to inflate a rubber water bottle with choice soft water. Nail this securely to the hod and use that as a buffer over the shoulder. Unless there is a puncture the result will be quite satisfactory, having the water hot in Winter and using ice water in Summer.

THE BRICKS:

REST the hod on the ground upon its single wooden leg. Place the bricks in the trough, soft side up. This prevents them from bouncing about. When you have more than you can carry, rest awhile, then remove half the bricks. You will find you have too light a load. Replace some of the bricks. You will have replaced too many. Remove some of the bricks. Now add two. Now remove three. Now add four. Now remove two. Keeping this up you will soon have the hod load of bricks quite properly adjusted and, at the same time, another hour will have gone. You are, of course, working by the day.

TO WORK YOUR WAY UP:

EVEN a hod carrier is ambitious to work his way up. Placing the hod over your right shoulder let it properly balance, with the wooden leg dangling gracefully. Then climb the ladder. This is the great secret of the expert hod carriers—to climb a ladder without skidding or violating the speed regulations.

The space between the rungs is not practical as far as a foothold is concerned. If you miss the rungs you will only put your foot in it. Be careful about this.

FALLING:

DON'T fall.

Probably there is no better advice than this to give either a politician or hod carrier.

If you do not adhere to this rule, however, and insist upon falling at times, wait until you are in the basement.

Sometimes a hod carrier is taken with an instant desire to fall when on the tenth or fourteenth floor. In that case, cling to your bricks as you come down. If you fail to do this the boss will fire you for breaking up a hodful of very valuable bricks and it would be embarrassing to lose your balance and your job almost at the same time.

WHAT TO DO:

IF YOU do not like the boss: The genial office of hod carrier enables one to readily dispense with his boss and try another. To do this watch the boss. When he is directly under your ladder and you are up about eight stories, take a brick and smash a rung in the ladder, at the same moment allowing the hodful of bricks to fall the seventy or eighty feet kerplop right on the head of the boss.

At the same time thrust your leg through the ladder, cling head downward and shout for help. When they remove you they will see the broken rung. By the time they get you down the objectionable boss will have been taken to the morgue.

Your next step is to complain of appendicitis, brought on by the breaking of the ladder. Then sue the contractor for $10,000. Even if your attorney does get the cash, remember this will remove all suspicion from you regarding the sudden demise of the boss.

Marshall P. Wilder's London Letter---No. 1

London, July 17, 1911.

WE are still enveloped in raincoats and gloom, for the sky remains one mass of unbroken gray, except for occasional feeble struggles on the part of the sun to peep through. They are ineffectual, however, and umbrellas are more than usually ubiquitous, even in this land of the untailing and perrenial umbrella. Two men the other day, sharing the same dripping protection, their heads huddled together to escape the rivulets that coursed from the streaming edges, their coat collars turned up to protect them from the piercing chill, were discussing their plans. Said one:

"I say, old chap, where are you spending the Summer?"

"The Summer? When is it?" inquired the other, gloomily.

Standing in front of the Carleton lately, I saw one of those gayly-costumed foreigners that are so often a part of London crowds, drive up in a hansom. He was, like Solomon, arrayed in all his glory, an Indian or a Parsee. As he entered the door the driver of his hansom was asked by another driver:

"Wot's that chap, Bill?"

"Why, 'e comes from H'India—wot they calls a Parsee."

"An' wot's a Parsee?"

"Well, 'e must be on 'is vacation."

The sun did manage to struggle forth on Tuesday, on the occasion of a lawn party at the Botanic Gardens, given for the benefit of the Actors' Orphanage Fund.

The usual crowd of English pleasure-seekers, who take their pleasures sadly, thronged the lawns and tents. A mild excitement attended the progress of the Duke and Duchess of Fife, who represented royalty on this occasion. But, on the whole, conversation and real fun, from the viewpoint of an American, languished. In trying to make some with a charming but thoroughly British gentleman of my acquaintance, I ventured the highly original remark that I had heard at least a thousand times during the afternoon:

"Isn't it a charming affair?"

"Very," said my English friend. "They have a lot of these sort of things over here. There will be another to-morrow, you know."

"This same charity?" I asked.

"No; the deaf and dumb friends, I believe."

"Like-y to be a very quiet affair," I ventured, getting ready to protect myself, if necessary.

"No, no," ruminated my friend, with a gently detached air of boredom; "military band, and all that sort of thing—rather noisy affair, I fancy."

I wonder if the sun got in his eyes and made him muff it?

The International Exhibition, known as The White City, is a place where a fairly clear day is a necessity. It is a wonderful place, where even a good sized crowd looks lost. The people, however, interest us most. 'Arry and his 'Arriet come here to spend a holiday, and see the balloon ascension, visit the Kalmuck Camp and Hagenbeck's Arena of Wild Animals. The barkers who tempt the unsuspecting to enter the revolving barrel and the horribly billowy Waves of the Ocean are masters of their art, their Cockney dialect lending a touch of novelty to ears accustomed to the genus who flourish at Coney Island.

One of them, who tried to persuade the shrinking 'Arry to strike with a sledge hammer a weight to see how far he could send it up, thereby displaying his muscle, was a joy.

"'Ere you are, now! step right h'up. Show the lidy 'ow strong you are. Your lidy won't think nothink of you, if you can't knock 'er about. Come on, show 'ow 'ard you can 'it. What? You aren't afraid, are you? There's a fine, buxom lass—let 'er try it."

"Go on an' try it, 'Melia," urged the pasty-faced little man, escorting a fine, strapping young woman. Thus urged, 'Melia, with heightened color, and a defiant look about, picked up the hammer and smote the iron such a mighty blow that it flew to the top, and came back with a crash.

"My word! that was a 'ard one. There's a fine strong gal as'll always be h'able to work and 'and 'er man a bit for beer and 'baccy. And your h'arm is wonderful. In the laundry business, I take it? Yus? I thought so. Call again, miss. I may be lookin' for a gal o' me own some day. Next—step right h'up, and show 'ow strong you are."

I went out of town the other day to appear at a lawn fete. In the large stations like Paddington the train starter, who gives the signal on a little whistle like a child's toy, is the most resplendent thing imaginable, done up in gold cord and decorations like the admiral of the fleet. As this glittering vision dawned across my horizon I said to an Englishman in the compartment with me:

"What is that?"

"That? He is the train starter."

"Oh, indeed; I thought he was the Lord Mayor."

"I must tell you, sir," said my traveling companion haughtily, "that the Lord Mayor is not in the employ of the North Western Railway."

Victor Hugo said that the best way to see London was from the top of a bus, and I certainly agree with him. They run everywhere and the drivers are the very best guides. These sturdy old Englishmen, with their rosy, weather-beaten faces, are filled with quaint humor, and it is a pleasure to ride with them. The large motor bus is fast superseding the old-fashioned ones drawn by horses. I prefer the latter myself, as the motors run too quickly to see things properly, and there is no interesting old driver to talk to. My prejudice is shared by the drivers, for they have a seething hatred for the clumsy power-driven vehicles that are taking away their trade. In the Strand one day one of these was standing, while the chauffeur was down, and with his hood lifted, was peering into the internal economy of the machine. The passengers, interested, were standing up and lookin down over the edge. The driver of my bus looked with scorn at the proceedings, and as we passed delivered this Parthian shot:

"Don't be alarmed, ladies; 'e's only puttin' in a new CHAPTER I.

THE radiance of the street lights is reflected upon the wet pavements.

It is night, and raining.

This explains two things at one and the same time—why the street lamps are lighted and why the pavements are wet.

See! A taxi is madly dashing through the street, with its meter recording a yard every eleven inches.

Surely no one would laugh at that, for the poor cannot afford it and the rich suffer horribly when they part with money.

It is Seldum Seezit, the world-celebrated detective

But he is not wealthy. Why should he laugh at the clicking of the taxi meter?

Ah, ha! There's a mystery here!

Or, to put it plainly, here's a mystery there!

He is laughing because it is not he who is to pay the taxi driver.

Do you blame him?

But look how he is garbed!

Evening clothes!

Yes, gentle reader, we must admit it, our hero is wearing a white shirt with an evening suit!

CHAPTER II.

Being thus strained, it is fine music.

It is the annual Charity Ball.

The swellest event in the social year. As we gaze enviously at the great throng of social leaders entering the place with their diamonds, furs, silks, all their own, and their husbands and wives—whose ownership has naught to do with this tale of baffling mystery—a taxi drives up—the same taxi we discussed in the previous chapter!

But what is our hero doing at this great social event where so much beauty and wealth gathers at a fabulous cost in order to clear a few hundred dollars to pay the salary of the officials of the Charitable Organization?

He has been summoned to appear. He does not, himself, know as yet what his duties are to be.

He is greeted at the entrance by Mrs. Hartley Hinks Moneywell, the acknowledge leader of the social set.

"Diamonds stolen again?" asked our hero as she led him into a corner of the conservatory.

"Worse than that, Mr. Seezit," said Mrs. Moneywell, "I am liable to be dethroned as the leader unless you discover"—

But, alas, the orchestra strikes up and the remainder of her sentence is inaudible.

We will have to delve into another chapter.

CHAPTER III

"TELL me about it," said Seldum Seezit, the world-famous detective and hero of this thrilling tale.

"I want you to learn where she got that Bavarian Butterfly she is wearing on her right shoulder, and also how she fastens it there without apparent pin or ribbon."

"Skin plaster—I mean, adhesive plaster, possibly," suggested our hero.

"It doesn't matter what, I want to know how,' and I also want to know where I can procure one like it, or even better. That odd bit of jewelry is attracting all sorts of admiration which would otherwise be given to my own jewels."

"Very good," returned our hero "And now," he asked, as though upon second thought, "would you be kind enough to tell me who is wearing this Bavarian Butterfly?

"Oh, excuse me," said Mrs. Moneywell, "I am so chagrined and angry and heartbroken and jealous, to tell you the truth, because she has such an exquisite bit of jewelry, that I neglected to say it was worn by Mrs. Van Poore."

"Mrs. Van Poore!" ejaculated our hero, Seldum Seezit, the world-famous detective, "why, she has no money. Her husband has none. They get into society only because 'Poore' is a very old family. I fail to see how he could afford to buy her a Bavarian Butterfly."

CHAPTER IV.

"COUNT VON VOLDERVEDDERING—Mrs. Van Poore."

Mrs Van Poore bowed low and extended her hand to the Count, who was being introduced to her by an acquaintance.

"So please it Iss, am I. Yess?" said the Count.

"Indeed," said Mrs. Van Poore, "and are you"——.

But, dear reader, why bother with this piffle? See! Behold!!! This man introduced as Count Von Volderveddering is none other than our hero, Seldum Seezit, the world-famous detective!

Ah—ha! We have it, he is passing himself off as a German Count in order to talk to her about Bavarian Butterflies.

Clever?

Yes, indeed; there's nothing to it, kid, but clevarness.

Count Von Volderveddering leads her to the conservatory. Under a brilliant light he stoops and picks up a little diamond pin he purposely and secretly dropped In doing so he looked intently at the celebrated Bavarian Butterfly on her white shoulder

"Did you drop this?" asked the Count

"How dainty! I am sorry to say I did not," she answered.

"I giff it to you, yess," smiled our hero, "but vait allow me," and he pulled out his handkerchief from his merciful heavens, dear reader, will you ever forgive us? —yes, from his sleeve, and brushed the diamond pin as though it were dusty, then handed it to her. As he did so he flecked her shoulder lightly with the handkerchief. A few minutes later he left her.

CHAPTER V

IN a corner of the conservatory our hero, Seldum Seezit, is bending over a little pocket analyzing outfit. The corner of his handkerchief, which bea s a slight stain, is soaking in a test tube. A pocket cigar lighter is furnishing the heat. Little vials of acids and alkaloids he is using with rapidity

When Seldum Seezit got a close glimpse of the Bavarian Butterfly on the alabaster shoulder of Mrs Van Poore he decided it was not a genuine jewel, but PAINTED THERE!!!

Then he carelessly flecked it and got some of the stain on his handkerchief

This enabled him to satisfy himself that it was painted on and not a genuine jewel, and it also enabled him to secure a grain or two of the paint, sufficient for analysis

Intently he watches the stain boil out of the handkerchief into the test tube. Now a drop from a dozen tiny phials and finally the liquid is neutralized

"Well, I'll be dashed," said our hero, whose only fault is the use of profanity.

Hurriedly he put the pocket analyzing set back in his coat-tail pocket and hunted up Mrs. Moneywell

"Who is Mrs. Van Poore's affinity?" he asked.

"Nothing like that," assured Mrs. Moneywell, "she and her husband are an ideal couple No, wherever she got that priceless Bavarian Butterfly, it was not a present from an affinity"

"Bah!" said Seldum Seezit, tenderly and politely "in that case point out her husband. Has he a mustache?"

"How absurd you are," said Mrs. Moneywell, "what has her husband's mustache to do with it? You have been drinking," she added, detecting a faint odor of the chemicals our hero had been using

"Sams to you and many of them," he responded as he approached the man Mrs. Moneywell pointed out as Mr. Van Poore

CHAPTER VI

OUR hero followed Van Poore into the smoking room In attempting to light a cigarette he knocked some ashes over Van Poore.

"Pardon me," said our hero, and with his own handkerchief he wiped the ashes from Van Poore, at the same time brushing the handkerchief over Van Poore's face

In a minute he was alone in the conservatory. Within three more minutes he had analyzed the new stain on his handkerchief, then he hurried to Mrs. Moneywell.

"Come quickly," he said, and she followed him.

"What will you give me if I so arrange it that the Bavarian Butterfly will never again be seen, worn by Mrs. Van Poore or anyone else?" asked Seldum Seezit.

"Ten thousand dollars!" said Mrs. Moneywell, her eyes flashing

Together they approached Mrs Van Poore.

"Pardon me," said our hero, whom Mrs. Van Poore still believed to be Count Von Voldervedding, "some dust is yet from the palms your shoulder on," and with a swift movement he passed his handkerchief over her shoulder

Presto!

The Bavarian Butterfly was no longer there!

"Thanks," said Mrs. Van Poore, glancing at her shoulder.

Mrs. Moneywell could scarcely believe her eyes.

"You stole it," she gasped, "stole it right off her shoulder and she didn't know it. I won't stand for that"——

"Here it is," said our hero, displaying his handkerchief, upon which was only a large black smooch.

"I don't understand," said Mrs. Moneywell.

"Simple enough," replied the world-famous detective. "Van Poore and his wife are still in love. On the way to the ball n - taxi he got sentimental and kissed her lightly on her shoulder. Now it happens he uses a black cosmetic to keep his mustache from showing gray hairs.

"And the Bavarian Butterfly was nothing more or less than the imprint of his blackened mustache where he kissed her," and our hero bowed low and left the ballroom.

Piscatorial Limericks

A PHOTOGRAPHER living in Wales
Caught three minnows one day by their tails;
But the picture he took
Of these fish made them look
Just the size of three Biblical whales.

THERE was a fair maiden named Bate,
Who once angled to capture a mate;
She caught Mr. Fish
And thus got her wish—
Then the fish and the bait met their fate.

ANANIAS declared one fine day
In his boat he could no longer stay
When more fishing he sought—
For the fish that he'd caught
Brought the water so low in the bay.

A FISHERMAN called Mr. Foster
Saw a maiden and said, "I'll accost her."
Her first name was Minny,
Her second was Finny—
And now they are living in Gloucester.

MISS SAPPHIRA once captured a bass,
But it slipped off her fishhook, alas!
"Fifty pounds the thing weighed."
Was the statement she made.
"It had scales, you know," added the lass.

A GENTLEMAN named Mr. Squire
Caught an eel and then cooked it entire;
But that eel thumped and bumped
Till it finally jumped
From the frying pan into the fire.

AN experienced speckled trout spied
A magnificent fly by its side;
But he gave it one look,
Then he dove in the brook.
"You don't give me the hook now," he cried.

AN angler whose surname was Heim
To his wife said, "Don't talk all the time;
You will frighten the fish."
She obeyed his cruel wish,
But engaged in some rare pantomime.

A FELLOW went fishing one day
With his fiancee, Hepzibah Grey:
And came back from the trip
But they both left the ship
With the grin on the face of the whale.

WITH a grin, Jonah went for a sail,
Saying, "I will come back with a whale."
But his fishhook got stuck
In her wig (blame the luck!)
And they broke their engagement that day.

A WORD TO SCOLDING HUSBANDS — by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner. All rights reserved.

He came home one night and found he employed in laundry work refused to him suitable for the room and board, and drove angrily about her untidy habits. She hurled herself from the window and died in the hospital soon afterward.

There appears to be no excuse for this pathetic, the tragic and the absurd in it.

It was a small thing to cause a wife to sacrifice her life just to make a fine selfishness. But we must take into consideration all that preceded this occasion.

There had been scolding after scolding, without doubt. She had been found fault with for so many deficiencies, for so many deeds done and undone, that this final criticism was merely the last straw on the camel's back.

A cross, fault finding wife is a terrible thing. But a man can drive her to it just as easily as he can drive her to the corner grocery or to the saloon when he forgets to be open to caress.

When the husband comes home and scolds she air of the house long there is nothing for a wife to do but submit or jump out of the window.

The wife who died in the hospital had submitted for many years, undoubtedly, and then, finding that submission did not better matters, she tried the window act.

It would have been wiser if she had walk out at the door and gone to begin life over again on the highways of earth uninvited than to force an entrance into the mysterious realm of death.

The man or woman who commits suicide is a spiritual pauper. He who has spiritual strength knows he was to be aided to the end. The spiritual pauper and waits his call in the time. He declares himself a bankrupt when he ends his own existence.

We know there are homes of paupers in this world. We do not know what provision is made for them in the hereafter.

It is always well to go into a new land with a full purse, and it is well to enter the next world with a good supply of spiritual wealth, and not as a bankrupt.

Meantime, there is the scolding husband to carry his wounded heart to God, right now. It is good enough for him, and yet we can not help pitying him.

He is so sorry he said what he did. He never dreamed she would take it so to heart. He would give all he possesses to go back and live that night over; and do, oh, so did differently! He would understand her so much better and he so much better if she were alive to-day.

Sometimes the only way a wife can make her husband understand her is to die. Then he sees and admires all her sweet, tender qualities.

I like to think the world is peopled with happy wives and husbands. I know many. Many more exist unknown to me. Happiness is oftentimes secretive and quiet; misery is noisy and communicative. Happiness seeks unkind as the one whose irritable words drove her to her death.

If you who read these lines are a man and a husband, ask yourself just what you are doing toward making your home the seek to impress upon her mind the fact that peaceful place a home should be. What are you doing to render your wife happy at the thought of seeing you each evening? Are you praising her for every good quality she possesses and thanking her for all her efforts to please you?

Are you telling her she is a good wife and a good mother, or are you finding fault with every small failure of hers and ignoring her great virtues?

Do not imagine a good woman is satisfied with virtue's own reward. The consciousness of her own worth is not sufficient to keep her happy if you are silent and never you realize her good qualities. And this is especially true if you take every opportunity to assure her that you see her faults.

Why not study your wife as you study your partner? Why not be as tactful and as patient with her as you are with him? Why not cogitate and amuse her as you do your customers and patrons?

If you called at your neighbor's house and found anything amiss, how suave and amiable you would be about it. Are you equally so when things go amiss at your own home?

If not, why not?

I can never understand how a wife or husband can be more thoughtful of outsiders than they are of each other. I cannot understand how they can be lil-tempered and faultfinding with each other and courteous and conciliatory to strangers.

And remember always—the real business of life is the making of a happy home. Everything else is secondary to that; for, when you come to sift the whole chaff of existence, everything goes to the winds but the happiness we have had at home.

When You Marry a Mule of a Husband

By DOROTHY DIX

A WOMAN writes asking for a reliable recipe for managing a man with a nasty disposition. She says he knows he is of peculiar temperament, but she would have no trouble in getting along best her if—which is the right way to treat him.

Sadly I must say she has not been able to find the key that will unlock the mysterious peculiarities of her husband and she seeks advice from other women who have been up against the same sort of proposition.

Of course one would like to say that the best way to treat a cantankerous man is to bat him over the head with a coffee pot, but, unfortunately, women lack the physical strength to enforce such an argument against contrariness. Besides which, our effect civilization discourages such wholesome means of family discipline.

All that is left then for the woman who is married to a man who is unreasonable and who has a morbid disposition is to try to find out what makes him that way and then see if she can't remove the cause.

Contrariness Indicates a Lack of Brains in the Man

The disagreeable thing about contrariness is that it is always a morbid symptom. It is a sign of lack of brains, and that is an incurable malady. A man or woman of intelligence can always be reasoned with. He or she may be enlightened, broadened, raised up to higher levels, but a fool is hopeless.

You can never do anything with a man or her, and it is useless to try. You waste letters and time by hammering on the stone wall of narrowness and persistency that you encounter at every turn.

Therefore, if you find out a man or woman is contrary by nature you must not flee from them if you would be sure of happiness, though you may be in constant fear of the aforesaid if you make the discovery that you have taken a mule to be your life partner. You can do much by learning how to sidestep his or her peculiarities.

In doing this the first thing to remember is always to let the silly fool think that he has suggested everything that you want to do. If you want to have the paper pattered in green instead of purple, don't realize that if you are going to have green, or you'll donker will put his feet down and declare for purple.

On the contrary, gently and insidiously suggest the idea of green paper, and when you perceive the time is ripe ask him what color he would prefer to have the parlor paper, and he will say green and berate you for not having thought of it yourself before.

In the same way remember that the law of contraries always works. Likewise that you can get a woman to do almost anything for you if you only suggest to her that you don't want her to do it

And Each One Thinking About HER

"YES, the something seemed to have penetrated to his own veins now; he felt its serene glow mounting when he spent solemn evenings in John Burleson's room, the big sculptor, sometimes irritable, sometimes morose, but always now wearing the vivid patch of color on his flat and sunken cheeks.

"Yes, truly, whatever it was that had crept into his veins had imperceptibly suffused him, enveloped him, and was working changes. He had a vague idea, sometimes, that Valerie had been the inception, the source, the reagent, in the chemistry which was surely altering either himself or the world of men around him. that he was gradually becoming different because of her nearness to him—her physical and spiritual nearness

"He had plenty of leisure to think of her while she was away; but thought of her was now only an active ebullition of the ceaseless consciousness of her which so entirely possessed him. When a selfish man loves—if he really loves—his disintegration begins."—From "The Common Law," in the July issue of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Copyrighted by the International Magazine Company

BATHING at Onset Beach is a pastime for the old and young alike Children of all ages are seen in the water every day, but the youngest and smallest bather and swimmer about the local shores is little Russell G. Dupont, son of Mr and Mrs. George Dupont of Middleboro, who is spending the Summer here. He is the pride of Onset Beach.

Little Russell, who is less than two years of age and not a yard tall, ventures along the beach with his bathing toga on and takes a plunge all by himself even at high tide. His mother is close by, of course, but the little fellow strikes out like an old timer

At first Russell was afraid of the water, as children are likely to be, but he astonished his father one day by going in with his clothes on. A bathing suit was then added to the youngster's wardrobe, and now he appears regularly on the bathing beach. Many of the Summer people about here say that Russell is the smallest and youngest swimmer they have ever seen.

CLUB GIRLS REIGN ALONG SOUTH SHORE

Tennis Matches, Yachting and Driving Interest Athletic Maids.

Far y July along the South Shore finds the devotees of this delightful district established for their season's pleasures and the younger set launched on their happy campaign. At each resort exists a little world all its own, directing the social destiny of the colony and there is always ample diversion in each settlement to satisfy the demands of the youthful visitor. The attractions are distinctly those of the simple life and there is none of the elaborate entertaining nor ultra-fashionable functions which are so characteristic of the opposite shore. This informality and freedom from the demands of fashion are the chief charms of the life along this shore and the young set members appreciate this feature quite as much as the transient visitor

Nantasket's social life centres in the yacht club and the little dances there are presided over by Miss Dorothy Mandell, Miss Barbara Bolles, her sister, Miss Dorothy Bolles, and Miss Martha Waldron Barron of the younger set. Associated with them are Miss Katherine Richardson, Miss Muriel Crocker, Miss Margaret Whitney, Miss Mary Bragg, Miss Margaret Crocker, Miss Marion Gay, Miss Anne Williams and Miss Coolidge

At the Tennis Courts.

The courts of the club are the meeting place for the athletic girls who number much the same coterie as the horse set. Miss Alice DeFord is perhaps the premier athletic girl of the settlement and cares little for the entertainments given at the shore. She is never so much at home as in a comfy, easy-fitting suit or her rid ing habit, for she is out every day regardless of the weather on her horse and makes much of her leisure time in driving

Hull's Summer colony can lay no claim to exclusiveness for the members of its social set are not even interested in yachting, although provided with every opportunity The large fleet anchored here does not include a single craft belonging to any member of the fair visitors. The Boston Yacht Club is the centre of the social life of the stretch from Atlantic Hill to Hull, and not to be of the dancing parties held there weekly is to have no social distinction whatever. These affairs are the chief interest of the fashionables and are preceded by many little dinner parties given at the house. Of the Hill contingent are Miss Hazel Marlow, Miss Gladys Kelly, Miss Mary Richardson, Miss Julia Doherty, Mrs. Frank Voss, Mrs. Frederick Voss and Miss Barrie Bacon

From the colonies along the shore a number of young people are constant attendants. Among these are Miss Alice Riley Miss Margaret Brennan, Miss Grace Early, Miss Josephine Nelson, Miss Evelyn May Miss Belle Fay, Miss Margaret Fay, Miss Dorothy O'Callahan, Miss Anna Carteron, Miss Dorothy Kelly, Miss Katharine McCormick, Miss Edith May, Miss Gertrude Barkley, Miss Lillian Burke, Miss Helen Mahoney, Miss Dorothy Bugbrue and Miss Frances Larkin

Nearby the Summer settlement is perhaps the most exclusive in its location and the people going from the little Village at Crow Point but seldom. Just here the families who are interested in the Point Golf Club are among the socially accepted, but the circle are lavished those representatives of the fashionable visiting contingent who are never admitted to its state, but are open only to the favored few, and are very delightful. Little dances, bridge parties and sewing meetings are the order of the dialogues, all by the more merry affairs, for the young people are in the majority. Prominent among them are Miss Ardra Soule, Miss Helen Temple, Miss Jane Randall, Miss Alice Temple, Miss Electra Westerly, Miss Dorothy Goodard, Miss Charlotte Pope, Miss Elizabeth Hanson, Miss Katherine Bartelle, Miss Dorothy Hooper, Miss Doris Pratt and Miss Mary Neville Higginson.

Delight in Swimming.

Setimate makes a bid for more separate coteries than any of the nearby resorts, for there are the usual summer colonies, the automobile set, the tennis contingent and the golfers, all directing the social affairs and the pursuits of their athletic alters and ideals. Miss Polly Piper, Miss Alice McCafferty, Miss Virginia Futrelle and Miss Eleanor Morse are the leaders in the devotees of swimming, and last season made enviable records, having a suit of their own and a float in the Fourth of July gaiety Beach, where the fashionables congregate for their daily plunge.

Miss Ruth Allen, Miss Priscilla Alden, Miss Dorothy Copeland, Miss Irma Cole, Miss Justin McMullin, Miss Margaret Killoran and Miss Jessie McCarthy are of those acting in the distinctly social affairs, being the leaders at the dancing parties and social affairs of the settlement

Miss Dorothy Lawson is of course the premier tennis girl, but she should be, for the courts at Greenlawn are the finest on the South Shore, and not a day but Miss Lawson puts in several hours' practice with her brothers as opponents. There before, it is to be expected that she would vanquish the mere feminine player

No colony of the shore is so noted for its absence of cliques as North Scituate, where the young people are more like a family circle than members of a Summer beach colony. Miss Frances Hill is the acknowledged leader and Miss Dorothy Gere comes a close second, with Miss Madeline Ellis, Miss Marion Litchfield, Miss Marion Bulfinch, Miss Valentine Pierce, Miss Hope Aldrich, Miss Ruth Cogswell, Miss Edith Frazer, Miss Marjorie Thomas, Miss Dorothy Roure, Miss Adelaide Moreshall, Miss Barbara Baker and Miss Rena Hitchcock included

BUZZARDS BAY.

The regattas of the Beverly Yacht Club at Pocasset across the bay are attracting the Summer people in large numbers and the number of enthusiasts in yachting is growing each year. The Summer colonies about the bay shores are taking a great deal of interest in sailing the [illegible] craft in the fifteen-foot class there is always some good racing by Miss Lorena Codman, Miss Hilda Williams and Miss Mary Williams and it is not unusual for these girl skippers to beat the old sea tars about here when it comes to close handling a boat

Mrs. George B. Chamberlain of Roxbury, accompanied by Miss Stella Chamberlain, are at the Jameson cottage at Monument Beach.

A. F. Richmond of Brockton has leased the large house owned by the late James Powers at Plymouth park for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Haines of Somerville are guests of Mrs. Arthur C. Manning at her Monument Beach Summer place.

Miss Clara Atwood and Miss Alice M Atwood of Brockton are at Monument Beach.

Mrs. Herbert L. Whitman and Miss Imogene Whitman of Ayer are at F. O. Smith's.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Marston and family of Newburyport are at Monument Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Filoon of Brockton are at the head of the bay.

FALMOUTH HOPES TO SEE FITZGERALD

The Summer residents as well as the natives of Falmouth are looking forward to the return of Mayor Fitzgerald from his European trip when he will then come to this place with his family at the Mitchell cottage on the Heights.

Mrs. William A. Russell of Andover is at the Leland cottage on the Mill road for a prolonged stay. Mrs Russell is prominent among the Summer colony's socials and is an entertainer of note along the shore.

The Woods Hole colony has been augmented by the arrival of Mrs. Edward G Gardiner of Mt Vernon street, Boston, and Miss Eugenie Gardiner and Edward M. Gardiner, who are at their cottages for the Summer.

Dr. J. C Hemmeter and family of Baltimore have arrived and are located at their Woods Hole villa.

Mrs. C. P. Dodge and family of Worcester have arrived at the Heights for the season.

Mrs. C. White and family of Winchendon have arrived at the Cray house at the Heights for the Summer

Among the recent arrivals at Falmouth Beach are Miss Fanny Mackiar of New Bedford, Miss DeFord is perhaps the present. Harry B Miller of Hartford, F. P Hutchinson, C. H. Gardner, Mrs. Gardner, George E studier of W Jones of Boston, At the Casino Mrs. A. J. Carpenter and wife, Mrs. W K Coburn, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold M. and Mrs. J. A. Shepardson, F. E. Fisher, F. H Beardsley of Boston

MANCHESTER.

Among the recent arrivals in the Manchester colony are Charles L. Storer and family of Lowell, Russell Cottam and family of Boston, who are at Bleasom Lane; Mr. and Mrs. Wyck of Providence, guests at the Dunkelow cottage; Mrs Gordon Prince and son Gordon, at the Mansfield cottage, West Manchester; C. Howard Clark and family of Berwin, Pa., at the Bourdman mansion; Major Henry L. Higginson of Boston

Danderine

PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes as a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length.

Beautiful Hair At Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, are often wrongly diagnosed and misunderstood. The hair itself is not thought to be treated for the reason that it is supposed to be a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. Hence the whole soul in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grows from a mere hair-like appendage to its full length, is expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the scalp with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful unless the cause of falling out were first attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if we are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when the scalp loses the water it has simply lost all power to nourish, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon to plump or even a tree would die under similar conditions!

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil with the elements that may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of this. Several sent in a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

FREE To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., CHICAGO, ILL., with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage

SOCIETY MAIDS IN SEASIDE FROLICS

MAKE MERRY ALONG SHORE

Dances, Yachting Parties and Al Fresco Functions on the Social Bill of Fare.

North Shore society, which was formerly so purely Bostonese, has become very cosmopolitan since the establishment of the Taft household, for the attractions of the Summer capital have brought many famous families in their train, though somewhat overshadowed by the array of foreign diplomats, ambassadors, society leaders and hostesses of great fame, the Boston coterie goes serenely on its way wholly undisturbed by the whirl of social affairs at the most select resorts where they have been accustomed to retire for years.

Even the fact that the younger and more active coterie of Bostonians have undergone a complete change in the last few Summers seems not to alter the outward appearance of the fashionable functions and pleasure feats

Young People In Evidence.

In the Swampscott colony are Miss Claire and Miss Anna Means, both of whom are members of Boston families of ancient lineage and wealth. They are the daughters of Mrs. Mason Little and are just now on the other side, where they went for the coronation festivities and were prominent at all the affairs of the week. They were members of Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond's party and also guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Moore, who were among the leading entertainers. Miss Claire Means is a great beauty and an accomplished member of the Vincent Club. She has her own string of horses in the Little stables, plays tennis and golf with the ease of a professional, and is one of the entertainers in the younger set of girls just now in ascendancy along the North Shore.

Miss Mary Josephine Amory is another youthful leader of the North Shore who is of the Boston contingent, although she has been made much of by the visiting diplomatic circles and is often the guest at the Taft affairs. Miss Amory is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis I. Amory, the latter a Miss Moss. Miss Amory is a delightful person to go with, like to those of her own set and to the older members of society. Just now nothing is her favorite diversion and she has ample opportunity to indulge her fancy. Her coming out was an affair of great rejoicing, for she has had the attention of many ardent admirers since she was in the school room, and since her presentation she has been one of the most sought after girls of the Beverly colony.

Miss Katherine Foster, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. W. Foster of Marblehead Neck, is one of the yachting devotees, sharing her father's enthusiasm in his favorite sport. The Foster fleet of racing and pleasure boats are well known, and other boatsmen along shore, and these fine days of the season Mr. Foster and daughter are out frequently in a spirited race. Miss Foster was over recently brought out, and since then has had a good deal of attention. Last Summer she was in Europe for almost the entire season, and her return to the frolics of the spring is when she is included is hailed with delight.

Dainty Society Bud.

Quite the most dainty and charming of the new belles of the North Shore is Miss Ruth Anthony, the winsome daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Reed Anthony. The Anthony estate, Beach Lodge, is one of the most beautiful in the Farms district, and is the scene of much entertaining during the shore season. Miss Anthony was rather unfortunate in her first appearance, the family being thrown into mourning just before this important event, and was duly recompensed, however, for the enforced sacrifice by the numerous attentions from those of her own set and the members of New York and Washington society. Miss Anthony is connected with both Weld families, and Mrs. Lark Anthony was one of the prime entertainers the year of her coming out. Miss Anthony is one of the few members of her circle who misses the yearly cruise of the Eastern Yacht Club. She always accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Anthony and the Misses Anthony along with her brothers.

Miss Elsie Ames and her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Ames, are two of the most recently presented debutantes, who have taken positions of prominence in the social world both by reason of their family connections and their personality. Miss Elsie Ames is quite the most beautiful recruit from the ranks of society's debutantes, being her beautiful mother. Mrs. Ames is quite the most beautiful recruit from the ranks of society's debutantes, being the beautiful mother. Mrs. Ames and her two girls are at the same time and has been married a half dozen times make them expect to the fullest their dreams. Miss Ames has been quite as much as belonging to the engaged debutantes, but by the time this has appeared in print and she continues on her conquering way, adding to her prestige as a girl of tact and delightful personality. Miss Ames is with her cousin, Miss Elizabeth, and has quite as much of an impression as any of her entire body. Miss Sears is perfectly happy when entertaining, and her chief pleasure at this present is to play the bountiful steward her father's steam yacht. Miss Sears is possessed of the sweetness and gentle dignity of her late mother and promises to be equipped with the grace of a matron of years' standing.

Nahant's Young People.

Nahant's leading hop this year is Miss Lets Means, in whose honor a dance was given at the Nahant Club last week. The Boston contingent were all present and Miss Means made an ideal hostess on her first entrance to society. She has been a resident of Nahant for several years, and passes Summers. In the same colony are Miss Jane Gibson, who will be especially desert her set for the matron coterie. Miss Jane Gibson is one of the merriest of the Nahant girls and she will be greatly missed from their frolics, for she is an invaluable aide in the dances. Join the married set they are barred from the gaiety of the fancy dress.

Numbered among the fashionables who will spend a part of the Summer at Nahant are Miss Mary Lawrence and Miss Rosamond Fay, both of whom have no desire to desert the pleasures of the schoolroom set for the more staid circle of the matron debutante. Miss Lawrence and Miss Fay are members of the Swampscott set, and they are far more interested in their beach and tennis parties than in the more formal dances and dancing engagements.

Of the new set members at Swampscott, who are identified with Boston affairs are Miss Edith Little and Miss Rosamond. They are devoted to tennis and automobiling, having early in the year the said pastimes all of their time along the beautiful roads from here to Gloucester. Miss Edith Little is one of the most attractive girls who go in for boating and swimming, preferring the latter sport of getting the country to the shore. The Misses Bond are not yet of their Boston residence for much of the Winter season, passing their time on the other side. Summer months serve to efface many of the social barriers of the school year and the maids who are still in the study are included in the affairs of their elders. Belonging to this coterie are Miss Olivia Ames, Miss Barbara Burr, Miss Hope Gaston, Miss Edith Storer, Miss Geraldine Lawrence, Miss Marie Agassiz, Miss Ruth Thayer, Miss Penelope Parkman, Miss Mary Pierce and Miss Constance Ferkins.

WHITE MOUNTAIN HOTELS FILLING UP

Big Colony of Greater Boston People Among Season Guests.

BRETTON WOODS, N. H., July 1—The White Mountain resorts are beginning to fill up with season guests, and most of the hotels are now open, with the exception of the Mount Washington at Bretton Woods, which opens July 10.

Mrs. Augustus Richardson and the Misses Richardson of Boston have engaged rooms at the Mount Washington. Dr. Charles S. Nichols and family of Worcester, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Mixton of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Metcalf of Holyoke and Mrs. George Hunn and Miss Ruth Hunn of Boston, with Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Rice and Miss Mabel Rice of Boston, are prospective season guests at Bretton Woods.

Mrs. Emily Selinger of Boylston street, Boston, will soon open her studio at the Crawford House, where she has for so many years been located in summer.

A large party of society people from Lynn, Salem, Haverhill and Boston, under the leadership of Seth Bassett, will spend the Fourth of July at the Crawford House, coming in special cars. Many of these will remain through the season.

At the Twin Mountain.

At the Twin Mountain House is Miss Barron of Boston, who came on April 1 to stay with Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Barron for an indefinite time. Branford Farnsworth of Boston will spend the Summer at the Twin Mountain House.

The Fabyan House, when its opening on June 15, has entertained a record number of honeymooners, over 100 bridal couples having been entertained there.

Colonel Charles H. Greenleaf and Mrs. Greenleaf of the Hotel Vendome, Boston, have been for many years at the Pemigewasset House, where they spend their Summers. Members of the cottage colony there are Mr. and Mrs. Eben S. Draper, the Misses Andrews of Brookline, Joseph White of Brookline, Mr. and Mrs. David P. Kimball of Commonwealth avenue and many other prominent Bostonians.

The Sinclair House at Bethlehem has entertained many Boston people since its opening. Bethlehem has a large cottage colony of Bostonians, including Dr. J. B. Kenney and family.

At the Maplewood Hotel, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Cilley have leased Poplar cottage to Dr. H. L. Farr, a prominent physician of Roxbury. At the Maplewood Inn, Mr. and Mrs. Whiting Hill of Worcester, Mrs. Francis H. Wilcutt and Miss Mildred Wilcutt of Dorchester, the Misses Richards and W. D. Richards of Boston are among early season arrivals.

Sunset Hill Cottage.

Mr. Robert W. Sayles of Chestnut Hill has taken the Stone cottage connected with the Sunset Hill House property at Sugar Hill, and Robert W. Peckett at Peckett's will entertain many Bostonians during the early season.

Dr. and Mrs. E. S. Peckham of Boston have taken Miss Amy Phillips's house at Colebrook, N. H., for the Summer, and another of her houses will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Bicknell of Newton Highlands.

Mrs. Converse, widow of former Governor Converse of Vermont, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. George Parsons, at the Hempshire Inn, Colebrook. The Bolsams at Dixville Inn opened, and early June found trout fishing there and at Camp Mitchell at its best, although the sport is still very good. At the Balsams will be Lawrence Gilman, the famous musical critic, who spends every Summer there.

SEASHORE LURES SOCIETY FROM CITY

Garden Teas and Other Al Fresco Affairs Serve to While Time Away.

By ELIZABETH ELIOTT.

THE swift social pace has slackened to a saunter and July finds every New England resort a kind of Lotus land, where fashion's devotees are living in a state of indolent ecstasy.

Romance and sentiment was strong as the more physically active life wanes in the heat, and mid-summer finds the Northern girl adopting the languid, quietly coquettish ways so irresistible in her Southern sisters.

After her morning dip in the sunflecked sea, this modern priestess, known as the Summer girl, appears on the scene, crisp and cool in her shimmering white frock, dimpling radiantly and ready to lay waste whole regiments of hearts.

Garden teas and other al fresco affairs prove charmingly to lose away the long Summer days on shore, and the lure of the sea with its opal spray is constant. Delightful social affairs on luxuriously equipped yachts leave tales of "Arabian Nights" tame and tasteless in comparison.

Under the piercing rays of July sun many the budding romance is bursting into full glory and the little Love god is in high glee over the prospects of his harvest.

There are still numerous weddings on the schedule for the Summer months, one of the most important of July to be that at Ipswich of Miss Joan Tuckerman and Francis B. Dick, Jr., the ceremony to take place at Sunset Hill, the beautiful country home of the bride's parents at Ipswich. The wedding was arranged to take place much earlier in the season, but owing to the illness of the bride elect's parents, which necessitated a trip to Europe, the wedding was postponed. Miss Tuckerman is one of the best known girls of the North Shore Summer colony, and the wedding is bound to be both brilliant and picturesque.

To Wed at North Shore.

Another important wedding of the North Shore season will be that on July 20th, of Miss Ethel Gibson, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gibson of Beacon street and Dr. Freeman Allen, whose engagement was announced about a fortnight ago. Unlike most of the Summer weddings it will be a church affair.

It will be followed by a reception at "Forty Steps," the Summer home of the Gibsons at Nahant, which will make a delightful setting for the affair.

One of the late Summer's matrimonial events will be the wedding of pretty Margaret Beermuth, the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner B. Fermis of Beacon street, and Manfred Bowditch, Harvard '12. Miss Fermis is now visiting on the east Whitter with her cousin, Miss Harriet Warren. Mrs. Flate Werren's giving teas for them at the Mr. Vernon Street home in November, and later a large ball at the Puritan.

Miss Fearnsin is blonde, petite and decidedly attractive. She is a member of the Vincent Club and is one of its most fa'eu'ed dancers.

Mr. Bowditch is the son of Mrs. Henry P. Bowditch of Sunnyside, Jamaica Plain, and of the late Dr. Bowditch. He is a brother of Dr. Harold Bowditch, Harvard '05, and of Miss Fanny Bowditch. August 7th is the date set for the wedding of Miss Anne B. Lindsay and J. A. Lowell Rice, whose engagement was announced only recently. The marriage is to take place at the Lindsay Summer home, Elmscourt, and will be largely attended. Miss Lindsay is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Lindsay and Mrs. Lindsay of Marlborough. Mr. Rice is the son of the late Judge Rice, Rice.

Miss Lindsay's brother is Thomas P. Lindsay of Salisbury, who married Miss Margaret Lyon, a daughter of Mrs. Thomas Lyon of Chicago and sister to Mrs. Winthrop Endicott Peabody.

Miss Rice's first wife was Miss Helen Prince, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Prince of Chestnut Hill and Lenox. Mr. Rice is a member of the Somerset, Tennis and Racquet, Myopia and other clubs.

One of the prettiest June weddings of the season took place at East Bridgewater, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Howard, when Mary Sandford Baxter of Abington was married to Frederick A. Pfaffle of Milton.

Attended by Her Sister.

The bride, who was given away by her father, G. G. Bowditch, was dressed in an ivory gowned in heavy white crepe meteor, veiled with marguisette and trimmed with pearls and Brussels lace. She carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas.

The bridal party was attended by her sister, Mrs. Maurice O. Whipple of Godfrey, N. H., matron of honor; Miss Lindsay Lyon of Washington, maid of honor, and six bridesmaids, Dorothy Baxter of Ashton, Alice Chaffee of Rutland, Mrs. Marion Cole of Cambridge, Lillian Bennett of Boston, and the Misses Malcolm and Henrietta Sutliff of Swanton, Vt. H. Carl H. Buttman of Washington was best man. The ushers were Messrs. George and Andrew Crafts of Milton, Henry Brigham of New York, Clifton Comey of Dan vers, George Dent of Milton, and W. F. Sommers of Binghamton, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert H. Cochrane. The wedding march was played by William G. Weston.

After a wedding trip through the West and South, Mr. and Mrs. Carris will reside in Washington.

OLD ORCHARD.

Prospects for a big season at Old Orchard were never brighter at this time of year than this year. Extensive improvements have been made on nearly all of the hotels, which last season were overcrowded, and their managers predict that the season will be the greatest in the history of the resort. The new casino, which was destroyed by the fire, which destroyed the entire north end of the beach.

Hon. James H. Vahey and family of Waterville have returned and will occupy their cottage. Robert White, Mrs. White's brother, is baggage master at the Ocean House, which opened its doors for the season Mr. White was prominent in athletics at Watertown High School during the past year.

A few members of the Twentieth Century Whist Club of Boston have been enjoying a house party at the cottage of a sister member, Mrs. Margaret Cullane, on Ocean avenue.

The Misses Evelyn and Regina P. Horton, Mrs. John J. Bowers and daughters Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Brown and Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Woods of Boston are at the Ocean House.

Mrs. John W. Lavery, Mrs. Francis W. Lavery and Miss Marion Cahill of Dorchester are at the Ocean House.

Mr. Galvin's Letters on Ireland

Leader of Irish National Party Goes on Record in Statement to the Sunday American and Gives Reasons for His Prophecy.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

JOHN E. REDMOND, M. P.

HOME RULE CHAMPION

House of Lords will still have the power of delay up to the limit of two years, but it will have to defer to a different home rule bill for Ireland, an act of opinion that once the Irish bill is brought up to the House of Lords it will pass the previous to be brought into operation.

What I mean is that peers now that they have no power to defeat any great measure, they will almost defy endeavor to negotiate and to get as good terms as they can.

I therefore hesitate not for an instant to say to you that I am the best surprised to see home rule carried into the next year and that it ought to be enacted by the beginning of the year 1914.

At this moment the government is engaged in drafting the Irish bill measure, and while it is impossible for me, of course, to give you any confidential information I would now to say to all our friends that things, so far, have gone most favorably without the smallest hitch of any sort or kind.

Home Rule Inevitable.

It has come to be taken as quite as granted by practically all parties in England that home rule is inevitable. All the old and insane latters on which the question depended have practically disappeared, and the people there, of all parties, are in a mood to give a reasonable consideration and concession to the provisions of the Home Rule bill.

Under these circumstances our people at home are naturally in the highest spirits.

The prospects of Ireland generally are the most encouraging. Ireland is prospering in every direction, trade is steadily increasing, our population by emigration shows at last for the first time signs of a healthy and considerable slackening. The present crisis, not completed, shows that the Irish population has fallen by about 20,000 within the last decade.

In the previous decade it fell by over a quarter of a million. For the first time also some of our Irish boys and girls now show an increase of population. The increase is small, no doubt, but the important thing is that we seem to have turned the corner.

America's Great Interest.

I have evidence brought to my notice every day of the great interest taken in America, not only by Irish people there, but by Americans generally of what is going on with reference to the constitutional question and home rule for Ireland, and we are most grateful for the support given to us by great journals such as those represented by you.

The encouragement given by the Irish party to the prime ministers of the British Empire at the late Imperial Conference first. These prime ministers, notably Sir Wilfrid Laurier, General Botha and the other leaders of the commonwealth of Australia and the State of New Zealand, have been in London for some weeks.

But I do not think the action given by the Irish Nationalist party was the first occasion on which this occasion they have given to the British people a different proof of their belief that the British Empire can only be held together on the principle of liberty, and that liberty should be extended to Ireland.

The entertainment to the colonial prime ministers of which I was present was a private affair. It was a private dinner given by the Irish parliamentary party. I was delighted that it was in consequence of the unanimous request of the prime ministers that I was present.

There were no speeches, as I have said. Towards the close John McCormack, the famous Irish tenor, delighted us with melodies in the choruses of which all the gentlemen present, including the principal feature, Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose and said:

"Gentlemen, I give you a sentiment. God bless Ireland, now and always."

Premiers in Sympathy.

The presence in London of all the colonial premiers, and their making no complaint of the fact that unanimously they were in favor of home rule for Ireland excited widespread attention. Not indeed, without considerable comment in the press, metropolitan and provincial, but certainly upon the attitude of the premiers and the effect produced by their presence and by their utterances.

The fact is that the Irish question is of more interest to the colonies than is generally supposed. Many of the colonists are of Irish descent, and are intensely interested in the progress of home rule in the old country. Besides, the colonies are beginning to look upon the Irish question as a test question. They regard the manner in which it is settled as indicating the way in which they themselves will be treated in the future.

Take, for instance, the question of the veto of the House of Lords. The colonies are beginning to realize that the veto power of the House of Lords is dead. They are beginning to realize that the Irish question is the last question that will be settled by the veto power of the House of Lords.

Therefore, they will demand that the veto power shall be taken away from the House of Lords, and they will demand that it shall be taken away from the House of Lords in such a way as to prevent the House of Lords from ever again exercising the veto power.

Redmond's Face a Study.

During Frewen's outburst Redmond's face was a study. Once or twice he turned a powerful and indignant look upon O'Brien in another for Mallow, but otherwise he gave no sign of his feelings, or whether he felt himself the defender of the Irish landlords.

Redmond was on his feet the moment Frewen finished. In a voice quivering with feeling the member for Waterford replied in a speech of less than five minutes of severe denunciation of Mr. Frewen. Frewen as it is possible for one public man to give to another.

After by congratulations on the high artistic tone and the deep sincerity of Redmond's speech he turned to the Frewen address, the Irish leader exclaimed: "Now, my opponent, I say to you that it was indeed galling to members from Ireland who had fought for the rights of the laborers' Cottages Act to hear a gentleman who had entered this House of Commons today declaim against an extension of the act to a class as deserving as any that had advanced in his speech.

Frewen, acting to the quick, rose to reply amid the hoots and jeers desiring laughter from the Nationalist and Labor benches. Frewen acted himself, at first, as if he were going to make a speech. Redmond with the dexterity of experience and a well-timed and gowned Speaker's call, stopped him.

Order came in loud tones from the Speaker's chair.

The Speaker, who as must remember from the chair, has to address the House, and not any individual member, as directed Frewen accordingly.

Order was not to be further essay at debate, but between the Speaker's reprimand and the shouts of derision which had now grown general on the Irish and Labor benches, the member for O'Brien and Dungarvan sat down from the House individual in all the chamber.

Took a couple of days after this amusing incident. Parliament rose for the Whitsuntide holidays. Mr. Redmond aroused everybody to delight for a few days' rest in his interviewed a correspondent of the Daily Mail, who called to see him at the Westminster Palace Hotel.

By the way, I may say that the Irish leader is following the example of Mr. Asquith, the Premier, and is staying at the Westminster Palace Hotel.

It is the best situation of all the keys of the situation as it prevails at present. Redmond is in the midst of the throbbing heart of the world statement.

Views of Mr. Redmond.

It was the utterance quietly spoken of a shrewd and determined man, who knows every inch of the ground he stands on and who realizes the full responsibility of every word he has speaking.

Mr. Redmond said:

After a struggle which has lasted for thirty-eight years, since the day that Isaac Butt formed the first home rule movement in Dublin in 1873 success for the first time seems to be within sight. I say be actually in sight. Even in the most rosy days we had the impression that we might was led by Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell, the prospects of success were never at all as good as they are at this moment.

In those days everybody knew that the House of Lords would reject such a home rule bill on the lines proposed by Mr. Gladstone, and a succession of general elections fought on home rule alone and followed by elections whose immediate compromise was the most that could have been expected.

Now, however, the whole scene has been transformed. The absolute veto power of the House of Lords is dead.

Although the veto bill has not at this moment actually received royal assent, everyone knows that it will do so before very many weeks are over.

After it has passed, no doubt the

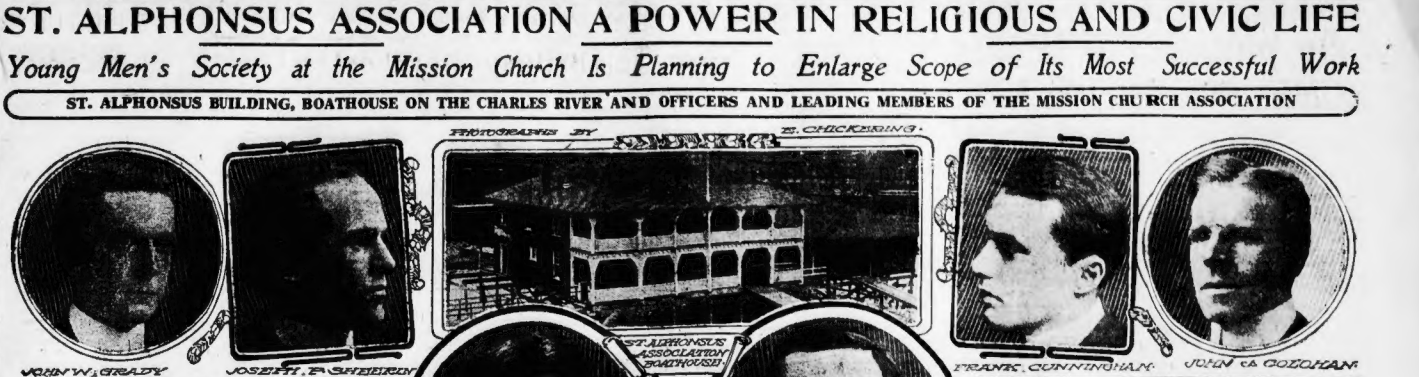
ST. ALPHONSUS ASSOCIATION A POWER IN RELIGIOUS AND CIVIC LIFE

Young Men's Society at the Mission Church Is Planning to Enlarge Scope of Its Most Successful Work

ST. ALPHONSUS BUILDING, BOATHOUSE ON THE CHARLES RIVER AND OFFICERS AND LEADING MEMBERS OF THE MISSION CHURCH ORGANIZATION



Founded by Redemptorist Father, Organization Now Has Largest Private Auditorium in New England, Model Athletic Quarters and Reading Rooms and a Model Boathouse on the Charles River

THE St. Alphonsus Association of the Mission Church parish, Roxbury, one of the largest and most active organizations of Catholic young men in the city of Boston, is making elaborate plans to enlarge during the present season the scope of its activities and to enlist as members still more of the progressive young men of its own and adjacent parishes.

The association is well known not only in the religious but in the athletic and social life of the city. Its primary object is for the training of the ambitious boy and for the betterment of his civic and social position. It was organized as an institution of the Mission Church parish, under the direction of the Redemptorist Fathers, of whom Rev. Father Hayor, C. SS. R. is the head. Generous advantages are offered to its members, spiritually, socially and materially.

REMARKABLE GROWTH IN ELEVEN YEARS.

The present headquarters were dedicated in 1900 by the Rev. Fr. McGrath, C. SS. R., its first spiritual director. Through the unceasing and enthusiastic work of its present spiritual advisor, the Rev. Peter J. Corr, C. SS. R., the association has grown to proportions far exceeding the hopes of its most sanguine founders. The membership numbers over 600. Fr. Corr would like to see it a round thousand before the year closes.

The home of the association is on Smith street, on the church estate. The building is an imposing structure and, with its associated halls, covers a territory of 12,000 feet. It stands upon an elevation and is plainly discernible for many miles. The interior of the building is richly appointed. The main entrance includes a massive marble staircase. The floors are of torasse. One sees artistic statuary and portraits in oils of friends of the society in the vestibule. These give to the surroundings an atmosphere of warmth and beauty.

Leading from the foyer to the well-appointed theatre. It has the largest private auditorium in New England. It is beautifully appointed, and contains a stage 32 by 35 feet, modern dressing and property rooms. It has a seating capacity of 1,400. Here "Pilate's Daughter" is produced during Lent to crowded houses. The library and reception rooms are also located on this floor. The latter are utilized for the "Ladies' Nights," which are held at frequent intervals. A large hall with a seating capacity of 500 is used by the members for meetings, smoke talks and business gatherings.

Model Gymnasium Quarters.

On the lower floors are located the gymnasium, swimming pool, shower baths, billiard rooms and bowling alleys, equipped with the most approved and up-to-date apparatus. Gymnasium classes are held on three evenings a week, under the direction of William H. Cronin.

The cutomary collegiate "merit system" has been installed in the rules of the association, which gives the members who have earned a place in the athletic competition, the right to wear the monogram.

The officers of the association are:

The Board of Directors includes: Joseph Sheerin, Michael A. Gillis, James S. Mahoney, Henry Gardner, Frank A. Brawley, Harry F. McGowan, Michael F. O'Hara, William J. McGlinchey, John J. Colohan, John M. Grady and Fred B. White.

Under the energetic guidance of its Board of Governement, a healthy activity is maintained throughout the year. Frequent social events are offered to its members. These include banquets, smoke talks, lectures, debates, concerts, gymnastic exhibition and theatricals.

The members have acquired an excellent reputation through their prominence in athletics. They secured 225 prizes during the past year.

Open Boat Club July 4.

An interesting list of athletic tournaments has been arranged and an attractive program of Autumn and Winter meets and entertainments, assemblies, ladies' nights and dancing parties.

Under the direction of the Dramatic Club several of the latest theatrical productions will be presented during the season of pleasure and activity for the entire year. Its members are most enthusiastic for the fulfillment of the plans, and are seeking to a still greater degree of elaboration the many advantages offered to its members.

The one star possession of the association is its boat club, the formal opening of which, for the present season, will take place on July 4. Several hundred invitations have been issued for the event. The club house is ideally located upon the bank of the Charles River, close to College Bridge. The house was purchased some three years ago from the Weld Boat Club of Harvard University. Extensive renovations have since been made. It is now one of the finest boat club houses in the country. Its members include some prominent oarsmen, including John J. Kavanaugh, Martin O'Hara, Michael O'Hare and Harold K. Blackman. The club is the mecca of hundreds of boat racing visitors in the Summer season, as well as members of rival clubs attending the various races held on the river.

On the night before the Fourth the association will entertain its friends at an open house party. And on Independence Day the members will occupy a prominent place in the programme arranged for the celebration of "Roxbury Day." In addition to marching in full ranks, the association will equip quite a large float, handsomely mounted. Five hundred members in fancy costumes will precede the floats, headed by the Mission Church band, one of the leading boys' bands in America.

SANCTUARY SOCIETY WORK.

Father Powers Directs Work of Progressive Organization.

There will be a meeting of the Sanctuary Society of the Immaculate Conception Church, Harrison avenue, this afternoon at 4 o'clock. A satisfactory record has been made by the society during the past year. Through its members funds have been collected and contributed for the cassocks, vestments, altar boys' outfits, candles and decorations for the feast day celebrations. It is one of the most progressive organizations of the parish under the direction of the Rev. Francis E. Powers, S. J. At 8 o'clock mass this morning the Young Men's Sodality will receive communion in a body.

DEDICATE CHURCH TO-DAY.

Governor Pothier to Attend Exercises at Jamestown.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 1.—Elaborate preparations are being made at Jamestown for the ceremonies to-morrow incident to the dedication of the newly reconstructed St. Mark's Catholic church, of which Rev. F. J. Sullivan is pastor. Bishop Harkins and a large number of priests will attend the services and Governor Pothier has accepted an invitation to be present. The summer colony is expected to turn out for one of the big church events of the season.

LYNN CATHOLIC NOTES.

Rev. John C. Harrington, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Lynn, has purchased land at No. 105 Maple street, that city, and intends to erect a new church for his parishioners of the Glenmere district. Accordingly the last church to remain there are about 600 Catholics in that section and the new church parish is expected to be a long time.

The grantor was John F. Morgan. The lot contains 83,405 square feet, has seventy-two feet frontage on Maple street, 224 feet wide in the rear and 224 feet deep. Besides the church there will be sufficient room for a parochial school and residence.

For some time Father Harrington has planned a church for a new parish. The money used to purchase the land was taken from the pastor's private fund, although no announcement of the gift. He recently was tendered a reception by his parishioners in connection with the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of his ordination. At that time he was presented with more than $3,000 and it is believed by many that he has used the money towards the purchase of the land.

The Glenmere section of the city is some distance from St. Joseph's Church on Union street, and many of the residents have suffered considerably by making the trip in the cold weather and on rainy days. Father Harrington will await Archbishop O'Connell's return from Europe for his approval of the parish boundary lines.

The Glenmere parish makes the second to be set off from St. Joseph's. Several years ago the parish of Swampscott was formed and now has a large congregation.

The members of the Father Mathew T. A. Society of Lynn are to renovate their building on Summer street. This organization is one of the largest of its kind in the State, among the charter members being Mayor William P. Connery and Timothy Donovan, the present treasurer of the organization. In November a ladies' auxiliary was organized.

Edward Vallerand, former president of St. Joseph's T. A. Society, and his family have opened their cottage at Nahant for the season. Next Wednesday evening he will entertain a number of friends at whist.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Katherine Brennan and Patrick Dobbins, both of Lynn. The ceremony was performed by Monsignor Arthur J. Teeling, pastor of St. Mary's Church. Miss Nora Dobbins, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and Michael Brennan, brother of the bride, was best man. David Gavin. The couple are now on an extended wedding tour and upon their return will make their home in Lynn city.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lomasney, who were recently married, have returned from their honeymoon and have taken up their residence at No. 20 Amity street, Lynn.

WINTHROP PARISH TO HAVE A NEW CHURCH

Winthrop Catholics have begun, under the leadership of their pastor, Rev. John H. Griffin, the erection of a commodious church, which is to have a seating capacity of 1,000 people. The present church, a wooden structure, which has done service for nearly a quarter of a century, has been long since outgrown by the needs of the congregation. It has been moved to the rear of the church grounds on Lincoln street, where divine worship will still be held, pending the erection of the new edifice.

Architect Edward Graham has made the plans, which were submitted to Archbishop O'Connell and approved by him. The church is to cost $60,000. Its foundation will be of concrete. The upper walls will be of specially made brick with stone trimmings. Three arched doors will form the front entrance to the church. There will also be entrances on either side, giving complete and easy ingress and egress. In the wall above the front entrances a circular window will be a striking feature. A square tower and belfry will complete the classic exterior.

The church will not be finished for a year, but the pastor intends to have the outer walls up and the roof on before cold weather. Like the church whose successor it is to be, the new building will be dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

The Winthrop parish was founded in 1857, as a mission Chapel in connection with the Star of the Sea parish of East Boston, of which the Rev. Hugh Rose O'Donnell was pastor. Five years ago St. John's of Winthrop was made a separate parish, and the Rev. John H. Griffin, who for seventeen years had been a curate under Father O'Donnell, was made the pastor. Father Griffin celebrated his silver jubilee two years ago. The members of the parish have begun preparations for a lawn party in aid of the building fund, to be held on the Knights of Columbus grounds, toward the end of July.

COMMUNION DAY

Holy Name Society in Brookline Makes Big Gain.

The members of the Holy Name Society of the Church of St. Mary of the Assumption, Brookline, will receive communion in a body this morning at the 9 o'clock mass. The organization has a large membership, and is showing a constant increase in numbers and activity. The high mass at 10 o'clock will be the last of the season for the Summer. Instead there will be low mass, followed by benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The diocesan diploma issued by the Archbishop for competency in examinations of advanced catechism has been secured by the following pupils of St. Mary's Parochial School:

SERMON BY BISHOP FOLEY

Special Service to Be Observed at Dorchester Church.

To-day, the feast of St. Peter, will be especially observed in St. Peter's Church, Dorchester, of which the Rev. Peter Rouxin is pastor. There will be solemn high mass at 11:15 a. m. The sermon will be preached by Bishop Foley of the Philippines for whose mission a collection will be taken up. A special musical program has been arranged by the organist, Miss Catherine Moore, for the choir of forty voices. After to-day the high mass will be discontinued until early fall.

HELP MISSIONS FOR NEGROES AND INDIANS

Collection to Be Taken Up To-day In All Churches of the Diocese.

The annual collection for the negro and Indian missions of the United States will be taken up in all the churches of the diocese on Sunday, July 2. You will kindly announce this collection both on the previous Sunday and on the day on which the faithful of the diocese are asked to contribute their offering for the continuance of missionary endeavor among the negro and Indian portion of the population of our country, and for the maintenance and further development of the charitable and educational institutions which the church and sisterhood established in her efforts to minister with efficiency to the needs of the children of these races and to bring them to a knowledge and practice of the truths of our holy religion.

The self-sacrificing priests and the devoted brothers and sisters who are laboring amid untold privations for the spiritual and temporal welfare of the negroes and Indians are dependent in great measure upon the offerings which the faithful give at this time for funds to continue their fruitful work in training thousands of children to a moral and religious life.

Placed by divine Providences in our midst, both the negro millions and the perishing tribes of the Indians have special claims upon our charity that should impel us to give assistance belonging to them the priceless blessings of the Catholic religion.

We appeal to you, therefore, to contribute as generously as your means will permit to the support of this truly apostolic work, which needs both the assistance of your charity and the help of your prayers to bring countless souls into the one fold of Christ.

By order of the Most Reverend Archbishop.

W. B. FINIGAN,
Acting Chancellor.

PLAN CATHOLIC INSTITUTE.

Judge Brown of East Boston Leads Movement.

Under the leadership of Judge Charles J. Brown of the East Boston District Court, a movement has been begun in the school district for the building of a Catholic Institute, for the accommodation of the numerous religious societies and clubs of that section of the city.

The projected building would contain a large assembly hall, a ball room, several club rooms, office, stores, bowling alleys, bath rooms and lavatories.

Among the East Boston associations that are interested in the movement are: Court C. O. F., Court Fort Sumpter, C. O. F.; Williams Court, M. C. O. F.; Hibernian Hall, A. O. H. and the Holy Name Societies of the East Boston parishes. Also Court M. C. O. F., which is composed entirely of women is also interested in the proposed new building.

HOLD OPEN-AIR FESTIVAL.

Woburn Church People Going to Pinehurst Park.

The open air festival which takes place each year under the auspices of St. Charles Church of Woburn will be held this year at Pinehurst Park. Rev. Father James J. Keegan, as pastor, has charge of the picnic, assisted by Rev. Fathers Fagan and Russell, and a score of active workers.

The general arrangements committee is in charge of the ball games, races, etc. The candy table will be in charge of some industrious workers, who promise some novelties and are confident their table will outrival any other. Ice cream and cake will be on sale and a quantity of home made candy. Besides the usual sports, with all varieties of cake, with lemonade, tonic and other temperance beverages. Dancing will be enjoyed in the afternoon and evening.

Comes to Somerville Church.

Rt Rev. Bishop Anderson has appointed Rev. James A. Shurry, who was recently ordained in St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, to be assistant priest to the Rev Garrett J. Barry, pastor of St. Benedict's Church, Somerville.

SUMMER SCHOOL AT CLIFF HAVEN OPENS

Noted Educators to Address Big Gathering During the Numerous Sessions.

The Catholic Summer School at Cliff Haven, New York, will formally open its twentieth session to-day. The lectures will begin to-morrow and will continue until the close of the school on September 9. The announcement is of especial interest to the Catholic clergy and laity of New England who attend the school in hundreds though not the nearest.

The Reading Circle Sessions, under the direction of John T. Driscoll, is one of the important features of the course. A report is read each morning, the work of the various reading circles throughout the country and plans laid for the furtherance of the work.

Study of Languages.

The classes in French and grammar will be under the direction of Henry Zuk Ph. D. of Heidelberg, Germany. The classes will be graded for the elementary and advanced courses. Professor Candee Beckwer, director of the Gesmmer branch of the Philadelphia Musical Academy, will have much to say to those interested in music. Miss Molly Agnes Geary, formerly assistant at the Dupre School for Dancing of Manhattanville, N. Y., will conduct classes in physical culture and aesthetics.

The social life is one of the most charming features of the school. Whist, musicales, card parties and receptions are held at the various cottages, which establish a feeling of good fellowship.

Life in the Tent.

A college camp is also attached to the grounds where young men students may spend the entire session in tents, living in the open. It is under the direction of the Redemptorist Fathers of Holy Redeemer parish of Yonkers, N. Y. Rowing, boating, swimming and athletic tournaments are the principal diversions of the camp. The programs are prepared under the advice of the Hon. James E. Sullivan, president of the Amateur Athletic Association of America.

The religious services are held in the chapel of the Lake, where a celebration of solemn high mass is celebrated at 10:40 on Sunday, low masses are celebrated hourly from 6 o'clock. There is daily mass and benediction at 9 o'clock. The choral element is held on Sunday and Wednesday afternoons at 4 o'clock.

An exceptionally attractive lecture program has been arranged, including the well known professional lecturers of the world. Special services will be held to procure the services of the Right Rev. Abbot Gasquet of England and Madame Belmont of Germany, the well-known lecturer of liturgical vestments.

Noted Educators Speak.

Among the other prominent lecturers are: Rev. F. P. Tyrnie, S. J., of Fordham University; W. J. Cullen, Ph. D., M. D., of Manning Inst. of Arts and Sciences, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Rev. Michael O'Flaherty, C. S. P., of the Paulist Fathers; Prof. Christ Lanckage and Literature; Miss Helen Gardiner, Ph. D., of Barnard College; Rev. W. A. Kress of Cleveland, O.; Rev. Joseph Schrembs, C. S. P., of Paulist College, Worcester; George Kibbe Turner, editor of McClure's Magazine; Rev. Mc.arthy, Ph. D., of the Catholic University of America; Rev. Thomas Young of Boston college, established by the John Boyle O'Reilly Reading Circle, under the auspices of the president, Miss Mary Agnes Howard, will be the queen of hundreds of boys and girls during the season.

WORK UNDER WAY ON BRIGHTON CONVENT

Architects' Plans for Building Where Laity May Hold Spiritual Retreats.

Ground has been broken for the new convent building of the order of Our Lady of the Cenacle to be located upon one of the highest hills in Brighton and the building has been designed on lines which are calculated to express the conventional idea.

The architects Maginnis & Walsh, have made a special effort to avoid anything of the usual heavy, massive character, which is associated with institutions of this kind. The lines of the building will be graceful while the general decorative character will be straight.

The style will be Gothic of a phase associated with the convents of Belgium and England. One of the characteristic features of this school of architecture is the grouping of multiplied windows. A lofty porch will frame the main entrance. It will be distinguished by five pointed arches. This will be the only part of the building rendered in stone material. The body of the building will be of red brick patterned to give an effective quaintness.

To Hold Retreats.

The erection of only a part of the building is contemplated at this time, representing about one-half the whole area.

The lower floor will contain the reception halls, parlors, kitchen, laundry and culinary rooms. The first floor will contain, several parlors, the dining room, a beautiful temporary chapel and a large consecrator's where flowers will be raised for the altar decorations. The second floor will consist of a series of private rooms and baths, while the third will contain the dormitories. Continuous passages will connect the various portions with the adjacent house of the sisters. The building will be used exclusively for those participating in the retreats. Retreats will be held throughout the year and vary in length from one day to two weeks.

The rapidly growing number of those engaged in the business life to withdraw from their customary activities in retirement and the contemplation of things spiritual has necessitated the erection of a convent where they might absorb the truths of religion under the direction of proficient instructors.

The Order of Our Lady of the Cenacle has fulfilled this long-felt want. The attendance in the Lake, where it was founded, and have raised its fifteenth part of the new building is erected there will be accommodations for seventy women.

The first Sunday of the month is set aside for the society of Christian Mothers, from 9 to 12 o'clock. The second, third and fourth Sundays are for the retreats of the business girls, from 11 to 4 o'clock. On the first Saturday of the month the trained nurses hold their retreat. On the fourth Saturday the teachers hold retreat from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. The celebration of the Blessed Sacrament occurs every day at 6:30, and on Sunday at 7:30 and 10 o'clock.

On the first Friday of the month mass is celebrated at 7 o'clock. It is followed by the solemn consecration to the Sacred Heart. In the same afternoon benediction will be given and the sacred Host elevated for the adoration of an act of reparation.

The first Sunday of the May Religieuse of the Cenacle is to promote the devotion of the Sacred Heart, which they have already spread in the communities where the convents are established.

Plan Garden Party.

Complying with an urgent request the Reverend Mother will set aside a Saturday in the early Fall, for retreats for girls under twenty years of age. This will be held once a month.

The first July 29 by special permission of Archbishop O'Connell, the first garden party under the auspices of the association will be held on the grounds at Lake street, from 10 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. One of the most attractive of spots for an outdoor function, the extensive lawns and fields will be transformed into bowers of beauty by the use of decorated booths and tables. Special attractions will be arranged for the children. There will be a merry-go-round, swings, shooting galleries, gypsy tents, dancing pavilion, and many shady alcoves, grass bassets and various places where the guests may rest. Tables will be used for the furnishings of the new house.

The tables will be placed in convenient places about the grounds. Their arrangement and management will be in charge of the ladies of the association. The table containing the articles will contain many tasteful articles of uncommon selection. Mrs. Alley Flynn will be in charge of the Christmas Table.

Refreshments will be dispensed from the tables representing the Christian Mothers' Association. Fancy articles will also be on sale. The members in charge are: Miss Alphonsus Cronin, Mrs. Mary Bagwell, Mrs. J. Lyons, Mrs. Malcolm McLean, Mrs. E. Mulkern, Mrs. James Sullivan and Mrs. K. Tierney.

The parish of Our Lady of Victory are represented on the committee under the direction of the Misses Burns.

The Dunbar Avenue Association will have a large table. It is under the direction of the following: Mrs. Mary A. O'Rourke, Miss A. Cody, Miss M. F. Lyons, Miss Alice Lyons, Miss Nellie Kelly, Miss C. Cuddihy, Mrs. Katherine Cuddihy, Miss Gertrude Hughes, Miss Theo McGillan, Miss Nellie Reilly, Miss Mary Lyons, Miss Alice Lyons, Miss Ellen Welch.

The candy table will contain a full line of infants' and children's wearing apparel and accessories of the most approved and hygienic material and style. The following professional nurses will be in attendance: Miss Agnes Rogers of the Putnam Hospital staff, Miss Mary Connelson of the Eye and Ear Infirmary, Miss Mary Campbell of the Carney Hospital, Miss Mary Shields, Miss A. Donovan, Miss K. Galvin and Miss Ellen McHugh.

The doll table will be in charge of Miss Alice Buckley and Miss Margaret Twomey.

MELODRAMA DEAD? WELL, WHO SAID IT WAS? BOSTON TO BE THE CORONER IN THE CASE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

MORE than a year ago it was generally conceded that melodrama at popular prices was in the dying convulsion. In fact, there were experts who declared that it was already dead enough for immediate burial.

But even as the mourners stood around and sobbed old Dr. A. H. Woods, whose early fame in the drama was more lithographic than artistic, interrupted the ceremonies to announce that everybody was mistaken—that melodrama was far from dead—that it was only suffering from the mistreatment of its relatives and friends.

Dr. Woods proved his case by showing his own books on a dozen or so sprightly melodramatic attraction from which he had gathered solid profits every Saturday night during the season. Of course, the theatres playing melodrama had been through a bad year—profits were not visible to the naked eye, and everybody concerned, omitting good old Dr. Woods, was unhappy. But the silken voice of the man who could buildhea play from a lurid picture was heard by many, and his words of wisdom tapped so sweetly upon the ear that the melodramatic theatres entered upon another season of hope and longing—and melodrama.

GOOD OLD DAYS FOR THE OLD DOCTOR.

And good old Dr. Woods smiled, and returned to his workshop, which lately threw upon the unsympathetic world such alluring plays as "The Chinatown Trunk Mystery," "The Convict Queen" and "The Bloody Blade." Yes, indeed, those were happy days with A. H. Woods, for by the strange fortunes of the theatrical business, and the simple sharing arrangement by which plays are presented at theatres, it was possible for a theatre to lose $200 a week on an attraction and still leave the promoter of the play in the full knowledge of a comfortable profit for the week.

Mr. Woods has always made money with his melodramatic attractions, but the theatres playing his shows, with but few exceptions, have watched his progress with sad eyes. It has been rough sledding for them, and the season recently closed has not uncovered any encouraging signs to the men who support the theatre end of the game.

George W. Magee, who serves melodrama at the South End, takes the hopeful view that the coming season will yield a better crop of popular priced entertainments.

"Melodrama," he explained the other day, "is all right when you get it fresh and without flaws. Good melodrama is the most popular form of dramatic entertainment, but it must be built about something substantial. Somehow or other the producers of that kind of plays have not kept in touch with the times. I mean they have not shown sufficient progress, either in theme or production, and, naturally, the public isn't developing much enthusiasm over their wares.

Expenses Always the Same.

"Of course the burden falls upon the theatre, for we operate under a fixed expense condition that gives the producer every advantage. The producer can cheapen his shows in a hundred ways, but with the theatre, expenses always have a tendency to increase. If he pushes the Grand Opera House to lose $300 a week, while the attraction playing there would make a handsome profit. That is why Mr. Woods sees the happy side of the situation."

It is probable that with the opening of the new season changes will be made in the character of plays at the Grand Opera House that will settle the melodramatic problem. A higher class of popular priced attractions will be presented, and only such melodramas as show box office qualities. Another change will be the restoration of the old scale of prices. It was found by experience that cutting the prices of admission did not stimulate enough business to make the change satisfactory, and next season the former scale will be resumed.

One of the remarkable features of the melodramatic situation is the inability of those interested to give up hope for its prosperity. Several declining seasons have sounded a warning that has not been heeded. There has always been a well-nourished hope for a glorious future that has never arrived.

A. H. Woods and his brother producers have been the only happy reapers in the ceaseless harvest.

The week at the Castle Square Theatre was a series of happy reunions in which Howell Hansel, who has joined Mr. Craig's company, has learned that he is back among real friends. Mr. Hansel is making the most of his few weeks at the Castle Square by acting as if he enjoyed the job—which must be true, because he has admitted it so many times. He was only a few years ago, before Mr. Craig became an actor-manager, that both men alternated as leading man in the company they were playing in that theatre. Both had their devoted following, as all stock actors have, and with the return of Mr. Hansel to the stage during Mrs. Craig's brief vacation—one of which, by the way, is spent on the friendly side of the curtain—there is little wonder that interest among the patrons at the Castle Square is at white heat.

With the presentation of "The Barrier" to-morrow, Mary Young will return to her place at the feminine head of the organization. The members of the company are praying for a cold wave during this engagement as "The Barrier" is a play of the frozen north, in which Winter raiment is the proper thing. George Hassel, who will not be in the cast, says that he picked this week for his vacation when he discovered that the role likely to be assigned to him required the constant use of a fur coat.

* * *

"The Barrier" has never been seen in Boston.

One of the important news events of the week at the theatres was the completion of final arrangements whereby Lindsay Morison will give "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" at the Majestic Theatre. This delicious American play has never been released for stock and is surrounding Liebler & Co. to permit its production in Boston by Morison is able to offer it for the first time at stock prices. Few plays have ever enjoyed the popularity of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Made up almost entirely of quaint and unusual types it has always held its charm to theatre goers. It is one of the very few American plays that won success in England, where it remained an entire season. It has been said that the success of the play in its tour of the English provinces was due chiefly to a belief that it represented the genuine American in its types. At any rate, English audiences found it as truly amusing and entertaining as thousands of Americans have done.

Unless all signs fails, the first theatre to open its regular season will be the Shubert, where it is expected "Over Night" will be given, beginning July 31. "Over Night" is a farce that was produced late in the season by William A. Brady, and its New York run marked it as one of the season's real hits.

It is also expected that the Tremont Theatre will reopen early in August with Henry W. Savage's "Excuse Me," a farce written by Rupert Hughes that filled the Gaiety Theatre in New York for many weeks. The scenes of the play are laid in a Pullman car.

The Hollis Street Theatre will enter upon a new season with the play with Helen Ware in "The Price" as the attraction.

The opening attraction at the Park will be "The Next Egg," in which Zelda Sears is to be the star. The play had a long run at the Bijou Theatre in New York last season.

Another attraction booked for early production in Boston is "The Red Widow," in which Raymond Hitchcock will be starred. It is a musical piece and will go into rehearsal in August, the first performances of which will be given in one of the syndicate theatres in this city.

THEATRES AND EXCURSIONS

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

"Sweep by Ocean Breezes," the big production in which Mlle. Bronski and Delaney are appearing at B. F. Keith's Theatre, is proving one of the biggest summer attractions that has ever been put on in Boston. The magnificent stage setting, the wonderful harmony of the combined Harvard, Schubert and Weber male quartettes, and the general excellence of the entire program which are changed every week, has made an appeal not only to the musical people of Boston but to the general vaudeville lovers. The surrounding bill will include the Mabelle Fonda troupe of jugglers; Dolan & Lenhart, in a comedy singing, reading act; Marini & Bronski, two Russian dancers; Hennings & Bestini, novelty ville, in a comedy act, the Van Brothers, singing comedians; and Bertboldi's wonderful birds.

Majestic Theatre.

At the Majestic Theatre the coming week Lindsay Morison will present his stock company in Mrs. Carson's well-known famous play "Zaza." It means a good deal to say that this attraction will be given more support than "The Chorus Lady" and "The Man Who Owns Broadway."

This play will be produced by special arrangement with David Belasco, and Manager Morison has given it a most elaborate stage setting. Mr. Morison will be seen in the role of Bernard Dufresne and Miss Gordon will play Zaza. Other members of the company will play as follows: Mrs. Geo. A. Hibbard as Mme. Dufresne, Rose Morison as Mme. Blondet, Edward Nannery as Cascart, Wm. Hasson as Dr. de Brissac, Frank Bolton as Higault, Frankie Urquhson as Joly, Wm. Hibbard as Duclos, Ralph Locke as Blaz, Valerie Valaire as Alice Morel, Miriam Collins as Floriane.

Colonial Theatre.

With the conclusion of the engagement of Ralph Herz in "Dr. De Luxe" last evening another year at the Colonial Theatre came to an end. It started the first of August and ended in July, being the longest in the history of the house. The attraction was a success from the first to the last, and a repeat coming in the week ahead is a fitting offering but one was of a musical nature.

Castle Square Theatre.

"The Barrier," dramatized from Rex Beach's novel of the same name, will be introduced for the first time to the Boston public by John Craig at the Castle Square to-morrow. It is a romantic drama, with its scenes laid in the far north of Alaska. Its characters are Americans, Indians, halfbreeds and Canadians, forming a picturesque group of people. The plot is stirring and contains one love thing raisely accused of murder, and finally acquitted and honored by the very character he himself and his bitter enemy, Howell Hansel, will appear for the second week of his engagement under Mr. Craig's management as Poleon Le Beau, a French Canadian of strong personality and character, and the leading role of Mary Young will be taken by William P. Carleton, who returns to the Craig company for a month's engagement. Mary Young will be seen as the heroine, returning to the cast after a long absence, and several other important roles will be played by Gertrude Binley, Frederick Burpee and Donald Meek.

Globe Theatre.

A big holiday programme has been arranged for the Globe patrons for this week. Tomorrow will be the first Boston appearance of Lillian Doone, the mystic wonder. Miss Doone answers all sorts of questions, odds on numbers not seen by any human being, and startling mind-reading exhibitions. The Bel Canto Trio, an excellent singing organization, will offer a pleasing singing novelty. Delaney and Wohlman comedy acrobats and dancers; athletes, and Cahane and O'Donnell are also billed. Among the motion picture features will be the Pathe Sim of the coronation of King George V. For the Fourth of July the Edison picture, "The Star Spangled Banner," will be most appropriate.

Orpheum Theatre.

This will be a gala week at the Orpheum Theatre. The program for the first three days of the week will be headed by J. K. Emmett and company in the comedy sketch, "Sarah." Harry Thomson is another whose name is familiar to those of the last generation as well as this. He was the originator of the bowery character and has become known to the public as "His Honor, the Mayor of the Bowery." The Rice Brothers, "The Chinaman and the Babe," in comedy horizontal bar act; Leone and Dale, operatic singers; Delaney and Harding, in a planologue and songs; Hickey and Nelson, comedy acrobats; and Buckley Martin and company, in "Stage Door Manager," will complete the bill for the first three days.

The program for the last half of the week will be headed by that unsinkable tu-chief of the army of fun, Press Eldridge. May Elmore will also be featured.

Norumbega Park.

For the first time this season the management of Norumbega Park announces as the attraction in the magnificent open air theatre a musical comedy attraction receiving memories of the delightful weeks of musical comedy last season. The treat for the coming week will be "Vacation Days," said to be one of the best musical comedies that Brother Oti has written. There is more than the average share of tuneful music, bright lines and pretty girls. A special feature for the holiday, July 4, will be a concert all day in the Music Court by the Battery B band of Worcester.

Paragon Park.

The sea lions are a great feature at Paragon Park this season. Manager George A. Dodge went to no little expense to secure them from the famous collections at the Cliff House, San Francisco, and the Catalina Island coast in the Pacific Ocean, where they have been one of the chief sights pointed out to tourists from the start. They are proving such a popular attraction and are watched assiduously by admirers all day and in the evening that the management feels well repaid for its efforts to introduce them for the first time in New England as a permanent amusement feature.

New Palace Theatre.

The New Palace Theatre promises an especially good bill for the coming week. Among the pictures will be shown some interesting photo plays and novelties. There will be special features for the holiday, July 4, and change of program is announced including Dunns and Meridith and Charles Lombard.

Austin & Stone's.

Several new features that are planned to meet with another patrons are announced at Austin & Stone's Museum for this week.

Hub Theatre.

Another banner bill of vaudeville and up-to-date pictures is to be offered at the Hub Theatre to-morrow. To-night the usual concert will take place.

Scenic Temple.

Leaders in an all-star performance is promised for the coming week at the Scenic Temple. Every bill is comedy, music and a program of modern pictures.

Bass Point.

Thousands and thousands of people every year come from all parts of the world to visit historic Bass Point on the broad coast of Bass Point and Nahant line, and the Georgia Beach and the Cape Cod take the people of Boston and vicinity down there in less than an hour.

Providence Trolleys.

One of the delightful ways of traveling between Boston and Providence or Fall River, or by connecting at these points with the boat lines, to New York during the summer, is through the special trolley service operated by the Old Colony Street Railway. Special cars leave Post Office Square daily and Sunday at 8 a. m., and run direct to Providence without change.

Gloucester Trips.

The Gloucester boats are beginning to feel the weight of genuine Summer traffic, which is now coming in one long mass on account of the excellent and refreshing sail along the coast which it gives their passengers. Each week sees the purchases beautiful this season, and the trip is made doubly attractive by the comfortable accommodations on the boats.

Provincetown Trips.

Summer residents and visitors at Orleans, Wellfleet, Truro and other "way down on the Cape" have discovered that the best way to reach their temporary homes from Boston is to take the Bay Line steamship Dorothy Bradford. It is a pleasant and refreshing trip.

Coming Events.

"My Friend from India," is announced as the attraction at the Castle Square Theatre, beginning July 10. Donald Meek will be seen in the title role.

"The Boys of Company B" will be Lindsay Morison's offering at the Majestic Theatre following the engagement of "Zaza."

Among the attractions booked for early appearance at B. F. Keith's Theatre, are Ben Brandt, the careconist; Field Brothers, late of Eddie Leonard's Minstrels; Edwin Holt and company, in "The Mayor and the Manicure"; and Ethel McDonough.

GOWNS TO OUTSHINE CLEOPATRA'S ON WAGE OF BUT $15 WEEKLY

The girl who draws a weekly salary of $15 possesses a wardrobe that would put Cleopatra to shame. Practically every cent she earns is applied to the adornment of her person. Isn't it queer where our sensible, whole-souled New England Girl has flown to? Do you admire the substitute?—From the interview of Miss Marguerite Sullivan, stenographer, condemning what she calls the modern working girl's extravagance in dressing.

STENOGRAPHER TELLS HIGH COST OF DRESS

Wonders Where the Commonsense New England Girl Has Vanished to.

How the high cost of living is supplanted by the high cost of dressing is graphically told by Miss Marguerite Sullivan, a stenographer, who has compiled facts and figures to prove her assertions that the average working girl spends more on clothing herself than she can afford.

"We hear so much these days in regard to the high cost of living," says Miss Sullivan, "that we feel it almost incumbent upon us to curb our hunger. But have you ever stopped to consider the cost of high dressing, about which nothing is said?

"The yearly output of the average working girl for clothes and the customary accessories is appalling. The wage of the office girl to-day far exceeds that of a decade. The girl who draws a weekly salary of $15 possesses a wardrobe that would put Cleopatra to shame.

"Any number of them can exhibit suits for which they have paid $45, hats $25, shoes $5, $4 and $3. Practically every cent they earn is applied to the adornment of their person. Have you noted the quality of the shirtwaist of the average working girl? Five dollars. Yes, indeed. And that is nothing. Only a third of her weekly salary! Then, of course, you could not expect her to wear a suit but with a $5 shirtwaist. Not she. Now, of all the extravagances of the age stockings beat the record. I know a young working girl, drawing a weekly salary of $8, each week she purchases three pair of the finest, thinnest, daintiest stockings at 75 cents a pair. Why doesn't she darn them? What! Wear darned stockings with her $4 pumps. Why, she'd be when her working days are over?

"Two years ago the average working girl purchased clothes with an eye to their durability. She was neat, well groomed and natural. Her clothes were warm, comfortable, modest and attractive. She was, above all, womanly.

"Isn't it queer where our good, sensible, wholesouled, New England girl has flown to? Do you admire the substitute?

Woman Discovers Fortune Hidden by Uncle.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 1.—Searching in the cellar of the residence of Dr. Arthur H. Tiel, at Matteawan, for the hidden wealth of her uncle, William H. Judson, who died in March, Mrs. Tiel discovered more than $40,000 in gold coins and currency in an old chest. The family will tap the walls of the residence and make further search in the cellar.

OPEN CHAUTAUQUA ASSEMBLY JULY 18

List of Speakers and Subjects Selected for Ten Days' Meeting.

In a beautiful grove, with comfortable cottages and tents surrounding it, the Swedenborgian Chautauqua assembly will meet at Montwait, South Framingham, July 18 to July 28.

Rev. A. M. Osgood, D. D., of Boston, will give a series of daily talks upon the "Problem of Pain." He will describe it as a discipline, as a punishment, and will show how it may be a test of character, and how it develops the virtues. He will close with the "Problem of Pleasure."

Dr. George L. Stearns of Melrose will get the cottagers together daily and explain about practical aspects of everyday work. His wife, Mrs. George L. Stearn, will talk to women only on vital questions of health. Birds will be studied in the woods, outlining the camp under the charge of Mrs. H. A. Bray, who has a report on bird culture.

Flowers and their variety and how to cultivate them in a series of practical demonstrations will be described. Abel Stevens, a well-known grange lecturer.

Rev. Loren A. Clevenger of Boston will give his splendid talk on "Is Life Worth Living?"

Homer Hurlburt of Cornu will tell something about the King of Corea and how he lives daily, what kind of food he eats, and his character of the work. Hulbert was confidential adviser to the King for many years.

Frank P. Mason, a boot worker, will describe what it means to be a "scab."

Other speakers will be Colonel W. J. Cossett of the Salvation Army, Rev. Ella Neagle Hoot, Rev. John S. Brant, a temperance worker; Rev. Dr. S. S. Wiegand of Boston, and Thomas Fardon of England. Plays, concerts and entertainments will be given during the week.

SEEK LOWER STEPS.

Clubwomen to Fight for Street Car Changes.

"Of course, the moment the fact was announced that women wanted lower steps on the street cars there were plenty of men to rise in meeting and declare that was the hobble skirt," says one of the prominent Back Bay women in town. "As a matter of fact the demand for lower steps came before the hobble was invented, it will remain until after it has been passed into oblivion. The lower steps are needed badly for the old going to and from them."

Back women all over the State are in earnest and will make this their vacation work. Already a big campaign is under way until a reform is reached. The steps are to be lowered, and the women declare must be no more strap-hanging and the service must be better.

When a woman stands up all the way on a long ride she is not in condition to fares rung on a car that was made to accommodate but few. If she spends a leg or an ankle trying to alight or board a car, under the best of conditions, she is going to make notes and report to her secretary, who will take the matter up with the company.

GREETINGS TO CARLETON.

Elongated Actor Is Again with the Castle Square.

Just at this time of year William P. Carleton invariably joins Mary Young's forces at the Castle Square for a limited engagement. His appearance in "The Barrier" to-morrow will be his third appearance at the Castle Square, and as he is coming just his welcome will be a hearty one. Mr. Carleton is a long-headed young man of six feet two—"a shade over," he would say it—and although he does not pose as a matinee idol, he has been known to more than one occasion to swell afternoon audiences through a sudden influx of admirers.

"'Jim,' is it?' I said.

"'Yes, it is, I say.'

OPEN LYCEUM CLUBHOUSE.

Dedication Exercises to Be Held at Hough's Neck To-day.

The Hough's Neck Lyceum clubhouse at Hough's Neck will be dedicated this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The building is of the bungalow type. It is located on the corner of Manet avenue and Winthrop street, Hough's Neck. The church will be used by the Sig. which is part of St. John's parish guilds.

The clubhouse will be used for whist and dancing parties throughout the year.

The dedication ceremonies will be under the direction of the Rev. John J. Coan. The speakers will include Congressman Curley, Mayor William F. Gaw of Quincy and William P. Noonan. The president, James F. A. Purcell, is the chairman of the committee. Several of the prominent women of the Summer colony will assist. Mrs. Denis D. Driscoll will be in charge of the committee, the members of which have contributed a large American flag.

PROFESSOR SIDIS ASSAILS HARVARD METHODS; OFFERS NEW CHILD TRAINING IDEAS

BORIS SIDIS, M. A., Ph. D., M. D., a psychologist of high standing, connected with Harvard University, in a small book just issued makes a severe onslaught on Harvard and other colleges and schools of the country, and incidentally points out the possibilities in the way of education by citing the example of his remarkable son, who at seven years of age reads Homer and discusses authoritatively the fourth dimension.

"The Philistine and G-aws" is the name of the book, which is crammed with denunciation of the present educational system. Even President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard did not escape the lash of the writer's verbal castigation—or, at least, it is supposed that President Eliot was referred to in this paragraph:

"Not long ago we were informed by one of these successful college magnates, lionized by the office clerks, superintendents and tradesmen, that he could measure education by the foot rule!"

Harvard and other educational circles of the East were amazed when they read this reference palpably to Dr. Eliot's five feet of books.

Professor Sidis's little book has called forth widespread comment and editorial criticism. The general opinion seems to be that the Harvard psychologist is a little too sweeping in his condemnation.

Following are some excerpts from the book, which is published by Moffat, Yard & Co.

Plays Training of Child.

"It is certainly surprising how far of early training is so disregarded, so totally ignored in the education of the child. Not only do we neglect to lay the necessary solid basis in the early life of the child, a solid basis ready for the future structure, we do not even take care to clear the ground. In fact, we even make the child's mind a dunghill, full of vermin of superstition, fears and prejudices—a hideous heap saturated with the spirit of credulity.

"We regard the child's mind as a tabula rasa, a vacant lot, and empty on it all our rubbish and refuse. We labor under the delusion that stories and fairy tales, myths and deceptions about life and man are good for the child's mind. Is it a wonder that on such a foundation men can only build up ideals and religions that forget the simple fact that what is harmful for the adult is still more harmful to the child. Surely what is poisonous to the grown up mind cannot be useful food to the young.

"If credulity in old wives' tales, lack of individuality, of independent judgment, fear, childish deceptions about life and man are good for the child, a solid basis ready for the future structure, we do not even take care to clear the ground. In fact, we even make the child's mind a dunghill, full of vermin of superstition, fears and prejudices—a hideous heap saturated with the spirit of credulity.

Surely what is poisonous to the grown up mind cannot be useful food to the young.

"If credulity in old wives' tales, lack of individuality, of independent judgment, fear, childish deceptions about life and man are considered in adults, why should we approve of all this in the young?

"At home and at school we drill into the child's mind incorrect views of life, of nature and tales, fictions and figments, fables and myths, and degrade the child's mind to the very sources of the child's mind. At home and at school we grind into the child's mind the germs of fatal germs of mental diseases—and moral depravity. We let the child's mind run wild. We feed it to be sown with dragon's teeth which bring forth the whole crop of human miseries, lies—love and admiration of successful liars, and adoration of the brute force.

"From the dragon's teeth sown in their childhood there will later the whole brood of flint-hearted men who will be ready to sacrifice unreservedly, tear one another, to obtain for some greedy Jason, the Golden Fleece, their coveted golden fleece.

Talent and Genius Neglected.

Professor James and myself were ever once upon a visit to a charitable institution for mentally defective. With his clear eye for the incongruities and absurdities of life, Professor James remarked to me that idiots and imbeciles were given the comforts, in the midst of life, while the healthy children, able boys and girls, had to struggle for a livelihood. Children under fourteen work in factories, work at a wage of about seventy-five cents a day, and according to the labor bureaus, the daily wage of the factory girl is twenty-five cents and sometimes falls to nine cents. In many of our large cities students live in the very verge of starvation, freeze in a Summer garret, and work and study by night, even by burning newspapers in the grate. We are charitable and help mentally defective, imbeciles and idiots, while we neglect our talent and genius. We have a blind faith that genius, like murder, will out. We know of successful talent, but we do not know of the great amount of unsuccessful talent and genius that has come to waste. We favor imbecility and genius.

Like the Israelites of old we worship golden calves and sacred bulls, and our daughters learn after the barbaric summer and glitter of the bejeweled, bespangled, overgarmented Aphrodite, worthy of "the smart set." Our college boys admire the feats of the prize fighter and scorn the work of the 'grind.' Our very language and slang is full of the love of the fast and loose. Jeffries and a Johnson. If in the depths of the human soul some solar energy is embibed by really rational beings, and if they are conscious of it, and some miracle happen to visit our planet, he would no doubt turn away in horror.

Education Is Narrow-Minded.

"Our educators are narrow-minded pedants. They are occupied with the dry bones of textbooks, the sawdust of pedagogics and the would-be scientific experiments of educational psychology; they are ignorant of the real vital problems of human interests, a knowledge of which goes to make the truly educated man. Our educators are owl-wise, our teachers are pedants, and all their ambition is the turning out of smooth, well-polished philistines. It is a sad case of the blind leading the blind.—Professor Boris Sidis.

OUR EDUCATORS ARE 'NARROW,' DECLARES PROFESSOR SIDIS

"Business men are no more competent to run schools and colleges than professors are fit to run hotels and theatres. His Harvard argument is specious. A popular scientific journal entered a protest against the valuation of our largest colleges, the department-store trade methods being employed in their case. The popular term, the administrative business superintendent still holds away. Persons the sources of our social life by degrees only—the foundation of our national education.

Education Narrow-Minded.

"Our educators are narrow-minded pedants. They are occupied with the dry bones of textbooks, the sawdust of pedagogics and the would-be scientific experiments of educational psychology; they are ignorant of the real vital problems of human interests, a knowledge of which goes to make the truly educated man.

Professor James in a recent address told the Radcliffe graduates that the aim of a college education is "to recognize the good when we see it, and to love it." Practice may be good for Radcliffe young ladies, but it is nothing else. The aim of education of life is the recognition of evil and the love of it.

"Our educators are owl-wise, our teachers are pedants, and all their ambition is the turning out of smooth, well-polished philistines. It is a sad case of the blind leading the blind.

"It is certainly unfortunate that the favored type of superintendent of our public education should be such a type as that of the successful executive of all the concoit of the mediocre business man. Routine is to be encouraged, originality to be suppressed and suppressed. Our school superintendents and their well-trained assistants are very proud of the fact that there is no place for originality in schools.

"Unfortunate and degraded is the unfortunate child who is born over the heads of our youth to guidance and control by hidebound mediocrity. Our school systems are respected by the laity as great educational machines which put the children in some able business men. Their merit is routine, discipline and the killing of cheap psychological dogma.

"It is certainly a great misfortune for the nation that a good number of our would-be scientific pedagogues are mechanicians, with no slenderl an exaggeration of their importance that they are well satisfied if the mass of their pupils turn out exact reproductions of the silly pedagogue. What can be expected of a nation that entrusts the fate of its young generation to the care or carelessness of young girls, to the ire of old maids, and to petrifying officials with their educational red tape, discipline and routine.

"Our schools brand their pupils by exactly the same methods as penitentiaries and reformatories. Our colleges measure the knowledge and equipment of their students by the number of 'points' passed. The student may pass in Greek, in logic or anatomy, it does not matter which, provided he makes up a certain number of 'points.'

Originality Is Crushed.

"We school and drill our children and youth in schoolma'am mannerism, school master mind-ankylosis, school superintendency, school-inspectorship, school rules, regulations and office discipline. We give our pupils a machine-like routine of life, love of knowledge, love of truth, love of art and beauty, love of nature and you arouse man's genius. We have no room for genius in our schools, no room for originality. Our schools are mediocre teachers, department-store superintendents, clerks' principals and cashiers' bookkeepers' souls, because our schools and colleges discipline and routinize everything.

"In the large majority of children, however, the period of genius is between the second and third year. It is still a question of fact, but all the facts point in this direction. Our educational methods are wrong to the child. We seem at that early age to be afraid that the child's genius will persist through life. The child will as eagerly play in the mire of dirt as it will spend the most of his energies in meaningless games and objectless activities.

"As fathers and mothers it may interest you to learn of one of those boys who were brought up in the love and enjoyment of mathematics, and who could at the age of twelve, when other children of his age were playing the game of tag, solve with a miserable mental existence at the age of twenty-two, and who could now, when the boy is intensely enjoying courses in logic, philosophy, psychology, history and astronomy at one of our foremost universities. The fact is stated from first hand, known to him by heart, and he is deeply interested in the advanced work of Class '15.

Hopeless, Chinese Philistinism.

"He is able to read Herodotus, Aeschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, Aristophanes, Thucydides, and modern writers with the same zest and ease as our schoolboy reads his Nick Carter stories. He is as familiar with Cooper or Henty. The boy has a fair understanding of Cosmogonies and Theogonies. He is well versed in Greek mythology, logic, ancient history, logic, ancient history, he has already thought into our political life and into the groundwork of our social system. He has a touch of an extremely happy disposition, brimming over with fun and humor. His mental condition is splendid, his cheeks glow with health, and he could pass for a boy of fine complexion. Being about five feet four he towers above the average boy of his age. His physical constitution, weight, form and strength are superior to that of the ordinary schoolboy. He looks like a boy, a general boy, a healthy, strong and sturdy.

"I look forward into the future we begin to see that the school is coming under the control of the medical man. The medical man free from superstitions and prejudices, with a knowledge of the mind and body, is to assume in the future the supervision of the education of the young.

"The schoolmaster and the professor's are with their narrow-minded, pedantic pseudo-psychologies and pseudo-pedagogics are gradually losing prestige and passing away. The medical profession alone is able to cope with the serious psychological danger of national mental degeneration. Just as the medical profession has come to the rescue from physical degeneration of the body-politic, so with the medical profession of the future assume the duty of saving the nation from mental and moral decline, from degeneration into a people of fear-possessed, mind-ridden psychopathics and neurotics with other hands with crushed individualities on the one hand, accompanied, on the other hand, by the still worse affliction and incurable malady of self-centering mediocrity and a hopeless, Chinese philistinism."

JESSE POMEROY'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Life Convict Says He Confessed Killing Curran Girl to Clear Mother and Brother.

In Strange Prison Story Covering Many Years He Analyzes Testimony at Trial.

IN the second instalment of the remarkable autobiography of Jesse Pomeroy, the notable life prisoner in the Charlestown State Prison, Pomeroy tells why he confessed that he cut the throat of Katie Curran, a little girl whose body was found in the cellar under the store formerly kept by his mother.

Pomeroy was locked up charged with killing a boy named Millen when the body of the girl was found, four months after her strange disappearance. Jesse Pomeroy's mother and brother were arrested for the crime. In his autobiography the life prisoner declares that he declared that he killed the girl to clear his mother and brother—not believing, of course, that they did it, and realizing that he might "just as well lose his life for stealing a sheep as a lamb;" that is, that he might just as well confess to the killing of two persons as one.

Pomeroy reviews with the grasp of a strong legal mind his arrest, his treatment by the police and the evidence against him which resulted in his being found guilty of murder in the first degree. The second instalment of his own story follows:

SECOND INSTALMENT.

In the fifth day of May, 1873, about 90 boys of the school got away. The way it occurred was this: In the closed yard where the boys play is an arch that leads out into the new yard, so-called by the boys. It is closed by two doors, one iron, the other a stout wooden one about a foot in thickness. Some way or other, the officer left the gates unlocked, and on Monday morning the boys found it out, so as they were coming out of breakfast the larger boys made a rush for the gates and got out into the new yard and then into the fields.

Of course, the boys behind the foremost ones pushed out to see what all the noise meant, and then they were pushed by those behind; so that 90 of them succeeded in getting out, but the majority were captured that same day.

I was in the hospital that day, and after the boys got out was glad of it; for I think for if I had been down there I would have gone too. It was for my not going and for my conduct in the hall while I had been there, that on the 25th of May, 1873, I was promoted into the highest place—the front part; also into the Honor Grade. I state the front part without meaning the whole of it was in the part called the kitchen, or the place where the food is prepared.

But all things have an ending, and on the 6th day of February, 1874, I departed—not without some regret, for my residence there had been I could say almost all pleasure—for home—where I arrived at five or six in the evening. My friends were all glad to see me, I them, and I anticipated I should have a season of peace, none of that I was free. But the peace was broken up will be seen in the sequel.

In looking back on my career at Westboro, without intending to praise myself, I can see but few things to censure. I never was punished while there in any way, shape or manner; a thing few of the boys can say. Nor in my being promoted, first, from the chair shop, next from the hall, and to home; it shows, that I was a good behaved boy.

Now, it is very singular, is it not, if I was of the cruel nature or disposition—as the other side think me—that the officers at Westboro did not detect it, isn't it? But enough of this supposing. I shall consider all events from February, 1874, to December 8th, 1874, and then the review of the testimony, both at the trial and hearing, and then last of all, make the final consideration of the points that the other side urge that I did those things out of a spirit of cruelty.

Takes a Paper Route.

At the time I came home I determined to conduct myself so that no one would have any chance to complain of me, for I knew that as the police chief I did those things, that they would keep watching me, hence my resolution.

At this time my mother and brother kept a store on Broadway, No. 327, the sole trade consisting in tobacco, while Charles kept the newspaper part. My mother also did dressmaking. Charles owned a newspaper route in the city, also one in South Boston; and whose number of customers exceeded 250; I think we also sold daily and weekly papers at the store.

Well, I took what was called the 3 o'clock route in Boston, also part of the 5 o'clock called the South Boston branch, number of customers about one hundred, papers commencing then for some customers took two, and I used to sell some on way home. After I had been home about four days I set out to learn the names of the customers and the papers they took, and, in fact, all I could that would facilitate my getting them by and by in a few days I learned all about it, and was to carry my papers without any help from Charles.

But I will not linger longer over that any more than will hasten to a point that marks another event in my life.

After I had been home about forty days there was excitement in South Boston, occasioned by the mysterious disappearance of a young girl named Katie Curran.

The first I ever heard of it was the night I was at home, as I was carrying my papers to a house on Fourth street. I think it was Mr. O'Neil, who came out on the door, and said: "That's very strange, isn't it, about the disappearance of that girl?" To which I replied, "What girl?" He asked me if I had not heard of the disappearance of Katie Curran. I told him no, and that I knew of it not.

Then he told me that a girl had been missing from South Boston since yesterday morning, and that it was supposed she had been kidnaped. That was all he said, and that was the first I knew of it.

Katie Curran Disappears.

And you will recollect that in a few days it came out that the girl had started from her home to go and buy some things at Tobin's, where she was last seen, and that a little boy had seen a carriage drive up the street and take and put Katie in. She was crying and it was generally thought that her father had sent her to a convent or some other place; I have forgotten what was then said,

"I noticed on the other side of the street another park, and in it sets a white statue, but I have forgotten what

You will please to bear these facts in mind, as I shall refer to them again, as they formed a particular part of my confession. A week or some time after the girl had disappeared, a reward of $500 was offered for any information about her. As it did not concern me any, I never thought about anything. I believe, till after the body was found in the cellar of our store.

But I am going ahead too fast. I continued at my daily work of carrying papers, as usual, and nothing worthy of record happened till the 23d of April. On that day a small boy was murdered on the South Boston marsh. Somehow—I have never been able to find a reason unless it be mere suspicion—suspicion fell on me, and at

"I returned to mother and said: 'Don't fret, mother, I haven't done anything, so don't fret.'"

10 o'clock that same night, just as I was going to bed, two gentlemen came to see me. I came down stairs, and they took me into the parlor alone, and I told them this:

"I got up at 6 o'clock in the morning, ate my breakfast and then went over to the store, swept it out, and at half-past seven I went to Boston to the New England News Company and got my weekly papers, and got home about twenty minutes of nine, went directly to the store and stayed there until half-past eleven, dusting tables, one was uncovered, the other closed up. I noticed on the other side of the street, another park, and in it was a white statue, but I have forgotten what it represented.

Being late, about 1:30 o'clock, I started for Fresho's dining room, went up Beacon street, across the Common, and I noticed the dome of the State House was painted gold over, Tremont street, down Bromfield street, where I noticed the statue of Franklin in City Hall yard, down to Washington street, down Water into Congress, then into Fresho's. It was then between 1:45 and 2 o'clock. Charles gave me my money to get the checks for my papers. I went into the Traveler office, and of the boys reading there bought thirty-nine checks for my papers. Then I thought, as it was early, I would go down to the market and see if I could see my father and get him to get me some dinner, went down there but I could not find him.

As I was going through the main door, just where the clock is, I met Mr. Ira Nay. He is one that I have papers for at the corner of Pearl and Congress streets, or of Franklin and Congress streets, I have forgotten which. He said: "Hullo, you down this way?" I said: "Yes."

Then I went out of the corner of North Market and Commercial streets, and just as I got there, I saw two gentlemen that used to be in Snowdon's flour store. They had red whiskers and went up North Market street. Then I hurried back up to the Traveler office, up Kilby street to Devon. I waited until 2:45 o'clock and got my papers and exchanged them up in No. 70 State street to the real estate office of Kilby and some one else and company.

Then I went up to the Journal office and met Charles. Took my other papers, and then I started about 3 o'clock to carry my 5 o'clock papers. I carried them and got back, and went to Mr. Virgins' shop on Federal street, and I met Charles there, and he was just going after the Heralds. I got them at about 3:45 o'clock. Father asked me why I had not come down at the time marked and get dinner. I told him that I thought I would not that day as I wanted to go to the Common.

Starts for Home.

"I folded my papers and started about quarter or half past four for home. I got down to the corner of Dorchester avenue and Broadway just as the clock struck five. Then I carried the rest of my papers and got up at the store at a quarter past five. I carried the store and got through at about half past six, my usual time.

"Now, I did not tell these gentlemen all of this, but as I was telling you the story of my whereabouts that day I thought I might tell it over for any time. This gentleman, after having asked me a number of questions, said he wanted to go down to the station so that he could consult a third party. I turned to mother and said: "Don't fret, mother, I haven't done anything; so don't fret.'

"I think that the man said I could come back next day. Then C. went down with me. They took me to the station and took off all my clothes except my pants, but gave me them all back again except my outside shirt. They asked me where my vest was. I told them my mother said they wanted to know where my knife was, and I told them it was in my vest. Then they took my boots and asked me what made them so muddy. I told them walking so much. They kept me up till two in the morning.

"All this time I had not the slightest idea of what I was arrested for. In the morning I was taken down to the cell door and hollered out: 'You are guilty and will be shut up for a hundred years.' Then they laughed and went away. In the morning I was taken up stairs and in the presence of several magistrates Mr. Savage told me I was arrested for the murder of Katie Curran on the marsh. I don't know what I said then. I know I was very much excited.

Then Mr. Wood and Dearborn asked me if I did not kill H. H. Millen. I told them "No." They said it would be better for me to confess, and in the way they kept talking to me, first one and then the other. At last I said I might have done it. They winked at that. I was so frightened I resolved to say it so as to get rid of them. I did not know, hardly, what I was saying.

Then they told me I was to go to see the body. I supposed they meant to the boy's house, and as I do not like to see a dead person, and as the men had been telling me horrible stories how it looked, I got my nerves all unstrung, but I went to the place where the body was in a certain stone street, Roxbury. I went and looked at the body in between the glass doors.

The man said I trembled. I don't doubt it, for I never saw such a sight before in my life. The poor little boy was laid there with his throat cut.

But I need not describe his appearance. Enough to say it was awful. The man took up the little boy's cap and asked me if I had ever seen it before. I told him "No," and his story of MY CONFESSING IS A LIE FROM BEGINNING TO END, and he knows it, or at least, if I did say it, I have no recollection of it, and I do not believe I said I did it.

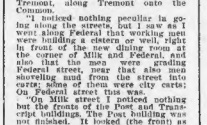
To be continued in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

"Just where the clock is I met Mr. Ira May. He said: 'Hello, you down this way?'"

12. I thought to myself, now it is so long since I went onto the Common that I guess that will be going to get any more dinner, I will go there, so I walked along Broadway and up Federal street to Washington, up Washington to Washington, up Bromfield onto Tremont, along Tremont onto the Common.

"I noticed nothing peculiar in going along the streets, but I saw as I went along Federal that working men were building a cistern or a well in front of the new dining room at the corner of Bromfield Federal, and also that the men were grading Federal street, that also men were shoveling mud from the street into carts; some of them were city ones. On Federal street this was.

"On Milk street I noticed nothing but the fronts of the Post and Transcript buildings, both Transcript was not finished. It looked (the front) as though it was one of the towers, and it was painted a dark brown or dull red, and just over the place where I thought the door must be, was a small projection which looked like a balcony;



"Mr. Hoag and Dearborn asked me if I did not kill H. H. Millen. I told them no."

under it, in just the kind of letters the Globe is headed with, were the words in raised letters, 'Boston Post.' I think the letters are yellow German.

"The Transcript had nothing peculiar about it, except near the top was a slab let into the wall, with the inscription on it of Boston Transcript, February—1874; but then I do not consider that anything I noticed was peculiar.

"I noticed nothing on Washington or Bromfield. On Tremont I noticed that men were digging up on the left hand side, going towards the Common—preparatory to laying down trees. I were working towards Scollay square; when I saw them I think they were between Winter and Bromfield streets. I also stopped and looked in Southmayd's candy store, which is situated at the corner of Bromfield and Tremont streets.

"I crossed straight over to the side that the burying ground is on, and looked in and saw the grave of Franklin, which was not near the front but back a little way. It had simply the word Franklin on it in raised letters. Then I went along past Park Street Church. I noticed it had a number of large stone steps leading up to it, in almost the form of a crescent or semi-circle.

"The man said I trembled, I don't doubt it, for I never saw such a sight before in my life."

"Then I crossed to the Common, and sat down on a stump of a tree which was covered, I should think, with grass. What I noticed there was that the side of the fence on Tremont street had been taken away, that some of the walks were covered with tar, or something that looked like it, that some of the walks were covered with boards, and that the sparrows' houses up in the trees were painted a brown color, except the windows, which were white; that the large fountain (called Brewer's) was uncovered, but had not been playing while I was there.

"After resting a few minutes, I started and walked down to the big elm. It was surrounded by an iron fence, and on the gate was an inscription something like this: 'This tree is—years old. It was nearly destroyed by a storm.' Then it gives the name of the mayor of the city when the fence was put around it, also the date of the year. The tree was very old, I should think, from its appearance. It had canvas wrapped around it, and iron braces to hold the limbs.

"Then I walked along until I came to the frog pond; the fountain was not playing when I was there, though the pond was full of water. I did not stop here; I noticed a little round house on my left hand side and walked toward that large hill near the pond; the house was painted green and there was a flag pole on the side of it; the house was surrounded by painted pickets. I passed right over that large hill, noticed that where the walk was it was covered with tar, just like some of the walks near the Tremont street side; and went down by the parade ground. There were some boys playing ball there.

"Then I went over to the Public Garden and passed through the fence. I noticed in the doorway of the hothouse a large plant. I do not know what the name of it was, but it was in a large tub which was painted green, and had the top of it cut down. Then I passed to the bridge; just as I got there I noticed that the swans were in the pond, but I have forgotten whether or not the fountain was playing. There were a lot of children near the pond.

In the Market District.

"I noticed just opposite the pond the statue of somebody; it was made of bronze and the man had his right hand stuck out, while the left was in the folds of his coat; then right near the bridge, looking up Boylston street, was the statue of Washington on a horse, his right hand lifting his hat, his left hand holding the reins of his horse; near it were two small fountains, one was uncovered, the other closed up. I noticed on the other side of the street, another park, and in it was a white statue, but I have forgotten what it represented.

Being late, about 1:30 o'clock, I started for Fresho's dining room, went up Beacon street, across the Common, and I noticed the dome of the State House was painted gold over, Tremont street, down Bromfield street, where I noticed the statue of Franklin in City Hall yard, down to Washington street, down Water into Congress, then into Fresho's. It was then between 1:45 and 2 o'clock. Charles gave me my money to get the checks for my papers. I went into the Traveler office, and of the boys reading there bought thirty-nine checks for my papers. Then I thought, as it was early, I would go down to the market and see if I could see my father and get him to get me some dinner, went down there but I could not find him.

As I was going through the main door, just where the clock is, I met Mr. Ira Nay. He is one that I have papers for at the corner of Pearl and Congress streets, or of Franklin and Congress streets, I have forgotten which. He said: "Hullo, you down this way?" I said: "Yes."

Then I went out of the corner of North Market and Commercial streets, and just as I got there, I saw two gentlemen that used to be in Snowdon's flour store. They had red whiskers and went up North Market street. Then I hurried back up to the Traveler office, up Kilby street to Devon. I waited until 2:45 o'clock and got my papers and exchanged them up in No. 70 State street to the real estate office of Kilby and some one else and company.

Then I went up to the Journal office and met Charles. Took my other papers, and then I started about 3 o'clock to carry my 5 o'clock papers. I carried them and got back, and went to Mr. Virgins' shop on Federal street, and I met Charles there, and he was just going after the Heralds. I got them at about 3:45 o'clock. Father asked me why I had not come down at the time marked and get dinner. I told him that I thought I would not that day as I wanted to go to the Common.

Starts for Home.

"I folded my papers and started about quarter or half past four for home. I got down to the corner of Dorchester avenue and Broadway just as the clock struck five. Then I carried the rest of my papers and got up at the store at a quarter past five. I carried the store and got through at about half past six, my usual time.

"Now, I did not tell these gentlemen all of this, but as I was telling you the story of my whereabouts that day I thought I might tell it over for any time. This gentleman, after having asked me a number of questions, said he wanted to go down to the station so that he could consult a third party. I turned to mother and said: "Don't fret, mother, I haven't done anything; so don't fret.'

"I think that the man said I could come back next day. Then C. went down with me. They took me to the station and took off all my clothes except my pants, but gave me them all back again except my outside shirt. They asked me where my vest was. I told them my mother said they wanted to know where my knife was, and I told them it was in my vest. Then they took my boots and asked me what made them so muddy. I told them walking so much. They kept me up till two in the morning.

"All this time I had not the slightest idea of what I was arrested for. In the morning I was taken down to the cell door and hollered out: 'You are guilty and will be shut up for a hundred years.' Then they laughed and went away. In the morning I was taken up stairs and in the presence of several magistrates Mr. Savage told me I was arrested for the murder of Katie Curran on the marsh. Send for the Proverb Book and Back Numbers and Get in Line for the $10,000.00 in Prizes Free in the American Great Proverb Contest—Start Anytime!

1st Prize: $2500.00 Seashore Bungalow
999 OTHER PRIZES

WHAT! Does anybody still hesitate to enter the AMERICAN'S $10,000 Proverb Contest—that is, to enter the door of OPPORTUNITY?

They say that OPPORTUNITY knocks only once at each man's door.

(Forgive the phrase, for the Contest Editor has proverbs on the brain), but this opportunity does not knock, it "Boosts."

$10,000 in magnificent prizes! Is not that worth working for?

It is. Right!

But you don't have to "work" for these prizes—there is no "work" to it. It is a pleasure.

The puzzle pictures are fascinating, and, once started, it is nothing but fun to spend a few minutes in finding the solutions. Everybody can solve these puzzle pictures with a little thought and diligence. They are essentially simple. And when you understand thoroughly that it costs nothing to enter, and that entering places you in line for the winning of a $2,500 Seashore Bungalow, or one of the trim Runabout Automobiles, or one of the High Grade Motor Boats, or one of the beautiful pianos, or one of the other rich rewards—when you realize this, can there be any reason for hesitating to become a contestant?

May we urge one precaution on the part of contestants, however? It is this: Keep a copy of each solution that you send in at the close of the contest. If each contestant will keep a list of solutions, so that he or she may compare the list with the correct solutions that will be published in the AMERICAN at the close of the contest, many misunderstandings will be avoided. Such as contestants declaring that they "had a certain number of answers right," and that they "don't understand why they did not win a prize." Past experience shows that after looking up the sets of answers at the cost of great labor to the Contest Department, it has been found invariably that the writers of such letters had from two to ten or more erroneous answers than they thought they had.

Any contestants who have not yet ordered a PROVERB BOOK should do so at once.

The PROVERB BOOKS are immensely popular among contestants, handily arranged, and attractively and neatly bound. The 3,000 or more proverbs, including all that will be represented by the picture puzzles in the contest, are extremely interesting and useful.

In case a contestant is in doubt about a puzzle picture, he or she knows that the correct solution is somewhere in the PROVERB BOOK, and if necessary the whole book can be run through in a search for the correct solution.

By sending a money order for 25c to the "Proverb Contest Editor, Boston AMERICAN, 275 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.," anyone may obtain a copy of the PROVERB BOOK. The sooner candidates are equipped with this book, the sooner they will be able to intelligently proceed in the contest.

Order your PROVERB BOOK to-day.

The back numbers of all pictures which have appeared from the beginning of the contest are on hand at the Contest Department.

These back numbers enable anyone who desires to do so to enter the Proverb Contest at any time.

They will be mailed to any address on receipt of the regular rates of the AMERICAN for the days on which they were published (plus return postage).

That is, Sunday back numbers are 5c each (plus return postage), and daily back numbers are 1c each (plus return postage).

Conditions of the Contest Read Carefully

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the winners. Every one living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, but each person is privileged to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in writing in longhand either with pen or pencil; they may be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Participants in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the American will not debar any one from entering the contest.

Each contestant or any or all members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each set must contain only one answer to each picture. Each set will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employes of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

In case there are no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made on the basis of neatness and exactness of the sets, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not send your answers one by one. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers before an advertisement announcing the first picture is printed will not be considered.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in which the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or by messenger, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass.

In case contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupon is desirable, but not necessary.

The Editor of the PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

THE UNKNOWN LAND

"Like sheep they are laid in the grave; death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling."

Of All Life's Tragedies the Most Dreadful and Cruel Is the Mother's Good-By to a Dead Child. How Fortunate That Simple Faith Has Softened the Blow for So Many Millions of Mothers.

THERE is one mystery in this brief line, and that mystery is DEATH.

What we call history is a long procession of human beings reaching thousands of years back into the ages —an endless procession arriving on this earth, active, hating, loving, accumulating, striving for a moment, and then going back into the earth from which they came.

In the sight of Time our lives are as brief as the light that a firefly shows on a Summer night. Each of us has one spark of life, and that goes, and then Death and the mystery of the unknown.

♠ ♠ ♠

It is strange how rarely human beings discuss death, how rarely they think of it, how little the mind dwells upon the one great fact that confronts all of us—death and the end, AND DARKNESS.

A few of us fear death—we cannot bear to think of it, or talk of it. A great majority forget it, ignore it. Even the old look upon death as a distant, far-off thing, with scarcely any real meaning for them.

Yet death is, in reality, THE ONLY ABSOLUTE CERTAINTY, and the thought aroused by contemplation of death is the most serious and intensely interesting that can be conceived.

Millions of millions of human beings have appeared on this earth. Endless thousands of millions more will come and go.

Each struggles for his little day, plans, hopes, fights, falls, or succeeds. Then comes death, "and the rest is silence."

Certainly this long sleep, this night that ends our earthly struggle, this parting from the body and mysterious departure, may well be discussed by all of us, and often. So we invite the readers of our Sunday newspaper to think of death, and talk of it, but in a spirit of hope, or of intellectual curiosity—not with any morbid fear unworthy of a man, or even of an intelligent child.

♠ ♠ ♠

The very striking picture on this page, based upon a beautiful painting by an English artist, and called "The Unknown Land," illustrates death in its most tragic, dreadful and cruel form—the taking of a young child from the mother.

Of all the suffering in the world, none has equalled or even approached the suffering of the mothers that have put their young children into the grave. Millions of mothers go through that agony upon this earth EVERY SINGLE YEAR. Every child's death is a fearful tragedy, a spiritual crucifixion. Only the mother of a child can know what it really is.

When you think of the death of children and the suffering of mothers, the apparent frightful injustice, the cutting off of young lives, tender flowers that have scarcely begun their existence, you appreciate above all the wonderful power of religion, the consolation of FAITH.

A cold-blooded English philosopher, asked what he thought about God and a Creative power, replied, "I have no need of that hypothesis." He was wrong. Nearer to the truth was the saying of the cynical Frenchman: "If there had been no God, it would have been necessary to invent one."

The world would indeed have been a black and dreary place for humanity, and for the mothers whose children are taken from them, but for faith, and the hope and confidence that faith gives.

Those that have fed the earth's population have been benefactors of men, and benefactors also were those that clothed their fellows, taught them and protected them from cruelty. But the greatest benefactors of all have been the religious teachers—the great spiritual leaders that have given to humanity religion, faith that answers the question that death calls forth in simple minds.

Important above all to humanity have been the consolation and the hope that religion has given to women that have seen their children suffer and die.

But that is not the end of the Psalmist's thought, for he says: "But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave; for he shall receive me."

There are in this world all kinds of minds, all grades of intellectual power, all sorts of faiths, simple and complex.

There is the man of intellect who realizes that justice MUST rule in a universe so marvellously conducted. There is the simple mind that sees just above the clouds a heaven of solid gold and precious stones. There is faith of some kind in every human being, in the agnostic, and even in the atheist. The latter has faith in himself, and has made of himself and of his own intelligence a sort of a preposterous god.

But in all the world, and among all the different faiths, the different religions, and the different degrees of faith, varying with the individuals in each religion, the most fortunate, the most blessed, is the simple faith which makes the mother feel that the child she lays away is happier than it would have been, that it enters at once into the presence of God, that it dwells with the other children of whom it is said "their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in Heaven."

The sufferings that have been inflicted upon women in this world would have been too horrible to contemplate, and worthy of a fiend blacker than any ever painted, if it were not for faith that tells the mother that she will see her child again, and that that which appears cold and brutal is part of a system of justice and love beyond her comprehension.

There is no human being more cruel than the man who deliberately plans to deprive another of religious faith. No man—even the most brutal—would, if he understood his action, take from women the hope and confidence that are their only consolation.

To add to the KNOWLEDGE of men, to increase their power of thought and discrimination, is one thing—and a good thing. To take away faith, without supplying knowledge and strength of character, is brutality and cruelty. Millions and millions of mothers have actually believed that they could see what this mother sees in the picture, an angel taking a child to realms of eternal happiness, where the child will wait for the mother to come, and know it.

Who would disturb such a mental picture, who can help rejoicing that the picture has consoled millions of mothers in the past and will console many millions in the future?

♠ ♠

The great orator, Burke, old, bitter and disappointed, lost a son to whom he was passionately devoted. He expressed the thought of millions of human beings, in the cry from his heart when he heard of the boy's death, "What shadows we are, what shadows we pursue!"

When we realize what death means, life and this world do seem but shadows.

You sit with this newspaper in your hand, your eye follows the line, and your mind follows the train of thought that comes as you look upon this picture. Everything seems solid and substantial. You take the paper up and put it down. You can move here or there, chop down the tree outside the window, dig a hole in the ground, travel around the earth, talk to your friend at a distance with magic power over the wire—OR WITHOUT A WIRE.

And before the earth shall have turned on its axis many more times, you and the paper and all that you have thought will disappear—and nothing will be left, except what you may have added to the knowledge of human beings.

♠ ♠ ♠

A man should think of death, in order to stimulate himself to better work, and harder work, during the short life that remains.

He should think of death fearlessly, actually BELIEVING that there is no real death; that the so-called death which makes everything else seem unreal is itself unreal and has no existence.

The body disappears. This solid earth itself will disappear in its time, the stars and planets that surround us will all lose their shape and dissolve like the body which we inhabit.

But the power BACK of the stars, and the power back of the thought in your brain and THAT THOUGHT ITSELF CAN NEVER DIE. And that is the only real thing.

To think about death, to wonder why the life of man, which is necessary to the cultivation of this planet, is snuffed out at frequent intervals, is interesting, intellectual work, worthy of any man.

It is interesting to believe, as some do, that death came because the first man and the first woman sinned. And that therefore we have gone on dying ever since.

It is interesting also to believe that death is inevitable, because our material brains can receive only so many impressions, because the impulse of life with which we begin our careers can last only so long, because death is necessary to wipe out the writings of a lifetime that cover the slate of the mind, and to bring us back here with a clean slate to begin at a new point in human knowledge.

The thoughts of other men and of past ages concerning death are intensely interesting to the serious man, showing as they do the fact that religion itself—as men have created religion—is based upon thoughts of death and largely upon fear of death.

And the various religious systems that have been created by man or revealed to man are revelations of the soul in man, the mysterious force that is studied by all and that eludes all study.

We all die, and each of us answers differently the question: "What happens after death?"

The red Indian told himself that he went off to a happy hunting ground to kill and eat fat bears and buffaloes—and to have squaws as usual working for him.

The Mohammedan believes that he goes to a comfortable heaven not unlike his own harem, and that he lives forever like a first-class pig in a first-class sty.

Can you and do you analyze and understand your own beliefs? Does your thought get away from the material happenings of life occasionally and deal with the absolute facts that confront us, and especially with the great, interesting and exciting fact that where you stand today there will be nothing in a short time; that the body you inhabit will "like sheep" be laid in the grave? There will be white bones, then only dust—and where will YOU be, the real you? Will you be in another world, blissful for eternity, or will you be nothing at all—like a candle that goes out, or will you be back here in another body, continuing as one atom of cosmic consciousness and force humanity's task on this plane?

Whatever you believe, tabulate your beliefs, think over the one great question. Nothing is as exciting as death, nothing as interesting, nothing that promises with such absolute certainty relief from monotony—nothing that ought to cause more pleasant, exciting and hopeful speculation in the mind of a man who realizes that all MUST be well now and hereafter in a universe so marvellously and justly governed.
